Rain and Snow Increase Flood Threat in Canada

Waters Receding in States After Widespread Damage

(By The Canadian Press)

Rain and snow increased the threat of floods in some sections of eastern Canada during the weekend, but the country's two main trouble spots—Medicine Hat, Alta., and Chateauguay Basin, Que., reported flood waters dropping.

At Medicine Hat, in the south-eastern corner of Alberta, army demolitionists took over from the R.C.A.F. in an effort to break a massive ice jam in the south Saskatchewan River that threatened the city.

A two-day aerial assault by the R.C.A.F. in which 5½ tons of explosives were dropped, failed to break the jam. Some five miles from Medicine Hat. Although the aerial bombing smashed temporary openings in the jam, it reformed after each bombing.

The threatened city of 16,000 residents was cheered by word that the river was falling slightly Sunday and that army engineers would begin demolition work today.

Residents of the small mainland community of Chateauguay Basin near Montreal spent the weekend cleaning up after the worst flood to strike the area in 40 years. The waters of the ramparting Chateauguay River, which burst its banks Friday and swept through 30 square feet of the dyke, leaving fifty-populated region, began falling Saturday and continued to drop Sunday.

No Loss of Life

No loss of life was reported, but damage was estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

At Longueuil, Que., where 100 cottage-type homes were flooded when waters from the St. Lawrence River, the water level dropped about six inches Sunday night.

The Saugeen River was also reported dropping at Walkerton, Ont., after flooding parts of the Bruce county town. But at Ottawa, where the Rideau River rose eight inches Sunday, flooding some homes in the southeastern section of the city.

Rain and snow fell over the entire United Lakes watersheds and more rain and snow was forecast for Monday, increasing the danger of flooding. A number of Ontario centres where rivers and creeks already are overflowing, or above normal flow conditions due to the spring run-off.

New York, April 2 — (AP) — Rampaging flood waters in the southern states, Iowa and New England today today today after causing widespread damage to farmlands, homes and roads.

Churning out of the Alabama, Tombigbee, Warrior and Tennessee Rivers, the flood waters farmlands of south Alabama where it was feared crop damage would be severe.

The Tombigbee, Warrior and Coosa Rivers were receding as had crested Sunday in northwestern Mississippi, northern Georgia and northeastern Alabama. The Alabama is due to crest at 48 feet at Selma today, about 1,300 persons were driven from their homes by the swollen rivers in the three-state area, but many returned to their water-soaked houses Sunday.

At least two persons were drowned in southern floods.

Eight inches of rain in Moines and Raccoon Rivers in Iowa meanwhile moved downstream, easing the situation at Des Moines.

The flood at Des Moines claimed the life of Lawrence Cordingley, 31, Iowa's women's gold champion. She was drowned early Saturday when her automobile was swept off a highway near Des Moines.

The situation in the river basin families find 1,000 homes threatened by rising waters but hundreds in most part of the valley was receding, despite light rains Sunday.

The Hudson and Mohawk Rivers in upstate New York were at a moment normal, although forecasters said the runoff of melting snow in the mountains would keep them "threatening for some time."

The Susquehanna, Susquehanna crested Sunday after spilling over banks in low-lying areas in Pennsylvania.

Deline Warehouse Gutted by Fire, Loss is $12,000

Damage estimated at close to $12,000 resulted late Saturday night at the storage warehouse of Bill Deline Ltd., on Coleman Street when fire gutted the south wing interior destroying a quantity of stored stoves, refrigerators and tires.

A passing fireman noticed the fire just before midnight and turned in the alarm but by that time the interior of the structure was already aflame.

Stored tires added to the heat of the flames but firemen were able to prevent the fire going out through the roof of the structure as water was directed onto the blaze from the aerial ladder. Enclosed fire door prevented the flames getting through into the repair garage department to the north. A delivery truck stored in the building was saved.

Heat Terrific

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said the heat of the fire was terrific for burning tires added fuel to the flames. Two heavy steel girders sliding to support the roof of the structure were bent by the heat.

Firemen played three lines of hose into the fire to control the flames which at the height of the fire poured out through windows and doors.

Cause of the fire had not been determined this morning. There was no stove or heating of any nature in the section of the building where the fire started. Damage to the warehouse was expected to amount to nearly $6,000.

Farmers Win Claim for More Compensation

Embattled farmers in this area have won their claim for increased compensation through the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for power lines across their farms.

Nineteen farmers between here and Stirling objected to rates paid for poles and other installations and work. Saturday they got word they'd hoped had agreed to their terms.

Later, a twisted gasoline tank was found. It was recovered and identified as a Canadian headquarters in Montreal.

ADOPT USE

St. Thomas, April 2 — (CP) — Commercial hatcheries in this area have adopted the use of dehydrated sugar beet pulp to protect young turkeys against disease. It is Healthier to Under-eat Than Over-eat Says Expert

Cambridge, Mass., April 2—AP a serious famine existed for a time we found less high blood pressure, less coronary heart disease and less incidence of diabetes and arthritis. All these maladies go primarily with over-eating. Overnutrition can be as serious a problem as undernutrition."

Breakfast, he says, can be the cheapest meal of the day and yet yield one-quarter to one-third of the day's diet needs. He mentioned as examples a bowl of cereal with a fruit bowl near the sugar bowl."

He gives more nutritional value at lower cost than some kinds of cakes and pastries.

Meat from the cheaper fore quarters may yield protein, niacin and B-12 vitamin, and other values as high as the costly steaks, roasts and chops.

RAIL-TRUCK COMPETITION NOT EASILY SOLVED

Gordon Stresses Low Ton-Rate Mile in Talk

Montreal April 2 (CP) — Competition between highway transportation and railways is the "major national transportation problem of this decade," Mr. Gerry Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, said today in a speech to the Canadian Club.

Because inter-provincial highway transportation comes within the jurisdiction of the Board of Transport Commission on Transportation did not directly explore the problem of road-rail competition, Mr. Gordon said, He earnestly hoped that "the public discussion already stimulated by the report will be broadened to take account of the many important facts which lie outside the commission's terms of reference."

Search Continues For Jets Missing After Collision

Sorel, Que. April 2 (CP)—Search planes today continued to search for the bodies of two airmen east of Montreal in an effort to locate two missing jet planes one of which plunged into the St. Lawrence River Saturday. The second plane is also believed to have crashed in the vicinity.

Police and civilians meanwhile, searched the river in small boats and located some debris. It was not immediately possible to determine if any plane the debris belonged.

The two RCAF pilots are believed to have lost their lives in their single-seater, Vampire jets.

The pilots, of the 410 RCAF, City of Montreal Fighter Squadron, were Flying Officer, Sgt. Gordon Lefy Sqdn, Ldr. Guy Hackett, Montreal lawyer, and Flt. Lt. Robert Lapointe, of Montreal.

The two officers were flying in low formation on a training flight and had left St. Hubert airport, near Montreal, to make a sweep down river.

After circling Sorel they headed toward Quebec City on a low thick fog. It was then the accident happened.

Apparently, no one actually saw the planes crash, but several witnesses in the village of Sorel suburb, said they heard a loud noise like something hitting the water.

Later, a twisted gasoline tank was found. It was recovered and identified as a Canadian headquarters in Montreal.

Generals Trying to Be Diplomats Threat to U.N. Unity Says L. B. Pearson

Ottawa, April 2—(CP)—Generals trying to be diplomats are one of the two main threats to United Nations unity at this time in Korea, External Affairs Minister Pearson said Saturday.

"It seems to me to be as unwise, indeed as dangerous, for the generals to intervene in international policy matters as it would be for diplomats to try to lay down military strategy," Mr. Pearson said in an address to the Canadian Bar Association's Ontario section.

Gen. MacArthur, United Nations commander in Korea, has been the subject of considerable controversial comment as the result of statements he has made regarding the conflict in Korea against the communists.

Mr. Pearson, however, did not identify any commander by name. He spoke in general terms of U. N. military and diplomatic relations with country with "conflicting" political pronouncements which go far beyond the military responsibility with which they had been charged.

"The specialist should stick to his specialty. Otherwise undesirable difficulties are created and that whole-hearted co-operation between friends which is so essential is hindered."

The second threat to unity of United Nations action was a feeling of impatience and even irritation in the United States that while they are bearing the brunt of fighting their friends in the United Nations do not give them sufficient backing, even at Lake Success."

"That feeling should be recognized. Such co-operation should also be given to the special responsibility which the United States has accepted and the leadership it is giving in the fight against the communists."

Support did not mean accepting Washington suggestions without question. "It may mean the constructive criticism of, and even opposition to, courses and proposals which we in Canada may think are unwise and concerning which it is our duty to express our views."

Outlining Canada's wishes in the conduct of the Korean campaign, Mr. Pearson said the U. N. should "continue to localize the Korean war and should refuse to be "stampeded" into anything.

The aim should be left open to "every possible opportunity" for settlement.

French President Says West Must Base Defence Strategy On Shielding Western Europe

Washington, April 2—(AP) — President Vincent Auriol of France told Congress today that the country fails before the forces of aggression "the whole world, including civilization itself, will be a mortal danger."

Addressing a special joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives, he said to prevent such a disaster the West must base its defence stategy on "shielding" western Europe against attack.

The alternative, he said, is to "leave the river in small boats and located some debris. It was not immediately possible to determine if any plane the debris belonged.

The two RCAF pilots are believed to have lost their lives in their single-seater, Vampire jets.

The pilots, of the 410 RCAF, City of Montreal Fighter Squadron were Flying Officer, Sgt. Gordon Lefy Sqdn, Ldr. Guy Hackett, Montreal lawyer, and Flt. Lt. Robert Lapointe, of Montreal, Que.

Auriol said that even this five point "peace" program for Russia to accept "if it is sincere" is "the West tenshon:

1. Respect for commitments subscribed to under the United Nations charter.

2. An end to Russia "interfering" in the internal affairs of neighboring countries and a stop to the flow of "daily insults" levelled against these governments.

3. Reconstruction and a rational control of all armaments by the United Nations in order to limit them fairly and later to destroy all classic or atomic weapons."

4. Establishment of controls in all national armies and replacement of the United Nations armies.

5. An agreement providing for the "free movement of wealth, ideas and peoples" and a guarantee of freedom of expression in those countries where regimes "have been imposed by force".

Jamaica Lifts Lid on N.Y.'s Racing Season

New York April 2 (AP)—The horses return to New York —the Big Apple to those in the racing trade—today as Jamaica lifts the lid on the state's 196-day season.

The Paumonok Handicap a $25,000 added affair which traditionally features the opening day, takes the spotlight, but starting Wednesday the three-year-olds will move into the limelight.

The day marks the experimental handicap No. 1 at Belmont Park, fair for the sophomores seeking to go onto glory and riches in the three-year-old classics, the $75,000 Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

Battlefield, the George D. Widener colt which won acclaim as the champion two-year-old of 1950 is expected to make his seasonal debut in Wednesday's experimental, a $20,000 gallop. Battlefield has been wintering at Hialeah, but never raced there.

Before the month is out, the Jamaica and Aqueduct tracks, Ma., and Keeneland, Ky., will shape up the Kentucky Derby picture. By April 30 purses May 1.

Now, however the big four or five of the three-year-olds will have it out in various derby contests. Three big ones come at Jamaica, Wednesday's experimental, the experimental No. 2 at 1 1-16 miles and the Wood Memorial, a $40,000 event at the same distance, April 21.

The Withers Stakes at Laurel at 1 1-16 miles and the Bay Shore Stakes at Aqueduct, April 26 over 1 1-8 mile route, are the other major Derby tests.

Reward Offered For Recovery Of Paintings

Toronto April 3—(CP)—Police announced today a substantial reward for recovery of the paintings leading to the recovery of 10 early Canadian paintings stolen Saturday from the North Toronto home of Robert M. Elliott, mining prospector.

Valued at more than $30,000, the paintings included canvases by well-known artists, including A. J. Casson, "The Toll Gate," "Sunset," "Scene Near Caughnawaga," and "Lord Elgin," part of one of the finest collections of paintings in Canada. In addition $10,000 worth of sterling silver and two automobiles were stolen from the home.

In telling of the reward with details to come later, police said the pictures were so well known it would be impossible to dispose of them to art dealers.

G. Blair Laing, Toronto Art dealer, said unless the thieves were hired by a private collector the paintings would have to be cached for 50 years. Even then, he believed, he would be known they were stolen.

Elliott was absent from his home for an hour and during that time the place was ransacked. Thirty additional paintings had been stacked in the basement by the thieves, apparently for a return trip. The art collector said when he returned he heard a door shut and a car drive away across the street but not until he entered the house did he realize he had been robbed.

CANADA BRIGADE READY FOR ACTION IN TWO MONTHS

Rockingham Returns From Visit to Front

Tokyo, April 2—(Reuters)—Brig. J. M. Rockingham, commander of the Canadian brigade which is to fight in Korea, said here today that the full force of 6,000 men will be ready to take its place at the front in "a good deal less" than two months.

Rockingham, who has just returned from an inspection visit to the Korean front, said that the full-sized brigade, which will join the Princess Patricia's and back-up artillery in action, is "a crack fighting force which I can assure you will give an excellent account of itself."

The Canadian brigade is scheduled to sail on the last week in a month.

Rockingham said 35 per cent of his troops are veterans of the Second World War. The remainder, mainly in the ranks, are youngsters new to war.

The Patricias, who have given a good account of themselves, will be detached from the 27th commonwealth brigade and will join their countrymen once they arrive.

Rockingham said the Canadians will be equipped with Canadian weapons, including Bazooka rocket launchers and mortars.

Food will be supplied by American quartermasters.

The brigadier said he had been highly impressed by the way the campaign waged in Korea by Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, U. S. Eighth Army commander."

"Gen. Ridgway seems to have made his offensive fighting spirit felt right down to the last private in the field," he said. "It is a remarkable thing and every soldier takes a personal pride in Ridgway."

Rockingham said he appreciates the fighting qualities of communists, and expressed the belief they would be able to hold out in Korea for a long time, even without much in the way of equipment.

Twins' Mother Reported Missing At North Bay

North Bay, April 2. (CP)—Police throughout Northern Ontario were put on the alert by night today to keep a lookout for Mrs. Edward (Lillian) Pilon, a 22-year-old mother of twins. She has not been seen since Friday afternoon.

Police said she recently suffered from a nervous breakdown.

The blonde, 110-pound mother — a native of Sturgeon Falls — had not been seen since she handed her twins to her baby sitter next door to a friend while she went shopping and apartment hunting.

Mrs. Pilon's husband reported her missing.

Her description: Height 5 feet, 2 inches tall, black winter coat with belt; black high heel shoes and carrying a small red and white colored kerchief. Mr. Pilon said she was wearing $70 at the time of her disappearance.

Police are checking the parents of the Pilons at Kirkland Lake.

Smugglers Hit Jackpot in Illegal Trade Between East-West Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, April 2— (AP)—Smuggling between east and west Germany has become an estimated billion-dollar business.

Huge quantities of goods flow illegally in both directions across the border between Russian-occupied east Germany and allied-occupied west Germany.

Officials estimate the west German smuggling trade at billions of dollars a year in customs revenue alone.

Both sides of the border are heavily patrolled. But it's almost impossible for the 10,000 border guards to cover all the 700 winding miles of this border. Much of it is in wooded mountains.

West German officials doubt that they will ever get a good count of the goods smuggled.

On the west German side of Lower Saxony alone, officials confiscated about $500,000 worth of contraband in the last half of 1950 and impounded scores of vehicles engaged in border running.

This illegal trade is profitable for two reasons:

1. Smuggled goods evade the customs duties and other taxes.

2. The west German mark—at 23.8 cents—is worth about five times the east German.

Goods commonly smuggled into west Germany include diamonds, furs, rugs, fine textiles.

Most of these are believed to come from government-owned plants and stores in the Soviet zone.

Smugglers into east Germany have been concentrating lately on non-ferrous metals — extremely scarce there.

West German officials expect a rash of liquor smuggling to break out soon, since German distillers have been operating at peak capacity lately—and west Germany is cutting down its legal imports of French cognac to save foreign currency.

Tank-Infantry Patrols Penetrate 38th Parallel

Withdrawals Made Later; Reds Adopt New Tactics

Tokyo, April 2. (AP)—Allied tank-infantry patrols stabbed across the 38th parallel into central Korea "several" times yesterday and today.

Presumably all pulled back to main allied lines after short periods north of the pre-war boundary between North and South Korea.

Main allied interest was focused north of 38 on the central front. There the communists are massing troops and equipment for a probable spring offensive.

New Zealand troops have also played allied infantry assaults on red hill positions. In the past, the reds usually waited on their hilltop crests for the allies to hit them.

Wait on Reverse Slopes

Now they wait on the reverse slopes of hills and man their own trenches only at the last moment. By then the allied infantry is too close for effective enemy close artillery support.

One allied tank-infantry patrol which stabbed across 38 Monday on the west central front hit stiff opposition and pulled back 1-3 miles north of the border and withdrawn.

AP photographer Jim Pringle said the patrol planted a sign reading "Welcome to Korea" on the 38th Parallel. Later it learned the sign was placed a mile north of the pre-war boundary between north and south Korea.

The crossing was in the vicinity of Songdong, A U.S. Eighth Army communique said the patrols took it over engaged and dispersed.

It was the third U.S. crossing of the 38th since Saturday.

Two American tank forces crossed the 38th Saturday. Both withdrew.

Troop Buildup Spotted

On the central front south of the reported communist buildup, some 22 s. 23 miles north of the 38th parallel stopped three miles short of 38 by heavy communist fire.

The reds entrenched on a formidable hill north of Chunchon, another north of Hongchon and machine-gun fire at the infantrymen.

Murder May be Solved by Arrest Of Canadian

Austin Tex., April 2—(AP)—A Travis county plain clothesman may have dug out the murderer of a young man told Canadian police he murdered in Texas three years ago.

O. M. Doherty, Special Investigator for the Travis county district-attorney, Sunday said Austin police have identified the owner of a bullet-riddled body found in a creek near a town of Gonzalo, just outside Austin.

Date of the shooting was April 18, 1948.

The time and all but the first letter of the plate match the description of the Ralph Sowders told police when he was arrested Thursday in Huntsville, Ont., on theft charges.

Householders' coal bins got a break during March which saw a considerably higher mean temperature than the average for the same month during past years.

Mr. and Mrs. Pymer have one daughter, Mrs. Myrtle Bais, of Belleville, and one grandson, Mr. Alex Bais, of Orangeville, and one great grandson, Byron Ira Bass. Making this a memorable occasion was the presence of five generations, Mrs. Pymer's mother, Mrs. Julia Fox, who is 91, was the oldest and Bryan Ira Bass eleven months old, was the youngest.

Many relatives and friends gathered in the evening to pay tribute to fifty years of happy wedded life. A dainty luncheon was served and the table was centred with a large beautifully decorated wedding cake and golden candles on either side. Many congratulatory messages, numerous gifts and flowers were received, all wishing the bride and groom many more years of happy wedded life.

Benjamin Duvall, Hillcrest, Celebrates 101st Birthday

Sixty years of his life has been spent as a partial cripple, but the loss of a leg at the hip has had no apparent ill effect on the health of Benjamin Duval of Hillcrest, right of centenarian fame.

On Sunday, April 1st, Mr. Duval celebrated his 101st birthday and was up as usual at 7:30 in the morning ready for the first of his "three squares" per day. Now living with his son, Mr. Duval passed through the winter without illness and never had a cold.

Youngest of a family of 13 children, the local centenarian early in life became accustomed to hard work. He was born at Camden East, east of Napanee and at 10 years of age had already started to assist with threshing. It was then that he acquired the tobacco habit and he has smoked ever since.

Fought in Rebellion

He remembers his first train ride when while he was in his teens the family moved to the Lindsay district. Later he fought in the Northwest Rebellion making the long trip across Lake Superior by boat and marching the rest of the way to Winnipeg through the bush.

He lost his left leg as result of a bush accident when an axe slipped and gashed his knee. Gangrene set in and the leg was amputated.

Mr. Duval was married twice and had 18 children nine of whom are still living. He now lives with his oldest son John Duvall and his wife.

Still keen of hearing and with fair sight, Mr. Duval is remarkably active despite his handicap of crutches. Every nice day he walks for several blocks. His main pastime is playing euchre and his pipe is his constant companion. He has one grandchildren and has never figured out just how many great grandchildren he has.

Prizes, Trophies Given C.N.R. Winners at Dance

The C.N.R. Athletic Association interdepartmental hockey league was officially closed Saturday night, March 24, when the annual hockey dance was held at the Memorial Centre. A large number of C.N.R.A.A. members and friends were in attendance.

Highlight of the entertaining evening was entertainment chairman Fred Carmichael who handled the show in his usual fine manner. Athletic chairman Frank Ryder addressed the gathering giving an outline of the past hockey season and then in turn introduced Mr. R. A. Shier, division engineer for the Belleville Division, who presented the "Eat" Townsend trophy to Herb. Pointer, manager of the champion Mail Office team. Geo. F. Foster, association president, then presented Fred Carmichael of the Firemen's team with the John R. Bush trophy which is given annually to the league's most valuable player. Mr. Carmichael was also given a handsome pen and pencil set donated by Mr. Henry Drury, for being the league's leading scorer. Mr. Drury made the presentation personally.

The floor prize was won by Mrs. Ted Hopkins while the lucky draw winners were Al. Wardrop, Mrs. Pope and Mrs. Carmichael. These prizes along with others given as spot dance prizes were donated by the following local merchants, Percival Store, Jack Hollow Sport Shop, Barnard Jewellers, Oliphant Electric, J. Diamond and Sons, Mail Publishers, Dolan Drugs, McIntosh Bros., Lipsons, Farrar Furniture and Walker Hardware.

Music for the occasion, both modern and old-time, was supplied by Charlie Thorne and his orchestra.

The affair was under the direction of Harold Foote, entertainment chairman, of the association, who, with his committee, worked untiringly to make the evening the success it was.

IN MEMORIAM

JOSLIN — In loving memory of my dear father James Joslin, who passed away April 1st, 1945.
He has no one a last farewell,
To whisper goodbye to dear ones,
The heavenly gates were open wide,
A loving soul passed through.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Within our home so dear,
But there is a gap, a space,
Sadly missed and ever remembered by wife, son, daughters and grandchildren. A3

CLARE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Frederick Clare, who passed away April 2nd, 1942.
Ten years has passed since that sad day
When all we loved was called away,
God took her home; it was His will,
Within our hearts she lingers still.
Lovingly remembered by her son Vivian and daughter-in-law Mary, granddaughters Doris and Betty. A3

RIGHTMYER — In loving memory of my dear husband, Alfred Rightmyer, who passed away, April 2nd, 1950.
At sunset time we think of you
And gaze at the great command
Of Him who rules the land,
Into a better land He's called
God called you without warning,
Our farewell was never said,
But what a glorious morning
When we say hello instead.
Remembered by sister, Mrs. Mabel Wannamaker. A3

Rita Hayworth Back in States Denies Story

New York, April 2. (AP)—Rita Hayworth is back here back to the United States today, hungry for a hot dog. She denied published reports of a rift between her and her husband, Prince Ali Khan.

The movie film star told reporters as she debarked from the French Liner de Grasse that "The first thing I'm going to do is have a hot dog".

It was the Brooklyn-born princess' first trip home since her widely publicized marriage in France to the son of the Aga Khan, one of the world's richest men. They were married two years ago.

Asked about reports that she and Ali were on the verge of a separation, she said tersely: "There is no truth in that".

Give Second Reading to By-law Paying for New School Addition

Trenton. (Special)—On Friday night, at the regular meeting of council, a by-law for the authority to raise money to pay for the new addition to the North Trenton public school was read for the first and second time.

Contract to build the addition had already been let; construction got underway recently. The two new rooms will cost $35,000 complete. The Glegras Construction Co., of Trenton, has the contract.

The council discussed the building of a new collegiate. Mayor Couch was in favor of the proposed plan and suggested turning the old high school into accommodations for public school pupils. "We should have a modern collegiate," Mr. Couch declared, pointing out that a secondary school in most cases was the last link for the student between education and the outside world.

A deputation headed by Mr. Sam Mowbry from the Victorian Order of Nurses, asked council to increase their yearly grant $1,000 in order that they could carry on their work adequately over the next period.

Following lengthy discussion council was able to spare only $400. The delegation was told about the heavy load of expense the town was shouldering this year. Many suggestions were put forth in an effort to help the order and council went so far as to suggest each department set aside $100 from their budgets to appropriate the needed amount. It was found, however, that most departments were strained to the hilt financially and the smallest increase was arrived at.

Praises V.O.N.

Councillor Claude Graham praised the work of the V.O.N. in Trenton and outlined some of the tasks the order had undertaken. Councillor Charles Allen proposed giving the order $500.

Council was advised that Ross Willman, who was awarded the garbage collection contract at the price of $5,200 per year, had not yet acquired his bond. It was decided in the event that Mr. Willman provided a bond by not identonials that the while collection truck will be sold him for the sum of $3,000 instead of the first offer of $3,600, because of depreciation.

The white garbage disposal truck was purchased in 1947 for $6,386.

Residents Asked To Check Crews' Credentials

Local police are asking city residents to be on their guard against misrepresentation by chimney repairs in Belleville. Householders are requested to ask for and thoroughly check credentials of such repairmen after several Napanee citizens made complaints.

Police Chief Earl Baker of Napanee, stated that a repair crew, numbering several men, driving two late model trucks, were calling at households, stating they had been sent by the authorities to repair defective chimneys.

Once given the go-ahead signal by the householder, the men would go up on the roof to make the repairs, and on completion of the job, would charge a high price for their services. Napanee householders were reported to have paid out considerable sums to the men before complaints started to arrive at the police station.

Belleville police are asking local citizens to notify them if any suspicion is aroused by strange repairmen.

RAIL-TRUCK

From the standpoint of the public as a whole the railway president said, it does not matter whether Canada's freight is carried by railroads or highways' carriers—"provided shippers get the service they want at the lowest possible truck cost to themselves and to the public, and provided that the requirements of National Defence are obtained at the minimum cost."

He reminded his audience, however, that "Canadian railways are performing a physical job of transportation for which highway carriers could not possibly duplicate, even if something like 150,000,000 tons or freight annually at an average rate per ton-mile of less than 1 1-2 cents—at which level no truckers in North America could operate."

Mr. Gordon said he thought it might be assumed that "the railway problem" centres around freight rates and in particular the question of equalizing freight rates across Canada, but, in his opinion, this was only another aspect of the greater problem.

"The existing inequality in regional rate levels is in large measure the consequence of a difficult series of problems arising out of competition between railways and highway freight carriers," he said. "Faced with localized competition from truckers, particularly in Central Canada where competitive influences are highly concentrated, the railways have had to cut rates on the most valuable traffic. Inevitably this has meant that other traffic and other areas have been affected by efforts to recoup the loss in net revenues."

The Canadian National management is ready to recognize the technical advantages inherent in motor vehicle carriers and to make use of them in providing combined rail and highway services for the convenience of the public Mr. Gordon said, however, proposals in this direction had been frustrated by the refusal of competent authorities to license railway-owned bus or truck services.

Hopes to Drop Quietly Out Of Public Notice

Montreal, April 2—(CP)—Freda Linton Alexander, a figure in Canada's 1945 spy probe, said in an interview today that she hopes to get a job in her native Montreal and "drop quietly out of public sight."

She arrived here Saturday night following an "exhausting" cross-continent trip by plane and train. The trip was climaxed by a train derailment in which she was slightly injured but from which her baby daughter escaped unhurt.

She said she had given "no significant information" to a San Francisco grand jury which questioned her about communistic connections before ordering her deported last week.

She said that Tom DeWolfe, special assistant to the district attorney in San Francisco, who was quizzing her, said he had given significant information about communists, was "either telling lies or has been manipulated."

If he was not misquoted, "he was probably trying to justify holding me and my daughter for three months without cause."

She had gone to Reno last year to get a divorce from her husband, Wilbur Alexander, after having divorce proceedings, she took a job to earn money for her passage back to Canada.

She said she was arrested for failing declaring she was a U.S. citizen when she took the job and for failing to declare she was a member of the communist party in 1935-36.

Admitting the charges, she asked to be sent back to Canada but was "interned" for three months.

Her train was derailed near Arlington, Vt., early Saturday when it struck rain-softened roadbed. Several passengers suffered minor injuries.

Cost-of-Living Index For March To Include Rents

Ottawa, April 2. (CP)—The official cost-of-living index, rising for the seventh month in six, has been hopping along for months on five legs instead of six.

Wednesday, when the Bureau of Statistics announces living-cost trends for February, the sixth leg—rents—will be restored. A survey of rents is being completed and will be included in the general report.

Rents, a major item in most family budgets, have not been surveyed by the Bureau since last October, mainly because of the difficulty of getting around in winter months

Rents last surveyed in October, they had reached an all-time high of 138.4 and that is the way they've been shown since on the general report, while other items surged still farther ahead.

Rents comprise one of the important segments of the general cost-of-living index. Food, the most important, has risen about one-third of the index; a miscellaneous group, including health and personal care, costs a little more than one-fifth; and rents a little less than one-fifth.

Clothing takes up about one-tenth; home furnishings a little under one-tenth; and fuel and lighting about one-seventeenth.

The index is sitting at the highest level in its history—175.2 points—after an unusual 2.7-point jump in February, the highest monthly increase in three years. The index stood on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, stood at 172.5 in December.

Boosts in food prices, men's wear, furniture and tires and tobacco helped spark the January increase.

HIT-BY CAR

Peterborough, April 2—(CP)—Phillip Metcalf, 65, of Norwood, 20 miles east of here, suffered two broken legs, internal injuries and scalp lacerations Saturday when struck by a car on Highway 45, two miles south of Norwood. The car did not stop.

Metcalf was found unconscious on the road by a passing motorist and brought to a hospital here.

Cayuga Starts For Home Base

Ottawa; April 2—(CP)— The Canadian destroyer Cayuga is on her way home after almost eight months of patrols, bombardments and other naval operations in Korean waters.

The Cayuga, one of three original destroyers to go to the Korean theatre last July, is due at her home base at Esquimalt, B.C., next Saturday, the second destroyer to come home from the war. She has been relieved by H.M.C.S. Huron.

First home was H.M.C.S. Sioux, due to sail from Esquimalt April 8 for a second tour of duty in the far east. She will relieve H.M.C.S. Athabaskan due home late this month.

With the departure of the Cayuga, the Nootka becomes the flagship of the Canadian flotilla in the far east.

COME TO AGREEMENT

Holmesville, April 3—(CP) The Ontario Hydro Commission and farmers in this area, about 45 miles north of London, came to an agreement yesterday on the farmer's terms. The new contract will give farmers $14 for each pole on arable land and $14 for each brace. The old rate was $5.

FRANCE COMES BACK TO FIGHT

Vincent Auriol, President of France, faced with off-hand suggestions that France was not pulling her weight in the world onslaught against communism, and that she could not be trusted to give her all in a new war, made the situation clear in Washington last week. He told President Truman that France was ready to fight any attacker, and that she would support any North Atlantic Treaty Organization moves to the hilt.

There have been suspicions in diplomatic circles that France was still to weak to make any strong moves in Europe. It has been hinted that, as a nation, her recovery has not been rapid enough and strong enough to put her into the power bracket of international relations.

At the present time, France is devoting more than one-third of her government income to national defence. She is carrying on the fight in Indo-China against communist aggression in an attempt to preserve freedom for newly-created Indo-Chinese states.

France, as long as many people can remember, has had parliamentary troubles. Eruptions within her state circles have forced downfalls of her political power time and again, and her troubles to form a government have long been regarded as signs of instability.

Immediately following the war, France was besieged by communist riots and troublemakers, and she is still fighting them from within her borders. In wartime, she was overrun, and her countryside, born again after World War I, was once more reduced to a shambles.

The two things that France is most famous for in these modern times have not died, however. Her reputation as the leader in the world of women's fashions has been re-established. And her Folies Bergeres, once the delight of Tommy Atkins and his companions in war, is still a national institution.

Perhaps the western world has taken France's traditional lightness of heart too seriously, thinking that she lives only for pleasure. It is now apparent that she has a heart of steel under her playtime appearance, and is rapidly developing strong sinews to help fight for peace.

Again, perhaps, the philosophy of the western world does not take account of the world position in France. She is living on the continent that harbors the biggest threat to peace in the world, and her future place in the sun must rest with how and when the communists act in their struggle for domination.

All the free nations of the world are with France in her fight to regain her strength. She can quite possibly be an outpost of democracy of great importance in the battle for peace.

LADY GODIVA RIDES AGAIN

Godiva will ride again, but 20th century modesty will force her to don a form of protective raiment. The Coventry lass to sit astride the famed white horse in this year's pageant was chosen from a field of 117 applicants, and won out over America's famed fan-dancer, Sally Rand.

The 40-year-old Lady Godiva Wrigg, applied for the job because she is "mad about horses." Miss Rand's application was rejected because the gentlemen in charge of the affair felt that her presence might have attracted the wrong type of spectator to the event.

Lady Godiva's ride was supposed to have taken place in the reign of Edward the Confessor, who ruled England from approximately 1041 until his death in 1066. Despite the fact that Westminster Abbey was founded by a monk built during his reign, the public's fancy has been stimulated more by Lady Godiva than it has by the Abbey. The good lady was reputed to be the wife of Leofric, Earl of Mercia and lord of Coventry, and the reason for her famed ride was supposed to be heavy taxes imposed by her husband.

One variation of the legend says that the Earl taxed almost everything but the air his peasants breathed, and that they could not live under the heavy imposts. A second tale claims that the Earl fined some of the inhabitants of Coventry so heavily that they feared they would starve if they paid.

The two stories come together at the point where Lady Godiva reportedly interceded with her husband for the people of Coventry. He agreed to forget about the fine or taxes if she would ride through the streets of the town, on horseback without her clothes.

After ordering all the inhabitants not to look, Godiva rode. One man peeked, however, and he was immediately struck blind for his cheating.

So Coventry lady's journey, immortalized in genial bawdy songs over the years, has been built into a pageant for all England. Since 1678, off and on, her ride has been a featured part of the Coventry fair, and her fame has spread far and wide.

The re-enactment of the ride will take place this year on June 23, and even though Miss Wrigg is scheduled to wear clothing as she sits on her horse, we still hope it is a warm day for the jaunt.

OUR SITTER PROBLEM

We had just-two sitter problems in the days when we were small
With two quickly found solutions, as I frequently recall.
One was: "Could we take the children?" (not too often I admit)
And the other answer: "Would either of the grandmas come to sit?"
This modern sitter problem was a case we didn't know.
And if neither of the grandmas could come in and let us room
We forgot about the party and decided to stay home.
I'm old fashioned and I know it, and the sitting custom's nine;
But this trusting them to strangers was a thing we didn't do.
I say: "Take the children with you, but, if not, then suggest
If you must leave some one 'sitting' either grandma

WATCH YOUR INFLUENCE

We never know what influence our words are going to have.

A relative of mine, who lived to a remarkably old age, has often told me, how, in her girlhood, she listened (secretly) to the arguments about religion that frequently occurred between her father and his sister. These two were adherents of different denominations, and for hours sometimes they would discuss the merits of their own approaches to faith. The young girl listened and came to the conclusion that neither one was wrong and that his sister, her aunt, was right. Therefore, at an early age, she forsook the faith of her father and embraced the faith of her aunt.

Little did these two adults, as they argued evening after evening before the open fireplace in the farmhouse, realize that their words were being carefully weighed by this bright little girl who sat back in the corner listening. It never entered their minds, probably, that the whole of this child's life would be affected by their words. Not only that if they ever knew, that little ears are sharp to hear and little minds are eager to grasp every word. They argued before the bar of destiny and knew it not.

Anti-Religious Campaign Hits Tough Sledding

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Just more than a year ago, the Soviet Journal of Science and Life launched an all-out propaganda drive against religion, and for education of the masses in militant atheism, as vital to the Communist indoctrination.

Reporting on results of the first 12 months of this drive, the Life now calls for an expansion of the crusade as "very much needed." Apparently the anti-religious campaign is up against a tough proposition.

This is as would be expected. The vast majority of the world's people, both in China and primitives, believe in a god or gods. He is indeed an optimist who thinks that spiritual beliefs which have existed since time began can be killed.

The Soviet drive isn't aimed at some of them. For example, the union of Moslem people of Russia has appealed to the United Nations for help, saying that Moslems of the Soviet North Caucasus are being persecuted.

And why should Bolshevism find it necessary to try to destroy religion? Can't all Bolshevist ideology work with religion?

Against All Religions

The answer is that the tenants of totalitarian Bolshevism are contrary to the beliefs of every religion on earth. Bolshevism proclaims openly that the aim and employing aggression in the conduct of its world position for the spread of communism.

Bolshevism isn't the first to recognize that totalitarian dictatorship and religion don't mix. Adolph Hitler early saw that he was to succeed with his devilish ambitions he must first kill off religious opposition.

However, Hitler couldn't kill religion, and the Bolshevists can't kill it. The Moscow government, taking cognizance of the signs, is favoring persuasion rather than compulsion.

OUR TOWN

TO THE ATTACK

Places, everyone! Now, in yesterday's issue, we discussed how to meet the girl of your choice, or the dream kid, and today we are to consider the various techniques leading up to the final conquest.

Some men never get anywhere because of a foolish idea that they are homely and we should never hope deal with this point right away.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that female vanity is a powerful thing. Any clever woman knows that her attractiveness is best complemented by a man with a face like a lost bulldog and so it is well to remember that the uglier you are the better the looker.

Prof. Stephen Potter, whose notes on "Woomanship" are of much assistance, cites the case of a man named R. Book who made the fatal mistake of trying to make himself handsome by will power alone.

From time to time Book would stand stock-still, saying to himself ten times over, "I am handsome, I am handsome," until he had convinced himself that some girl he was after had been struck by "the immobility of his features." He would occasionally make some offhand remark about "the remorseless precision of my profile." Prof. Potter indicates that poor Book wasted so much valuable time in this manner that he never got to first base.

An even more interesting case was that of P. Wilkes, who unconsciously exploited what he called his "pretty fearsome countenance." According to Prof. Potter, Wilkes had, in fact, a rather well-shaped and expressive left cheek, with interesting lines and dents in it, deepened by repeated scowling, including a deep crease on and off of both taps with his teeth, which he did for five minutes every morning.

When duelling with a female of his choice, Wilkes would manage to make some offhand remark about this loathsome face, at the same time affecting an expression of humorous skepticism and moving his head underneath a top light, to give a deepset effect to his eyes.

The Two Types

The point to remember is that beauty in the male is rarely rewarded. If you have a plain, ordinary face, are the kind that is frequently referr to as "rather a nice face," that's your problem. Don't come crying to me with your troubles.

In the actual combat of courting it is wise to divide women into two categories and to adapt yourself accordingly. There are some women want to look after you. ("He's just a little boy, really"), and, on the other hand, there are women who want someone they can depend on. ("My sweat lad big strong man.")

In my own experimental years I had several small successes by affecting to be a moody, unpredictable type, re-enforcing this by repeated references to "my writing". (Which at this time consisted mainly in preparing the day's obituaries and weather synopsis.)

This is a very easy character to create and the deficiencies may be obtained by staring for long periods out of windows, wheeling about from time to time to express some profound thought, such as, "Life is indeed a paradox, male or female, don't you?" I found it worthwhile to carry a frayed volume of Shopenhauer under one arm although, in later years, I often thought I'd have got a lot further with a couple of quarts of a reliable gin.

In any event, my role was designed to create an atmosphere of uncertainty in the mind of the quarry so that the Poor girl never knew what to expect. The trouble with this was that sometimes while staring out the window the girls wandered off with men who had planned their whole line and were never heard from again.

Prof. Potter warns that the man with normal income is under a severe handicap. Prosperity tends to be fascinating rich or amusingly poor. Unfortunately, the professor adds, "he must either be charmingly weak about women, reckless and extravagant or else he must learn to move, stolid and dependably waiting for The One Woman."

This is all excellent advice and simply means that you must never be yourself for, as you well know, nothing could be duller.

With Chivalry

Being the big strong man on whom the frail little women lean and depend needs, at first, like almost too much effort for the likely reward, but again Prof. Potter has the answer.

He cites the case of a man named Willoughby Haines whose approach was to establish himself as the perfect ladies' man and exponent of courtesy and real consideration. The curious fact was that Haines was, underneath all this, bad - mannered man who wouldn't help his grandmother over a curb. Nevertheless, did he win so many maids with his chivalry? Let Prof. Potter explain.

"He had a rack of a dozen lighters, which he cleaned and put in order carefully. Before asking for his girl, he would select one, fuel it, put in a new flint, taking care to choose a large and manly one for the tiny, frightened girl. In one instance, with cigarette case and pencil attached for the slightly oppy girl."

At precisely the right moment in the cigarette manouvre, fire would dart from his hand.

Prof. Potter claims that most girls were so stunned with this display of good manners that they never questioned his manners in general, and it was themselves left with the two heaviest bags to carry.

But once more I see we have reached the end of our lecture period. The rest of my advice will be mailed to you in a plain, unmarked envelope and please see that it doesn't get into the hands of the kiddies.

SO THE TOOTH IS DEAD, EH?

Fourteen years ago when we last harped on "dead teeth" here, (the old time tooth carpenter's term for pulpless teeth) there were for our dentists still in practice who stoutly maintained that a "dead" tooth was a menace to the health and safety of the individual until it was extracted.

Today, however, a good many lucky people, by and with the consent of their dentists, are enjoying the benefits of "dead" teeth despite the hollow warnings of the ancients that sooner or later such teeth must become infected etc.

The logical answer to that is, well, even so, the infection will be no greater considering that the infection of a tooth or its root at any time, and goodness knows that only a few of the many persons with infected teeth suffer serious consequences from neglect of proper treatment.

"In the first place, the so-called dead tooth is not dead but just pulpless. In the next place, the pulp of a tooth is not the only "nerve" but the blood vessels, which, with the nerve, enter the tooth channel at the root end of the tooth through a small opening at the point of each root. From the blood vessels in the pulp it gets its main blood supply of nourishment, but with it, for even after the pulp is destroyed (the "nerve killed" as per old time dentistry) the tooth still receives sufficient nourishment, through the gum and bone tissues in which it is embedded, to keep it alive.

In fairness to the dentists who maintained that a dead tooth is proper to pulpless teeth we may say that many of them were influenced by the focal infection theory which became current in the first decade of this century. At the height of this craze the suspicion that there might possibly be some hidden infection (germs within tissues or substance) in tonsils or teeth was all the ever ready excuse required to perpetrate tonsillectomy or order the dentist to extract most or all of the offending teeth. Some dentists were so — well, they obeyed the command even when they knew the teeth were sound or at last reparable. They had an inferiority complex —and all dentists will have it, years ago still give good service.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TWO THINGS

A friend of mine was driving with the late Arthur Brisbane when Brisbane suddenly turned and said: "There are two things and only two things that are worth while in this world, men and money." Brisbane was a brilliant writer of editorials that were read by millions each day, and some time before he died he lost his health and he left his money behind.

In an interesting little book called "After-thoughts," by Logan Pearsall Smith, I came across this statement: "There are two things to aim at in life: first, to get what you want; and after that, to enjoy it. Only the wisest of mankind achieve the second."

None of us has a place too high a premium upon health for it is one of the great essentials to success and happiness. But if your health is sacrificed to gain one's objective, the enjoyment is warped and the enjoyment in one's work is one of the things that stimulates and creates health. Without this enjoyment work can lose its meaning.

Henry Drummond called love the greatest thing in the world, and wrote a book under that inspired worldwide reading. Love touches everything that is beautiful, first to love, and certainly allied to it, is selflessness. People who keep giving themselves away are the only people who find the meaning of wealth.

Without selflessness and generosity none of us would get very far happily. Nor could we have much fun out of money. The healthy mind has more to do with a healthy body than anything else. Most of our fears of a constant dusting and sweeping of the cobwebs of new arrangements. What a thing of wonder it is anyway!

Two things I wonder what the two most valuable would be about people we need to thank them! I am sure that love would be one of them. Happiness would be another. Unselfishness and dependent upon so many other things. Those who complain about having no happiness do not know that they do have it until they start giving it away.

THE PACKSACK

If nothing else comes out of the war, it will have brought a great many letters, controversy between the Post Office and its letter carriers, the discovery of the fribble and affectation of the public has for its letter carriers is worth while. It sometimes seems as if the high brass of the Post Office must all live in apartments, never see the light of their own postmen.

Otherwise, they would all be aware of the fact that summer, winter and summer, toddling gently and purposefully up the streets carrying his great bundle, which seems to grow greater with the years.

Next to the sight of a policeman on the beat (and that's getting rarer, rarer) the familiar, daily appearance of the postman is a reminder, somehow, of the spirit of law and order which is becoming more and harder to find. Not out of, with the growing and changing world.

The postman is federal. He is not local. He is Canada. This post-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Baby Chews Wood

Twenty month old granddaughter chews on wood furniture, swallows some, especially when cutting teeth. Is there any danger in this? (Mrs. M. F.)

Answer—Occasionally an interesting gnawing at furniture or toys gets lead poisoning from the paint. Baby may get a little wood it is harmless. Our kids preferred wall plaster, and we had to keep them off walls when they could get it. Of course either soft wood or plaster may hide eggs or larvae of human and animal parasites or the germs of disease, if these pollutants are themselves, the peculiar fondness many children have for dirt is just plain. Dirt as dirt is not a particularly serious menace and is forgotten as the child's range of diet becomes wider.

Video-ettes, Musical Duo Head Fine Array of Talent At Rotary Clubs Variety Show to Aid Crippled Kiddies

Internationally known artists, the Video-ettes, one of Canada's outstanding musical duos, will feature the Variety Show scheduled for the Collegiate Institute Auditorium on Wednesday night, under the sponsorship of the Rotary Club.

Six sparkling acts ranging from an operatic baritone to hilarious comedy round out what is said to be one of the most brilliant arrays of stage talent ever brought to the city.

Clever Acts

The Video-ettes have built their reputation to include musical saws Swiss hand-bells, singing wine glasses, musical wine bottles, pire sticks and other smaller novelties such as teapots, balloons, bike pumps, frying pans, with the most popular being the Swiss bell-ringing act.

This clever act has played on international sea-going ships and at armed services shows as well as leading theatres, night clubs and conventions. They have been feted with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and such personalities as the music world as Oscar Peterson, Frankie Laine, and Lester Ono and his famous debutantes, besides the Leslie Bell Singers.

Leading Baritone

Ernest Adams, said to be one of Canada's outstanding operatic baritones is a radio and concert star in his own right. He has appeared in leading roles with the CBC Operatic Company singing in a number of well-known operas. He has appeared with the Mendelssohn Choir and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. He sang several lead roles in the recent Toronto Opera Festival and was headlined with the Canso-Johnson show at the CNE. He was twice winner in the radio show "Stars of Tomorrow." At present he is engaged in making motion pictures of the Opera Festival under the National Film Board.

Miss Zena Cheevers, talented dancer adds a different touch to the program. This clever artist is well-known in Canadian dancing circles and her remarkable versatility has marked her as one of the most brilliant dance artists. She will be seen in several routines.

Good Comedy

Rex Slocombe is no stranger to variety show lovers of this district. The comedian-musician mixes sleight-of-hand cleverness with rollicking humor and his remarkable stunts of magic coupled with hilarious comedy makes him one of the stars of the show.

The Carr Brothers too add their share of lighter vein. Billed as a mystery act, there is nothing much to be said of what they do, but their reputation of being an outstanding act is sufficient for the time being.

Ted Rust, ventriloquist with his friend "Paddy" is another variety stage luminary whose rumble patter is guaranteed to keep the audience in a state of merriment throughout.

The proceeds of the show go to Rotary Club's Crippled Children Fund. Rotarian Jim Bush is also a worthwhile job for the crippled children of the city and district for the past quarter century nearly 800 kiddies having passed through their committees' hands for treatment and equipment.

London Millinery Charming, Demure Like Century Ago

By MURRIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP)—In jaunty disregard of wet and windy winter months, Britain's Easter bonnets are gay, demure and charming.

Their spirit is appropriately reminiscent, in fact, of the coy Victorian Miss in flower-decked beribboned poke-bonnet who watched a pink-gowned Queen Victoria drive in state to open Britain's 1851 exhibition, forerunner of this year's Festival of Britain.

Fashions have blazed a meteoric pathway in those 100 years but the new spring line still has a slightly Victorian flavor, recalling like a faint echo the styles worn at the first exhibition of Britain's art and manufactures.

Today's slim skirt-line with the fashion preference for black-and-white and navy-and-white, combined with a becoming flowered toque, cloche or bonnet, gives an elegant feminine outline that the ladies of yesteryear could not have scorned.

"It is apparent that the outlook and circumstances of the day influenced no less strongly women's wearing apparel in 1851 than in 1951," said a spokesman at London's millinery information centre.

Old-World Touch

The Victorian influence is especially marked in the combination of floral toques and flowered muffs. Both hats and muffs are composed entirely of flowers or petals and the muffs have a quaint, old-world look.

"This is undoubtedly a trimmings year, with no restrictions so long as they are feminine," said the information centre spokesman.

Mushroom shapes, toques and beret hats with a visor or peaked brims are spattered with single flowers or adorned with slim, delicate sprays. There are no "bunchy" trimmings. The visor brims are often of transparent horsehair, covered with flowers and supported on a black velvet skull cap.

Small hats are narrow with upturned sides, narrow curled brims and a new elongated look. One example is an upturned boat style, its length emphasized by small tufts of flowers worn fore and aft.

Two old comebacks with well-known elongated shapes are the Scots Glengarry and the English bowler. The latest Glengarry styles are modelled in smooth straw and decorated with a side spray or flowers. The new bowler has curled brim, shallow crown and visor veil. Many are slotted with ribbons and ribbon streamer.

CIVIL SERVICE QUEEN

Verna Rousseau, 21, a secretary in the trade department, was chosen "Queen of the Civil Service" for 1951. Among her winnings is a four-day all-expense trip to New York. Miss Rousseau is from Cornwall, Ont. She defeated 25 other contestants. Central Press Canadian.

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S W. A.

Marmora — The March meeting of St. Paul's W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. E. Hewitt on Thursday afternoon with a small attendance of members. Mrs. R. G. Winters, vice-president, took the chair in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie.

In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. W. M. Regan, gave the financial statement and Mrs. R. Frost deputized for Mrs. Don Rose in reporting for the Dorcal activities. Candn J. M. Brownlie led in the special Litany as furnished in "The Living Message."

The secretary, Mrs. Frank Leal, read the report of the Diocesan Board meeting held in Kingston in March. She also read notice of the annual Diocesan meeting to be held in Brockville on May 9-10.

Rector Honored

The financial statement and report of the Dorcas convener having been given, the members passed the motion that the branch place on record its pleasure that the parish had been honored by the appointment of the rector as Canon of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, and the sincere hope that Canon Brownlie might long continue his work in the church that he has served so faithfully in the capacity of a clergyman for the past twenty-five years. Canon Brownlie replied feelingly to this gesture.

Mrs. R. G. Winters offered her home for the April meeting. The study on "Islam" was continued under the leadership of the rector.

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the committee for the month.

PINE GROVE W.I.

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. G. Bartendale, Oak Lake, was hostess to the Pine Grove Women's Institute for their March meeting. Mrs. F. Campbell, president, opened the meeting in the usual manner, after which the district director, Mrs. F. Finkle, gave a detailed report of the last directors' meeting.

Mrs. G. Bartendale read a paper stressing important items in Institute work. Ten dollars was voted to the work of the Red Cross Society. Mrs. F. Campbell, convener of the standing committee on Community Activities and Public Relations, gave Current Events and took charge of the remainder of the program.

The guest speaker, Mrs. R. Bush, district president, was unable to attend but had sent her material.

"The Odd Moment", was read by Doreen Bartendale and "Are You Sure You Are an Adult" by Mrs. B. Searles.

Topic, "Program Planning" by Mrs. H. Dedjer, who stated, "We are in the second 50 years of our W.I. work, and during that time there have been many changes. Farm women's interests outside the home are more numerous and varied. The W.I. must compete with several other organizations. Programs must be so worthwhile that the members will receive full value for the time spent in attending meetings."

"Appoint a committee to be alert to program planning for the coming year, and to which any member with an idea may pass it.

"Let everyone be at liberty to voice an opinion. True democracy gives everyone a say.

"Have a true sense of values. There are two kinds of work—the active money making side, and the spiritual or uplifting of that inner part—the real part of mankind.

"Remember charity, love, goodwill. A lot of good things can only be kept by giving them away. When we try to retain, we hold them they fail to even exist.

"Aim at one objective for the year, six months, or season. At the end of that time take time to see how successful it was and if not why not.

"Vary the program so as to include all the varied talent of everyone in the group. Nearly everyone has something she can do well.

"Have programs often that take in the whole family."

In conclusion, Mrs. Bush said "Let us strive harder than ever out of this confused and overworked age to gather up the fragments and pave a strong solid road on which all the little feet of this generation may grow up to be worthwhile men and women."

Following the meeting delicious refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

CENTENARY W.M.S.

In the absence of Mrs. G. Sills, the March meeting of the Centenary W.M.S. held at the church, was conducted by the president, Mrs. R. Edmondson.

The devotional service from the Missionary Monthly was followed. Mrs. G. Garrison read the Scripture and Mrs. R. Edmondson led in prayer. Mrs. P. Sutherland favored with a solo "The Old Rugged Cross".

A special collection amounting to $3 was taken for the memorial to Mrs. Smythe. Easter Thankoffering amounted to over $30. It was decided to hold a special meeting on April 13, with Mrs. Blythe Lehman as guest speaker. The reports of the recent convention held in Picton were given by the delegates, Mrs. Ross Mc-Lea, Mrs. L. Hall and Mrs. R. Thrasher. These were enjoyed by all.

CENTENARY W.A.

Mrs. G. Woods, vice president, took charge of the March meeting of the W.A. held at the church. Roll call showed an attendance of 21. It was decided that aisle be chosen for the supper contest to provide more interest. The windows in the church are in need of repair, Mrs. E. Hart and Mrs. L. Hall were named to meet with the trustee board to discuss same.

Mrs. B. Harder was in charge of the W.A. study and the Scripture was read by Mrs. O. May. Mrs. G. Woods gave a reading as did Mrs. B. Harder. Mrs. J. Lawrenson sang a solo.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Take a vacation friendship for what it is

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last year, at the place we spend the summer, I met a girl I began to go around with. I'm 17 and will graduate from High School in June, but because she was only 15, I didn't think it right to go steady during the winter, and her parents were pleased with my decision.

Now, though, I don't think it was a wise one, because after we returned to our winter homes, I got a letter from her saying she was going steady with a local boy. I felt very sad, and phoned her that night to tell her the sad task some things I had given her, which she did.

Then about two months ago, I went to see her. She lives about 30 miles from me. She wasn't home, but I had a talk with her parents and they didn't know what had happened. Her mother said she isn't allowed to go steady, and that as far as she knew, she didn't. She said I would probably hear from her, but I never did.

A few weeks ago, I phoned her mother to say hello. She said to come visit them sometime, but I don't know if I should or not. Do you think I should call this girl up and ask for a date? I still like her very much, but would not like to visit her if she didn't want me to. There aren't many fellows or girls at the place we go in the summer, so if she and I weren't friends, this coming summer it wouldn't be enjoyable for either of us. S. R.

Dear S.R.:

It seems to me the smartest thing for you to do would be to wait until summer, then pick up your friendship with this girl where you left off last year. If there aren't many young people at the resort where you go, why

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD — What's Cooking?

A Swiss father-in-law says it with cheese.

When a young Swiss suitor asks for his daughter's hand in marriage, he receives his answer in cheese. If the young man's dish is approved, he gives the waiting suitor a slab of cemmenthal cheese. If the cheese is the one which the father received at his birth, and which he keeps during his entire life for significant occasions.

The average Swiss citizen eats three times as much cheese as the average American. Cheese, to him, is a symbol of prosperity and health.

Cheese is not a complete substitute for meat. But, like meat, it is a high protein food and contains nearly twice as much protein as eggs. It can be used in combination with meat to make many rich satisfying dinner dishes.

Eggplant and meat cakes require only a cup of ground cooked meat. The cakes are first fried in butter and then oven-grilled slices of Swiss cheese.

Eggplant Meat Cakes—Serves 6

1 small eggplant
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
1 clove of garlic finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1-2 cups hard bread crumbs
1 cup finely chopped or ground cooked meat (beef, veal, lamb or pork)
1-2 teaspoons salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
1 lb. sliced Swiss cheese
1 eight ounce can tomato sauce
Cut eggplant in half. Cover with hot water. Simmer until tender. Remove from water. Remove centre meat from skin. Chop very fine. Measure eggplant. Use 2 cups eggplant pulp.

Combine eggplant, green pepper, garlic, onion and 1 cup bread crumbs, chopped cooked meat, salt, pepper and 1 egg. Mix well. Mixture should be firm enough to shape into cakes. If mixture is too loose, add more bread crumbs.

Shape into cakes 1-2 inch thick and about 3 inches wide. Dip cakes in bread crumbs. Beat remaining egg with 2 tablespoons water. Dip cakes in this liquid. Again dip in bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat heated to 370 degrees until brown. Place cakes in a shallow pan. Place slices of cheese over cakes. Sprinkle with paprika. Put pan in a moderate oven 375 degrees for a few minutes or until cheese begins to melt.

spoil everything for yourself by striking a girl you have fun with right after you've broken with her.

Lots of young people enjoy vacation friendships with boys and girls they meet in the summer, and they feel free to go with anyone they like in the interval. To expect a girl who lives 20 miles away from you to be your girl friend exclusively is asking too much, I think. Don't try to get possessive about her, but just accept her as a congenial summer companion. On such a basis, you can have lots of good times together without any foolish hurt feelings. If you show her you're a good sport about things, she'll like you even better; and later on your good friendship might easily develop as you'd like it to.

Wait till you know your own mind

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 21 and have been going steady with a boy for a year who is now in service. He wants me to marry him, but I still care for a fellow I went with four years before I met this one, and he also wants me to marry him.

I don't want to hurt either one of them, so please tell me which of them I should choose and how to go about it. M. E. M.

Dear M.E.M.:

You haven't a very difficult problem. Why any girl is as undecided as you are about whom she shall marry, she shouldn't marry anyone.

If you're really asking my advice, then it is that you should tell both these young men that you're not ready to marry yet and you don't want to commit yourself to anyone. Just because another one asks you to marry him does not mean that you must do so. Wait until you're quite sure you have met the one you can't do without; then you'll know your own mind so well you won't have to write to anyone for advice.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Jewel-expensive set in our daily life

"Thank you" — "Please" — "I beg your pardon" — "Do you mind if I . . . ." — "I am sorry" — "How kind of you." These, and similar expressions that show consideration for others, are jewels in the setting of our daily life. And what an inspiration it is to hear charming people say them with such grace that they radiate kindly inclination to others—to friends, relatives, co-workers, strangers.

Daughter wants father to take off his hat in store elevator

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter and I went on a shopping tour in a large department store. She insisted that when we were in the elevator I should take off my hat. I disagreed, and did not take off my hat, since all the people in the elevator were stranger to me . . . and also I didn't see any reason to expose my bald head to the vulgar gaze! Please give me your opinion as to what would be the correct thing to do under the circumstances.

John P.

It is not necessary for a man to remove his hat in the elevators of a department store, just as it is not necessary for him to remove his hat in the elevator of an office building. This type of elevator is considered as a public place, in distinction to the elevators in hotels and apartment houses, where the elevator is considered more like a room, in which a man would, naturally, take off his hat.

However, . . . is your daughter listening, sir? . . . I am constantly surprised to see how many men take off their hats in elevators in department stores and in office buildings, even in the large busy stores and buildings in large, busy cities. Contrary, unsatisfactory even though the gesture isn't necessary. And the woman with the man who does this . . . wife, daughter (!), friend . . . is mighty pleased with the compliment of the courtly gesture! Obviously that daughter of yours is yearning to be proud of "my father's" courtly manners, and next time you go shopping with her, set this one telling standard for her. And you'll find, dear sir, that the "gent" won't be on the bald head but on your fine mannerliness!

Engraved cards when husband always uses initial for first name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband does not use his first name, but has always used his middle name with the initial of his first name. In ordering calling cards or informals or any other engraved cards, would it be poor taste to use an initial? Or would the form Mr. and Mrs. D. Calvin Campbell be correct for engraved cards?

C. R. K.

Although it is true that initials should be avoided as much as possible on engraved cards, such as visiting cards or informals or engraved invitations, in the circumstance like yours, when the husband never uses the first name but always uses and is known by his middle name, it would be the proper and practical form to use Mr. and Mrs. D. Calvin Campbell. One initial is permissible under the special circumstances . . . but never two initials, never Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Campbell.

Spring tonics? Buy them at the grocery

"Good old tonics!" Oh, yes! When grandma prates about them, ask her if she considered sulphur and molasses a dietary treat. You'll get her teeth on edge at the flimsery. The poor kids lined up and were given the horrid meal. And a lot of good it did them! They heard their elders explain how, in the Springtime the blood was thin. Something had to be done about it.

You can get all the Spring tonics you need from the vegetable store. They are all that is normally healthy. Individual needs, after even the toughest winter, as any doctor will tell you. Fortunately we have them all the year around. Once upon a time we met an Englishwoman in London who had been to America. We asked her what impressed her most. There wasn't a moment's hesitation. She exclaimed with enthusiasm. "The windows of grocery stores filled with gorgeous fruits and vegetables."

We enjoy luxuries in these lines as do no European countries. In England there are the same old offerings—cabbage, string beans, brussel's sprouts. Fruit, most of which comes from Italy, is an expensive luxury. As it is in France.

Because of the lack of sunshine during the winter months, we need more vitamins and minerals and when the lilacs start to bloom. Practically all leafy vegetables contain mineral salts. At luncheon or dinner each day everyone should have a serving of green salad. Lettuce, endive, tomatoes, raw onions and raw carrots are all helpful in keeping the complexion normal, of good coloring. Spinach, cabbage, beet tops, dandelion greens and chard provide a certain amount of bulk, and so help the functioning of the digestive motors.

Citrus fruits have a favorable effect upon the skin. They are rich in vitamin C, are supposed to make for the strength and healing of the teeth. So start your day with half a grapefruit or a full glass of orange juice. You can vary this rule now and then by substituting tomato juice, which also contains vitamin C.

Teen-agers who find themselves beset with acne should be persuaded to eat fruit instead of pastries that—rich in fat, starch and sugar—excite the sebaceous glands.

Blithe Easter Bonnet

NICE, neat little straws, colorful, flattering and bright, bring with them more than a hint of spring. Oscar Friedman does a bonnie bonnet that would be a good choice for Easter. It is of sunlight-yellow milan-type straw and has a tiny platform of black velvet. A mass of white lilac blossoms is strategically placed in back to top the ubiquitous chignon or a fluff of curls. And it is nicely priced too.

TAX RATE UP 9.45 MILLS

Kingston, March 31 — (CP)— A tax rate of 47.25 mills was set Friday when council, in special session, adopted the budget for 1951.

The rate is up 9.45 mills over last year's. It followed a pattern general in Ontario this year, reflecting increased wages and greater municipal services.

Weeks of work by the Finance Committee of city council pared the budget from an original lump of 12 mills.

Demands of education, including substantial salary increases, were the principal factor in the city's heavy tax impost this year. The rate required to meet these demands is 20.60 mills. Last year it was 18.74 mills.

Toronto Leafs Even Series With Boston Bruins by 3-0 Win; Play Tie Game Satu[illegible]

Boston, April 2—(AP)—Boston Bruins may be in a bad way Tuesday night when they again oppose the Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup semi-finals, now tied at one game each.

Milt Schmidt, Boston captain and centre, who is an all-star and Hart Trophy candidate, suffered an injury to his one good knee last night as the Leafs downed the Bruins 3-0 and may not be ready for Tuesday's game against the Leafs.

Schmidt has been the main cog in the Bruins' offence this season despite playing the last few weeks with his left knee heavily bandaged because of a torn ligament.

Today the right knee was stiff and sore from a collision with former team-mate Fern Flaman. Schmidt went down with a grimace, but continued to take his regular turn, although at a slower pace.

Dr. Thomas Kelly, team physician, couldn't say pending further examination whether the popular Schmidt had suffered anything worse than a wrench.

Decision as to Schmidt's playing against Leafs won't be made until possibly game time tomorrow night.

Bruins Crippled

His loss along with that of winger Johnny Pierson, would leave the Bruins crippled. Before the series began, the Leafs had a stronger bench even with Harry Watson out with a shoulder injury. Pierson is in hopspital with a fractured cheekbone and won't be available until Saturday night.

Watson is due to return soon and the Leafs would have an overpowering depth compared to the Bruins.

Played Rough Game

The clubs played a rough game last night as Leafs won to even the best-of-seven series. Referee Bill Chadwick imposed a total of 20 penalties, 15 of them in the first period.

However the game was two shy of the 22 penalties incurred in Saturday night's 1-1 tie in Toronto when five players needed a total of 34 stitches.

Last night only five stitches were needed to close a cut on the chin of Leaf captain Ted Kennedy.

Cal Gardner's goal in the second period broke the ice and sent the Leafs on the way to victory. Flaman, who started the season with Boston, widened the margin late in the period and Max Bentley's goal in the third period settled the issue.

The Bruins will take today off, but the Leafs will have a short workout at Boston Garden.

The Saturday stalemate was a rough, bruising affair with players often more concerned with slugging each other than the puck.

Pierson was the main casualty of the penalty-studded contest which was halted because of Toronto's Sunday crufew:

With Governor-General Alexander watched from a flag-bedecked box, defenceman Bill Barilko sent Leafs ahead 1-0 in the first four minutes of play. Pierson tied the score near the mid-way point in the second period.

Expect Remainder Of Series to be Close and Tough

Boston, April 2—(CP)—"It looks like a tough, close series."

That was the consensus in both Toronto Maple Leafs' and Boston Bruins' dressing room last night after the Leafs blanked the Boston club 3-0 to tie up their Stanley Cup semi-final series at a game apiece.

Canny Connie Smythe, Leafs' head man, said after hugging the veteran Turk Broda, who came through with one of his superlative netminding performances just when the team needed it most:

"Boston has a great hockey team. It will be a tough series. Anything can happen."

Boston coach Lynn Patrick said that although the Bruins are handicapepd by injuries to three men, "we're even with them aren't we?"

"We're just as good a hockey team as they are and the team that gets the breaks will win the series."

Broda, who was playing in his 100th Stanley Cup playoff game, was delighted at shutting out the home club, but added quickly: "This is a tough series right now."

These sentiments were echoed by captain Ted (Teeter) Kennedy who sported five stitches in his chin as a result of last night's action. The first-string Toronto centre already had seven stitches near his right eye from Saturday night's grueling 1-1 tie in Toronto.

RIVER FERRY SOLD

Brockville, March 31. (CP) — The sale of the veteran river ferry Levis has been announced by the Prescott Ogdensburg Ferry Company. The 40-year-old steamer has been purchased by MacNamara Construction Company of Toronto for rebuilding and service on the upper lakes. The Levis was formerly used as a ferry between Levis and Quebec City before coming to Prescott.

Mentors Plan Further Strategy Miles Apart

Montreal, April 2—(CP)—The master-minds of the tightly-fought Stanley Cup playoff between Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings sweated through their furious figuring today almost 10 miles apart.

Up in the Laurentian hills, coach Dick Irvine gathered his Canadiens around him and expounded on ways and means of increasing their 2-1 margin on games in the best-of-seven series.

Just as confident, coach Tommy Ivan held forth at a hotel in Granby in Quebec's eastern townships. He told his Red Wings that what they did in shutting out Canadiens 2-0 Saturday they can do again.

If this semi-final followes the pattern already set, one of the National Hockey League's two scoring aces will decide which team meets Toronto or Boston in the final.

Gordie Howe, the centre-ice smoothie from Saskatoon, lifted the Wings back into a threatening position with his second-period goal Saturday.

It was a fitting reply to Maurice Richard's two goals that broke up the long overtime games in Detroit and sent Canadiens into a two-game lead.

Veteran Sid Abel supplied the coup de grace in the third period and 14,417 supporters of the bleu-blanc-rouge were left stunned.

The fourth game on Montreal ice Tuesday night shapes up as the crucial game of the series. It could well be the deciding game. If the Detroiters win they will move to their home ice loaded with confidence for the fifth game Thursday.

If Canadiens win the next one for the home fans, the Montrealers will have a throttle hold on the series. Detroit will be faced with the tremendous job of taking three in a row.

Immediately after Saturday's game the teams left for their quiet hide-out spots to spend the weekend resting. Irvin cajoled his players into forgetting "this one defeat in three games." Ivan smiled happily at the exuberance of his Red Wings but predicted the series is still anybody's property.

Before their own supporters Saturday night, Canadiens appeared a little off the razor-edge form that carried them to two straight wins.

Richard and his mates missed goal-scoring chances or were balked by the brilliant goaltending of Terry Sawchuk. A defence lapse cost Canadiens the big goal scored by Howe. He took Bob Goldham's long pass with the Montreal defence caught out of position and swept in alone to beat little Gerry McNeil in the Montreal nets.

Abel's clincher in the last period was a smoking, rising shot from 20 feet inside the Montreal blue line.

The goaltending honors Saturday night definitely went to Sawchuk. The tall, black-haired netminder from Winnipeg tossed aside, blocked and dived into everything thrown at him. He had only 24 shots to handle against 31 fired at McNeil but came up with remarkable saves.

PRESERVE THE PICKEREL

Spawn-laden pickerel will shortly be finding their way to ice-free rivers and streams of the district. Each fish will deposit 80,000 eggs in its "nest". Left to themselves, the female pickerel and her mate will reproduce and bring to maturity between 200 and 300 fish and over a period of four years will produce 1,000 to 1,200 active fish, the first 300 of which will reproduce others. The result: well-stocked streams and plenty of fish for everybody.

But looming behind this attractive piscatorial picture is the menace of the annual spring slaughter. Synonymous with the approach of the pickerel to spawning grounds, spears are being sharpened in darkened garages, kitchens and other places. Dip-nets and grappling irons are being readied. The pickerel killer is getting prepared to strike. Acting with him will be spawn-destroying fish, weather conditions and pollution. A heavy toll of spawning pickerel and their eggs is exacted each year through this media.

Nothing much can be done regarding the spawn-eating perch, bullheads, suckers, eels which follow the pickerel. Lots can be said and nothing done about the weather. Pollution can be reduced perhaps, but something can and will be done regarding the wanton slaughter of these producing fish by those who apparently derive enjoyment from nocturnal spearnig and other illegal fishing activities.

During the past few years, hundreds of spawning pickerel have been caught, a great number tossed aside to rot on river or stream bank because of the killer lust of some of these after-dark "sportsmen." this is especially true of the district extending between Trenton and Shannonville, with emphasis on the Salmon River near the latter place. Game overseers and police have done a fine job in curbing the practice, but they cannot be in a dozen places at the sime time.

True a great number of those taking pickerel illegally do not do so merely for thee fun of fishing. Some do it for financial gain, selling their catches to friends and neighbors, others merely take sufficient for their own needs. In any event the temptation is strong, but that does not relieve any of the responsibility of breaking the law. All are guilty.

Let's' put it this way. A farmer would not kill a cow about to fresh, nor a sow carrying a litter of pigs. He would not decapitate a setting hen with eggs ready to hatch. Or in a broader sense, the farmer wishing to replace his herd with new stock would not kill the entire herd before it had freshened.

A government official has stated that if the taking of female fish at spawning time continues there is a possibility of a complete loss of reproducton for at least three seasons. This will lead to one thing, the posting of all streams and inland lakes in this district with fishing strictly prohibited until the fish population is back to normal.

Three very important points should be considered by those who purchase pickerel out of season. First if the vendor is without a license he would be in illegal possession, and which state is immediately yours when the purchase is completed. Second, if the fish were taken in the Moira River or other inland water it is illegal by reason of a closed season. And third, and this is very important the flesh of any fish just before or after the period of production is not properly edible, and worst of all, if it is a female fish and taken before the spawn is deposited, you are in possession of 100 fish, for even under unfavorable circumstances the hatch would yield that much.

So when you buy a pickerel or any other game fish taken during closed season, it is not only illegal, but if you enjoy angling or if you cater to the tourist business, you are helping to eat the proverbial cake and speeding the approaching catastrophe.

It has been announced that the law governing the taking of fish illegally will be rigidly enforced. Game overseers and conservation staffs will be augmented. No matter if you are the local equivalent of the Aga Khan or Mickey from across the tracks, the Colonel's lady or Judy O'Grady, if found fishing illegally, or in illegal possession, you will feel the full force of the law.

The present picture as far as game fish is concerned, is alarming but not discouraging providing every local citizen gives his co-operation. The Game and Fish Associations of Belleville and Napanee in co-operation with the Department of Lands and Forest, are exerting every effort to conserve the game fish of the district. They believe that with proper protection and treatment the fish will in their own way provide this area with fine angling and fishing for all concerned as well as making it attractive to tourists who intend spending vacations in this part of Ontario.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, April 2—(AP)—There probably is nothing Bill Veeck would like more than to have another big-league baseball team to promote—preferably in New York . . . Perched on an office desk, Bill took a quick tour from the "Iron Curtain to Hawaii, with various detours, but he wound up verbally as well as physically in the big town . . . "We (meaning himself and Abe Saperstein), were in Hawaii looking over some Japanese ball players," Bill began, after a quick jump from the Russian embassy in Washington where he had discussed a projected visit inside the iron curtain by Abe's Harlem Globetrotters . . . "Three of them (the Japanese, of course) looked pretty good. They're under contract in Japan, but I think maybe we can get them . . . That's the last untapped reservoir of talent and I'd like to have a few good players stashed away in case I ever get into operation again."

Smart Operator

Veeck's listeners pricked up their ears because "operation" to Bill means big-league stuff . . . It developed that he was talking about his Oklahoma City club, with an eye to the future . . . "We already have three boys from Mexico," he continued. "You see, if you get hold of a club you can't buy a team—I'm not like Briggs or Yawkey, I have to make money . . . So I have about a half a dozen good boys stashed away and I bring them up and I'm a smart guy . . . That's why we went independent this year. If you have a working agreement and a good player, you can't keep him." . . . A question focused attention on the Giants, and Veeck sighed at the thought of a club which drew 1,600,000 customers in its best season.

COBL An Independent Organization; Will Not Affiliate With O.B.A.

The Canadian Baseball League for the first time in its history, will operate as an independent league this year, it was decided at a meeting of the league executive and representatives held in Kingston yesterday.

The decision for non-affiliation with the Ontario Baseball Association was unanimous. Each club, however, will be permitted to affiliate individually if they so desire.

Other business involving heavy revision of rules, and the inauguration of an international tennis tournament in which Canada will meet the United States, were given as the main reasons for the league's decision to operate as an independent organization. It will, however, keep O.B.A. constitution, bonds and by-laws as basis of operations.

District Represented

Belleville, Batawa, Brockville, Picton and Kingston were represented at the meeting. It was also decided that the invited American clubs from Watertown and Governeur from N.Y. not made up their minds, but a combined team from Ogdensburg and Cornwall was anxious to enter. Smiths Falls were in favor of organization three and a definite decision will be handed down next week. The same situation is apparent in Napanee.

A letter from Mr. A Happle Dupont, RCAF, Trenton indicated their entry will be forthcoming from that station.

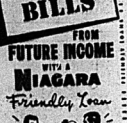
Heated Discussion re Players

A heated motion that players who have played one or more seasons with a team should have a release before signing with another entry precipitated a heated discussion over the status of the late Bellefonte player who threw in their lots with the Shoemen and Picton last year.

President Jack Carson, of the Belleville Baseball Association said it is his opinion that players are roaming in Belleville should play for that city's team, but he was willing to compromise if a rigid enforcement of the reserve rule insured another team's chances of entering.

The discussion was a lengthy one, and nothing definite came from it except that a meeting of representatives of the Belleville, Picton and Batawa teams was called for 8 p.m. o'clock Thursday night at the city Hall Belleville.

On Wednesday night the Belleville Baseball Association executive and directorate will meet at 8 p.m. in the city hall to discuss this and other important matters.



Heated discussion centered around the ruling that the teams were allowed as many imported players as they desired to bring in. Kingston voiced an objection, declaring a restriction but the motion carried that the ruling be left unchanged.

The entry fee was left at $25.00 President Bob Nesbitt, Kingston requested that all entries and fees be submitted at the next meeting of the executive set for Wednesday, April 11th.

Kramer Defeats Pancho Gonzales For Tennis Crown

(By The Canadian Press)

Big Jack Kramer powered-stroked and dummy-curved Richard (Pancho) Gonzales to win the Philadelphia Inquirer's $10,000 round-robin professional tennis tournament in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3 Saturday at Philadelphia.

Kramer, winner of $3,500 first-place money, vindicated a sub-par performance in the same tournament a year ago. He was soundly walloped then by Gonzales in three straight sets.

Kramer told reporters later he is finishing with exhibition tennis tours.

The 20-year-old champion explained that he doesn't want to become big-hearted if "I know I can beat any guy in the business today on a long trip."

Kramer said he would be back next year to defend his indoor title, but one-night stands on cross-country professional jaunts are a thing of the past.

At Syracuse, Louis D'Annunzio, baseball scout for Detroit Tigers in Ontario and Michigan, said Saturday night that the next few years will bring many opportunities for Canadian players to make it in the United States big league.

The United States draft will leave many openings in the ranks of ball players, he said at a dinner held to honor baseball, bowling and rifle teams which won championships for Listowel during 1950.

At Boston, Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Sunday night that no decision has been reached yet on distribution of proceeds of Saturday night's 1-1 match between Toronto Maple Leafs played the Montreal Canadiens.

Campbell told a reporter there will be a meeting first"—apparently referring to a session of club owners.

Normally a large proportion of proceeds of the first four games of a playoff goes into a player pool and the last three games to the clubs.

Lightweight champion Ike Williams will substitute for ailing Billy Graham in a 10-rounder against welterweight Fittie Pruden at St. Catharines, Ont., at the Chicago Stadium April 11, the International Boxing Club announced Saturday.

Graham has been sidelined by an attack of virus pneumonia. Pruden is a promising welter contender after recent victories over Tony Janiro, Beau Jack and Jim Carter.

A benefit boxing show for promoter Bill Jenkins ill in hospital will be held April 22 under the auspices of the Ontario Boxing Association it was announced Sunday at Hamilton.

Promoters from various parts of the province decided on the benefit at a meeting held during the weekend.

PREDICTS RISE IN MILK

London, Ont., April 2 (CP)— Ontario Liberal Leader Walter C. Thomson Sunday night predicted milk will be selling at 21 cents a quart in Toronto before the end of the month. The increase, he said, will probably set the pattern for increases in other centres.

He urged a provincial government subsidy on milk of "at least one cent" until the recently-formed milk board has possession of all the facts and "a fair price" has been set.

Pennant Talk Rife among Giants After Lean Years

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 2— (AP) — This could be the year the New York Giants have been waiting for since 1927. After many lean seasons in the Polo Grounds, pennant talk is running high.

Manager Leo Durocher, a talented driving boss, has a young ball club with fine pitching, blazing speed and a flashy double-play combination in Alvin Dark and Eddie Stanky.

Scoring runs is the Giant's big problem. They finished next to last in batting with a team average of .258 last season, and were fifth in their old specialty, homers.

Bobby Thomson, a shocking disappointment in '50, must regain his old form for the Giants to be contenders. Thomson dropped so badly from his .309 pace of '49 that Durocher once had him batting eighth last summer. In late season he got back on the track to finish with .253, and hit 25 homers.

Durocher, never one for predictions on how his club will finish, thinks the team is improved over last year. It goes without saying that he'll need a better one to win, for his '50 team hovered around the .500 mark most of the summer before its scorching September spurt stole third place from Boston.

Durocher knows Sal Maglie's 18-4 year was phenomenal with his string of 45 scoreless innings (.236), the first-string catcher, left field, Thomson (.253) in centre and Don Mueller (.301) or Clint Hartung (.302) in right.

The Giants finally have decided to remake Hartung into an outfielder from a pitcher. He has been coming along in fine style and may alternate with Mueller playing against lefthanders.

The infield is the same that finished last year with Monte Irvin (.300) on first, Stanky (.300) on second, Dark (.279) at short and Henry Thompson (.289) at third.

Whitey Lockman (.308) is in

"Who wants to say Maglie and Hearn between them won't win 26 games," said Durocher. "I'm not saying Maglie will win 18 again. Just the two of them together will win 29 or more."

Larry Jansen (19-12) is the accepted ace of the staff. He also had five shutouts, Sheldon Jones (13-16) is Leo's other regular starter, with southpaws Dave Koslo (13-18) and Montis Kennedy (5-4) for lefthanded power.

Ray Noble, a Cuban who used to play in the Negro National League, has been the talk of the training camp. A powerfully-built man with a .316 average at Oakland, he has won himself a job right behind Wes Westrum (.236), the first-string catcher.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Each bid in bridge has its limits. It starts with a minimum sum of values and ends with a maximum. Above and below these extremes is a different bid or a pass.

An opening bid of one starts with a minimum of five tricks, of which four are high cards, among which are two sures. The limit for this bid is eight tricks. After which a two bid takes over.

A simple overcall of one starts with a minimum of five tricks, of which two are high cards, among which is one sure. The limit for this bid is four tricks with two sures. After which other bids take over.

Six or seven tricks are still in the simple overcall category if less than four high cards and two sures are among them. It is the high card and sure trick content that graduates into a higher class.

Suppose you have a hand like the one shown here:

♥Q J 10 6 2
♦K 7
♣K 8 4 3

If south opens with a bid of one diamond this west hand makes a simple overcall of one heart. It contains seven tricks, four of which are high cards. But only one is a sure trick.

If south opens with a bid of one spade this west hand makes a simple overcall of two hearts. With less than two sure tricks it is still no better than a simple overcall bid.

If north opens with a no-trump and south bids two spades this west hand makes a simple overcall of three hearts. It is still no better than a simple overcall with jack of two suits.

Change the king of diamonds to an ace of diamonds and the king of clubs to a jack of clubs. Although it then has two sure tricks, it has only three high cards. It is still a simple overcall.

What I am trying to tell you is this: A simple overcall hand elevates to a higher class bid when it contains four highs and two sures, or better. Keep your bids within bounds.

Hollywood, April 2—(AP)—Donald Cook has just walked across the stage, looking like anybody's favorite aunt. When the wave of applause died down, she squinted a smile and sighed: "It's wonderful to play" Josephine Hull had reached the height of her career that moment at the Fanfares Theatre last Thursday night. She embraced the Oscar she had won for her supporting role in "Harvey" and walked off stage.

"Yes, that is the highest honor I have ever been given," she told me. "Frank Fay said I won the Donaldson award for appearing in 'Harvey' as a play. But the academy award is much better known.

Not Sure Thing

"Really, I wouldn't have been surprised if I hadn't won. I had the advantage over the other contenders in that I had played the role for four years on the stage and knew it well.

Everyone agrees that it couldn't have happened to a better lady. In her 50 years in the theatre, she has created a host of admirers.

She was born 67 years ago in Newton, just outside Boston. In 1902 she joined a Boston stock company at $6 a week. She travelled in several road companies until she married Shelley Hull, older brother of actor Henry Hull.

"I gave up the stage so we could be together," she recalled. She retired for nine years, until 1919, when her husband died in the flu epidemic.

She intends to keep the stage her primary interest, limiting her films to a one-a-year contract for Universal-International. Her current assignment is "Fine Day," in which she again is cavorting with animals.

"First it was Harvey," she laughed, "now I'm playing with a skunk named Annabelle. Fortunately for me, Annabelle has been defrosted."

WILL RECEIVE MEDALS

London April 2 (AP) —The persons who spirited the Stone of Scone from Westminster Abbey Christmas Day will receive medals for their work from Scottish Nationalists, London newspapers said Sunday.

They also stand a chance of being brought into court if the police ever catch up with them.

Published pictures showed the medal on one side contains these words:

"Presented on behalf of the Scottish people to blank for services rendered 25th-31st December 1950."

On the other side a jubilant Scottish unicorn prances on the throne while the English lion noticeably is not.

Prime Minister Returns Home After Holiday

OTTAWA, April 2 (CP)— Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, tanned and refreshed, returned Sunday night to a desk-top capital after a week-long holiday in the sun. A big transport plane picked up Mr. St. Laurent and Trade Minister Howe in Bermuda earlier Sunday.

Mr. St. Laurent who returns to his parliamentary duties when the Commons comes back from its Easter recess today, said he had a "very, very pleasant" holiday with much of the time spent resting and golfing. The weather was "most delightful."

"How were the golf scores?" A reporter asked.

The Prime Minister paused, grinned, shot a glance at Mr. Howe and gave this diplomatic answer: "The scores were satisfactory for all who were playing."

Toronto Marlies Will Open Series In Barrie Tonight

Toronto, April 2 — (CP) — A temporary solution early today averting a collapse of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A final between Barrie Flyers and the Toronto Marlboros.

The Marlboros will travel to Barrie tonight to open the best-of-seven series and a meeting Wednesday will attempt to work out a solution for the dispute between the two cities over Sunday afternoon games in Toronto. Barrie had refused to play in Toronto on Sundays and the Marlboros countered by saying they wouldn't open the series tonight if Barrie persisted in its stand.

George Pantier, O.H.A. assistant secretary announced he had persuaded the two teams to start the series with the Barrie game tonight and a Toronto game Wednesday night. The Wednesday meeting would settle the Sunday matter.

Leighton (Hap) Emms, coach and manager of the Flyers, was firm last night. "We will play in Toronto any time you want us, afternoon or night—but we won't play Sunday."

Said Stafford Smythe of the Marlboros: "I can't see why we can't have our own home dates. We are willing to play any time up there."

He added that the O.H.A. at a general meeting earlier in the season agreed to Sunday hockey but Emms wasn't at the meeting because "he was in Rouyn, where his team was playing Rouyn-Noranda."

Pantier gave the O.H.A. standing: "We will not be party to play hockey on Sunday if they don't approve of it. We are not against Sunday sport, of course, but we won't make any team play it." He added that under O.H.A. rules if a team defaults it is out for the rest of the season.

Sunday sport is permitted in Toronto between 1:30 and 6 p.m. and Toronto O.H.A. clubs played on Sundays during the season.

QUEBEC CITADELS IN

Three Rivers Que., April 2—(CP)— Quebec Citadels Saturday night won the Quebec Junior hockey league playoffs edging Three Rivers Reds 3-2 in overtime.

The victory gave Cits the best-of-seven series in straight games.

Wingers Bruce Cline and Bernie Guay tallied for Cits in the first and overtime frames. Pierre Brillant scored for Reds in the third period to force extra time.

Cits took the 1:38 of the overtime to end the series, Guay scoring on a pass from Jean Beliveau.

Costello, 12 Others Cited for Contempt

Washington, March 31. (AP)—The Senate topped off the session-packed hearings of its crime committee Friday by voting contempt citations against 13 balky witnesses headed by Frank Costello, reputed New York gambling kingpin.

At the same time Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep.-Wis.) announced he and Senator Charles Tobey (Rep., N.H.) would introduce a resolution within a week to extend the life of the committee until January 15.

Conviction of contempt carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $1,000 fine on each count.

Costello was cited for a refusal to tell the committee how much he was worth, financially, and to give other information.

Most of the others declined to give information on the grounds it might tend to incriminate them, or they refused to appear before television cameras set up in the hearings.

The only contempt case growing out of the committee's investigation that so far has gone to trial was that of Harry Russell, Chicago and Miami gambler.

He was indicted on 60 counts but a federal judge here threw the case out of court, contending that Russell was within his constitutional rights in refusing to answer questions on the ground of possible self-incrimination.

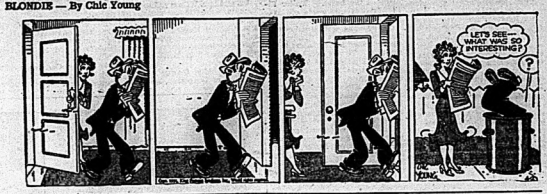
Answer to Saturday's Puzzle:



GREATEST OCEAN DEPTH

Washington, March 31 — Now generally regarded as the greatest known ocean depth is Cape Johnson Deep, northeast off Mindanao in the Philippines. It was accurately measured as 34,440 feet in July, 1950, notes the National Geographic Society. This figure replaces a 1927 determination of 35,400 feet in the same area, produced with less exact instruments of that day.

ROAD TESTED from Quebec to Key West and back under the exacting supervision of famous American Automobile Association, test cars were not behind ...not pampered. They were driven as you would drive your own car.

AAA Certified Results: Cars using NEW Sunoco Dynalube were driven over 2,000 miles, on the average, before a drop of oil had to be added.

New Sunoco Dynalube Motor Oil

Combines in a Single Oil All the Finest Features of Canada's Premium Motor Oils..Actually Improves Condition of Most Engines

WHATEVER CAR YOU DRIVE : : : newest 1951 or earlier model . . . now you can give it greater engine protection with NEW Sunoco Dynalube. This heavy-duty premium motor oil not only combines in one oil all the finest features of Canada's premium motor oils . . . it actually improves the condition of most engines.

If your car's engine is fouled by inferior motor oils and is not delivering the top performance it was built to give, change today to motor-conditioning NEW Sunoco Dynalube.

Check for yourself! See if your present motor oil gives all these great features, listed right on every can of NEW Sunoco Dynalube:

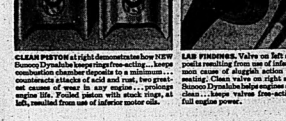
1. Tough HEAT-RESISTANT BODY assures you long motor oil mileage.

2. Fully DETERGENT-DISPERSANT — NEW Sunoco Dynalube cleans engines and keeps them clean. Road dust and contamination from normal combustion are held in harmless suspension until oil is drained at the regular interval.

3. FREE-FLOWING and METAL-CLINGING qualities of NEW Sunoco Dynalube help you avoid costly engine repairs.

4. ANTI-RUST and ANTI-ACID — NEW Dynalube counteracts two greatest causes of wear in any engine.

5. High FILM STRENGTH and RING-SEALING ACTION—insure longer-lasting engine efficiency.



NEW Sunoco Dynalube is one of the very few oils that meets or exceeds manufacturers' recommendations for all 1951 passenger cars.

CLEAN PISTON at right demonstrates how NEW Sunoco Dynalube keeps rings free-acting ... keeps combustion chamber deposits to a minimum ... counteracts attacks of acids ... thus helps prevent causes of wear in any engine ... prolongs engine life. Fouled piston with stuck rings, at left, resulted from use of inferior motor oils.

The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Rutt

Old Mr. Lyons of the Lyons bread company had gone on the rampage of his career.

For once Reagan could make no headway with the testy and mealy-mouthed old gentleman. Mr. Lyons, apparently was on an unprecedented spree of campaign killing and he refused to be thwarted. In vain Reagan argued high-pressured, bullied even. Mr. Lyons replied with threats and hints of dire steps that he might take at any moment. He held the possible removal of his account over the agency like a club.

Meanwhile nothing that Frey and Company evolved seemed to suit him. Blossham and the copy group worked their hearts out. Pat Vernon made and remade layouts by the score, only to have them junked with discouraging rapidity.

For this intolerable situation Reagan assumed entire responsibility. "It's my fault," he told Ede ruefully. "I rammed that newspaper campaign down his throat a few weeks ago and I shouldn't have done it. He didn't like the series and he's been belaying for us ever since."

Ede smiled. "How do things stand now?" he asked.

"Not so good, Chuck and Pat—they're both dead on their feet by the way—are getting up two more campaigns. One we believe in and the other's an alternate, to have up our sleeves. We're going to see Lyons again Friday." He sighed wearily. "And I suppose it'll be the same old story."

"You honestly feel that we've made every effort, don't you Dan? We've given the best we could to give Lyons what he ought to have?"

Reagan nodded. "Even beyond that. When he wouldn't take what he ought to have, we swallowed our sacred principles and tried to give him what we thought he wanted. That didn't work either. He doesn't seem to know what he wants."

"That," said Ede, "is all I have to know."

On Friday when Reagan Stoneham and Vernon were about to leave for the interview, Ede jointed them. Reagan looked at him inquiringly and she inclined her head.

"Just let it disturb you," she said, "but I'm going along. To see for myself."

She did see. As Reagan presented the campaign she sat unobtrusively in the corner of Mr. Lyon's office and watched that primly little egotist methodically kill the ads over which Stoneham and Vernon had slaved. His objections seemed to her hazy, not clearly defined, childish and trivial. There was nothing that could not have been remedied with a few strokes of the pen. Yet Mr. Lyons turned the entire campaign down.

Doggedly, Reagan trotted out the spare. It met the same fate. Mr. Lyons pooh-hooed it from the start.

"I don't know what's come over your agency," he said at last glaring at them fiercely.

Reagan was close to the breaking point. He controlled himself with visible effort.

"Mr. Lyons," he said, "we've brought you at least three sets of five campaigns in the last week. We thought they were good. Perfect. But let's grant that they were only 90 percent. With a little fixing . . ."

Lyons interrupted, seizing upon the word "fixing." He waved his hand irritably. "Fixing. You can't fix anything that's basically wrong. Can't be done." Suddenly his eye fell on Ede sitting almost forgotten in her corner. "I'm very glad you came today, Miss Frey. Because I understand that you've been in charge of the agency since — ever since your father passed away. Now you must see that this situation can't go on. What, Miss Frey, are you going to do about it?"

It was the moment Ede had been waiting for. Very deliberately she lighted a cigaret, although she knew that Mr. Lyons objected to tobacco. For a moment she looked at him. Her eyes narrowed.

"I'm going," she said succinctly "to spend $90,000."

She heard Dan Reagan's involuntary gasp. She was aware of an apprehensive look flashing to Chuck Stoneham's face; of Mr. Lyons's complete mystification.

"I don't understand you," Lyons said, mouth pursed.

"You will in just a second," Ede's voice was very calm. "Ninety-thousand is approximately the commission we make on your appropriation Mr. Lyons. Well, Frey and Company is going to sacrifice it."

Lyons' face was a blank.

"Come, come," he said. "I don't know what you mean."

"I thought," said Ede, "that I was being very clear. I'm asking you, Mr. Lyons, to take your account to some other agency."

At that point a data book which reposed on Reagan's knees fell to the floor noisily, violently. Ede kept her eyes straight ahead. But out of the corners of one of them she caught a glimpse of Pat Vernon. He wore a grin a foot long.

Mr. Lyons was staring at her, utterly baffled.

"Wh-what?" he said.

"It's very simple," Ede said. "I'm declining, under the present conditions, to do any more advertising for Lyons' Bread."

"But this—but this . . . why it's outrageous. I never heard of such a thing."

"I quite agree with you, Mr. Lyons. It is outrageous to have everything we do thrown out for no good reason.

Lyons looked a little like a cornered mouse. He sought refuge in paternalism.

"Young lady," he said, "you don't know what you're doing. You don't understand business. If your father were alive . . ."

"He'd have never stood for being bullied," Ede interrupted. "Mr. Lyons, I refuse to have our people driven and hounded this way. Commission or no commission."

Her eyes bored into his. And it was Lyons who looked away first.

"Now, now," he said, fumigs a little, "we don't have to have a scene about it. I admit I've been driving you people lately. But I wanted the—the best advertising I could get," he finished lamely. "We've given you the best we had to offer," Ede kept her voice flat, "but apparently it isn't good enough. That's why I suggest you make a change."

"Miss Frey," paternalism failing, Mr. Lyons tried reproach, "I did business with your father for over 20 yr. rrs. Our relations were always—well, usually — satisfactory. And now you want"—he shook his head—"to sever this relationship.

"I don't want to sever it at all," Ede said, "I'm being forced to, by any that I don't understand business, Mr. Lyons. Well, maybe I don't. But I do understand people, to some extent. I know that the way we've had to write our copy recently lately hasn't done our creative people any good. There's a thing called morale, you know, and rather than lose it at the agency, I'd sacrifice your account.

After Ede Frey spoke, Mr. Lyons began to fidget. "I'll tell you what I'm prepared to do, Miss Frey, I'll give your agency another chance. If you can bring—"

Ede's eyes, like green darts, stopped him. "It isn't a question of another chance. Frankly, we don't feel that our position requires one. And we're not going to setting up straw men for you to knock over. . . . Mr. Reagan has said, we've brought you some good campaigns lately. They represent our best thinking." She pointed to the ads that were the agency's choice. "Here is one of them. You don't want it and you didn't want the others. I'm sorry, but we can't do any more."

Mr. Lyons almost wiggled in his chair. And Ede knew that she had him licked.

"Well," he said, pulling one of the advertisements toward him, "I might—this is good bread advertising, all right. Mind you, though, I'm not giving in entirely. I'm not enthusiastic about this material. It'll need alteration. A lot of alterations!"

Ede let him save face as best he could. "We're perfectly willing to make alterations, Mr. Lyons," she said. "When they're satisfied with what we know we're making them."

Lyons fussed on for a few minutes.

"I'll have to keep these ads," he said. "I'll look them over very carefully and send them back. With the—er—revisions indicated."

"Just as you like," Ede said and got up quickly to her feet. . . . On the pavement outside, while Chuck Stoneham dazedly searched for a taxi, Reagan mopped his face with a handkerchief, then held out his hand.

"Lady," he said, "you win. That was like listening to sweet, sweet music. . . . But you sure took a gamble."

Ede laughed. "Oh, I don't think so. I figured Mr. Lyons hadn't the faintest intention of leaving us. I'm sure that, deep down, he's perfectly satisfied. If he'd really wanted to change agencies, he could have done it any time in the last 20 years. He was bluffing. . . . And I thought it time to call his bluff. But I suppose," she added, "that I did it like a dumb neophyte."

"Uh-huh," said Reagan, "you're dumb, all right. Like a fox."

And in the taxi Pat Vernon said, with the grin still on his brown monkeyish face, "Say would anyone mind if I didn't go back to the office? I've got to celebrate the first and only time I've heard a client told to go chase himself."

Several days later after the 'Lyons' affair,' as that episode had come to be known at the agency, Jeff Frey went on a short vacation. While he was gone Ede and Reagan received an unexpected invitation from Mr. Northcott to go for a weekend cruise with him.

"Looks as if we might be getting onto a better footing with friend Northcott," said Reagan. "He doesn't ask everybody out on that swanky boat of his."

"You don't think he might have a bit of ax-grinding to do?"

Reagan's eyes clouded. "That's possible. But I've been thinking that maybe we've been wrong in suspecting Northcott of being up to something. He seems to be all for us. Of late, anyhow."

"I guess," Ede said, "that I've just got a nasty suspicious nature."

Northcott's cruiser was long, white and commodious, a thing of clean graceful lines, shining metal and decks scrubbed to the color of dried cherry-pits. She was moored in the East River, and off Montauk. How does that sound?"

"Grand," Ede said, smiling.

"Come and meet the rest of our party," said Northcott.

On the afterdeck they were presented to Mrs. Northcott, a tall, red-haired woman, handsome rather than pretty, and to a couple named Winwood.

Eight Orphaned In Bizarre Murder-Suicide

Incidents Occur Following Vicious Family Quarrel

Stoney Island, N. S., April 3 — (CP) — An inquest will be held Saturday into the deaths of a 65-year-old fisherman and his wife, following a vicious family argument involving bedlam, shootings and a drowning.

Details of the Sunday quarrel were meagre but police pieced together this story from several of the eight white - skinned orphans who saw the drama.

Duncan Ross, they said, became embroiled in a vicious after-dinner quarrel with his wife. The cause was not quite clear.

Suddenly, he seized a crutch from one of his crippled children and struck his wife with what he "terrible" beating. He also attacked his son Percy, 21.

Mrs. Ross escaped to a bedroom and locked herself in. The enraged husband broke down the door, a daughter, who received several blows.

Police said Ross grabbed a shotgun and fired twice into his wife's room, the shots at close range. Then he turned his own shoulder.

Drowns Self in Ocean

Ross then threw the gun aside and ran for the water about a quarter mile away. By that time neighbors in the district or some of the islands in Shelburne Island, Nova Scotia's southwest coast, were arriving on the scene.

Reaching the shore, he climbed into a small boat and rowed some 300 yards from shore. More than a score of villagers saw him plunge over the side and drown.

Orphaned were Clifton, 20; Cassie, 13; Morris, 18; Phillip, 12; Florence, 16; Dorothy, 22, and Mrs. Milton Francis of nearby Brass Hill with a baby after all the younger children at present.

20 Yugoslavians Glad to Be Back in Canada

Montreal, April 3. (CP)— Twenty Montrealers, who left here three years ago for their legendary homeland with smiles on their faces, came back Saturday with tears in their eyes.

"We have been through torture, we have lost everything and now we just want to live like human being again," an elderly man said tearfully in an interview. He was accompanied by his wife and family.

The returning Canadians were part of a group who left here aboard the Yugoslav transport Radnik, in response to a call from Marshal Tito, to help rebuild the Yugoslav and their descendants to return home and help rehabilitate the country.

One of the returning Canadians said "you were told Yugoslavia was a wonderful place to live. What they should have said is "it is a wonderful place to leave."

The coroner, Dr. Herbert Young found a fatally damper on the thermostat-controlled furnace responsible.

Mrs. Cowie was buried in Little Lake Cemetery and the two brothers in Welcome Cemetery, Port Hope.

Dues Increased For Auto Workers

Cleveland, April 3—(AP)—The C.I.O. United Automobile Workers Union voted itself a $15,000,000 strike fund and a new monthly dollar political-action kitty Monday night by approving a hotly-contested 6-month dues boost from $1.50 to $2.50.

U.A.W. president Walter Reuther and Secretary-treasurer Emil Mazey spearheaded the debate for passage of the dues increase.

The anti-dues boost arguments centred around charges that union "pork-choppers" would benefit most from the extra money. This term is applied to union office-holding unionists holding non-elective jobs.

The opposition also charged that U.A.W. funds had been used to raid the membership of farm equipment workers, one of the left-wing unions kicked out of the C.I.O.

U.A.W. leaders have said that a bargaining strike is in the offing sometime, the dues boost would enable the union to build a $15,000,000 strike fund by 1955. That's when all the big auto industry contracts expire. Thirty cents of the $2.50 was earmarked for international union and local strike funds.

The snow moving disturbance responsible for the bloody, cool weather which has prevailed over the Great Lakes area during the past few days is centred over the eastern Kirkland Lake region.

U.S. FORCES CROSS PARALLEL ON WIDE FRONT

MacArthur Confident After Survey of Front

Tokyo, April 3—AP—Elements of an American division today crossed the 38th parallel in force on the western Korean front.

Field dispatches said the crossing was "aggressive but cautious" along a 10-mile front.

The allied force met only light communist resistance.

In the air, American jet fighters shot down two Russian type MiG jets and damaged three others over northwest Korea.

They were out along with allied bombers and U.S. Mustang fighters lashing the communist rail and road network—the "Achilles Heel" — which the communists have improved with vehicles supplying their biggest offensive build-up of the Korean war.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur said the big, yesterday south Korean troops five miles inside north Korea on the west coast. On his return to Tokyo he said:

Exploit Enemy's Weakness

"The enemy's weakness in the air and on the sea and his lack of artillery and heavy ground weapons is being beautifully exploited by our magnificent troops."

The supreme commander jeeped across Parallel 38 about 50 miles east of the central front, where some 500,000 Chinese and north Korean communist soldiers are massing for their long-expected spring offensive.

MacArthur said "tactical conditions along the entire Korean front remain favorable. Our morale generally remains unchanged.

Intelligence sources placed the communist build-up on the central front at 441,000 or more troops. Many are veterans of World War II.

They may be backed by twice that many rear-echelon troops.

A Chinese division at full strength numbers about 10,000 men. North Korean divisions ranged from 4,000 to 8,000 men. The 63 communist divisions probably are less than full strength.

Toronto Dairies Raise Special Milk Prices

Toronto, April 3. (CP)—Toronto's three dairies today announced price increases in most products, including milk which went price-frozen by the Ontario Milk Control Board following the recent milk strike.

Prices of special milk, chocolate milk, skim milk and buttermilk were raised a half cent a quart. Cream prices were increased from one to three cents a half pint.

Milk prices were frozen at 20 cents a quart, 12 cents a pint and 20 cents in stores. The ceiling applies only to whole milk having no less than 3.25 per cent butterfat and no more than 3.8 per cent.

THE BLOCKED INCREASE

Oakville April 3—(CP)—A tie vote in the town council last night blocked a $250-a-year salary increase for police chief John B. Berry. Mayor Ernest Marks, who opposed the boost said, "I don't think he does a proper job of policing this town."

Korean Airmen Talk of Bigger Helicopters Being Used in War

New York, April 3—(AP)—In Korea airmen are taking about bigger helicopters, great dragon-like capsule carrying more passengers at faster speeds.

A 10-passenger helicopter already is in use in the Korean theatres, plying on specifications as to size- and speed-changes specific. A bare announcement contained the word "transport helicopter" and disclosed that it was a five-blade rotor.

Obviously something new—and with immense possibilities—is on the drawing board.

In Korea the helicopter is doing a limited but tremendous job. Helicopters have picked thousands of wounded and brought them back to field hospitals. Maj.-Gen. Edgar E. Hume, surgeon-general in Tokyo, said the helicopters, and the use of whole blood, are the two great factors in cutting deaths from battlefield wounds to the lowest point in the history of warfare.

Helicopters also are being used for air-sea rescues, artillery observation, and sometimes for supply-drops in Korea.

But they aren't beginning to come into its own, said aeronautics expert Igor Sikorsky who has been working on them for 30 years. Development of helicopters

"It would be possible in the immediate future, to build machines capable of carrying 50 people and with speeds of 150 miles an hour or more."

He could mean a totally new technique in assault-landing operations. In the Second World War the British used gliders, the actual amphibious operation was conducted by hundreds of landing craft, relatively slow and vulnerable to even light artillery.

Sikorsky's model of helicopters, each carrying 50 to 100 men, took over the job!

Experience in Korea has shown that they are not unduly vulnerable to fire from the ground, much less the air. They will put troops ashore more rapidly than the boats.

More important, they could conceivably make shore defences obsolete, since they could discharge troops behind any such gun positions.

Legislature Introduces Bill To Tighten its Supervision Over Charitable Organizations

Toronto, April 3 — (CP) — A bill to tighten supervision over charitable organizations which solicit funds from the public was introduced in the Ontario legislature yesterday.

Introduction of the measure by Attorney-General Porter follows a series of complaints in the House last week about the fund-raising practices of the March of Dimes and the United Appeal campaign for Britain.

One effect of the bill is to bring corporations organized for charitable, educational and other public purposes under provisions of the Charitable Accounting Act. Religious and fraternal organizations will remain exempt.

The measure would permit any person to make a formal complaint about collection or use of funds by a charitable organization. The complaint would be heard by a county judge, who, if he deemed necessary, could order a public investigation by the provincial public trustee.

The powers of investigation by the public trustee are such that he may seize records, or obtain a royal commission, authorized to hear witnesses and take evidence.

Attorney - General Porter said the bill, an amendment to the Charitable Accounting Act, was prompted by criticism expressed last week by Leo Bodkin, Tory leader, of the United Emergency Fund for Britain. Mr. Bodkin said the fund had netted only $330 worth of food parcels to Britain from a total of $833,000 in collections. He had urged that greater control be exercised over charitable organizations.

The bill will be one of the last placed before the House which is expected to prorogue at the end of this week.

Rent Control Bill Approved

Another major piece of legislation, the bill authorizing Ontario to take over rent controls when the field is vacated by the federal government April 30, was approved after clause-by-clause study. It will probably be given third reading and royal assent within the next few days.

The Attorney - General said a legislature committee, to be set up as an advisory body on rent control problems, will meet shortly. It will cover many of the details involved in rentals legislation.

Federal controls will be taken over unchanged, and present offices and staff will continue to handle administration. However, the province is empowered by the bill to make changes by order-in-council.

Agriculture Minister Kennedy announced that a bill currently on the legislature's order paper will be amended to permit farm marketing agencies to pool their produce if two-thirds of the measure was immediately approved by legislature. Only minor changes are in the legislature.

Premier Frost told the House that it has been difficult in the past for the province to pass pooling legislation. The reason was because of constitutional barriers. There has been no question that personal income taxes in the lower brackets should be reduced because of the high cost of living. There are indications that many provinces will reduce their luxury commodities will be hard hit.

Liquor stores in some provinces have reported large sales to clubs, but Premier Frost anticipated an increase in taxes. Some motor car dealers have been urging manufacturers to buy cars before the budget is introduced.

The C.C.F. party has been pressing Mr. Abbott to revive the excess profits tax, in effect during the Second World War, to deal of the profits made by large corporations.

Few Minor Reductions

The spring budget made a few minor tax reductions. The "baby budget" in the fall increased taxes on long distance terminals, hotel tickets, phone booths, subways and railroad stations.

Each half dollar, a coin specially minted by the federal government authorization, is in an envelope with a letter addressed "to an honest person."

BAD NEWS BUDGET TO BE PRESENTED NEXT TUESDAY

Higher Taxes Needed To Meet War Costs

Ottawa, April 3—(CP)—A "sad news" budget, fixing federal taxes for 1951, will be presented to the commons next week.

Finance Minister Abbott, barring "unforeseen contingencies," plans to bring down the budget Tuesday, April 10 at 8 p. m. EST. It will outline in detail the tax increases already forecast by Mr. Abbott and other members of the government.

They have said that tax increases are necessary to meet higher defence costs and to combat inflation. That is as far as they have gone.

Mr. Abbott, who will speak a few hours after the British budget has been presented to the United Kingdom parliament, will tell the commons how much more much more is going to be taken out of his pay cheque to help meet the costs of the cold war and the war in Korea.

Mr. Abbott has also been a lot of speculation about what will be done. Some observers guess a general increase of about a penny a the line. Others feel only selective increases will be announced. There is also speculation that personal income taxes in the lower brackets should be reduced because of the high cost of living.

Liquor stores in some provinces have reported large sales to clubs, but Premier Frost anticipated an increase in taxes. Some motor car dealers have been urging manufacturers to buy cars before the budget is introduced.

The C.C.F. party has been pressing Mr. Abbott to revive the excess profits tax, in effect during the Second World War, to deal of the profits made by large corporations.

WORK HALTED

Toronto, April 3—(CP)— With the ground already broken, work on the $400,000 Moss Park Recreation Centre has been halted by bad, because of the steel shortage. Mayor Hiram McCallum told city council yesterday an application for steel for the project was turned down by the federal government.

'Harsh and Unpleasant' Life Ahead for U.K. Says Gaitskell

London, April 3—(AP)—The government warned the British people today the life will be "harsh and unpleasant" this year, with wages buying less goods. It blamed Russia.

The picture of more austerity was drawn in the fifth annual economic survey by Hugh Gaitskell, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The survey pointed up the new task of defence rearmament.

"Not until the comunist leaders have been convinced that the western powers are impregnable may we hope to be able to concentrate once more on peaceful development of the world," he said.

Gaitskell, who took over last year from ailing Sir Stafford Cripps, must present his 1951 budget to parliament a week from today.

In general, he followed the pay-as-you-go path that Cripps marked out.

The survey predicted a four-per-cent increase in industrial production in 1951, compared with nine per cent last year but added "we cannot count on getting raw materials" even for a four-per-cent boost.

"At best, we face in the immediate future a decline in the rate of increase in the national output, worsening of the balance of payments, a fall in supplies of some consumer goods and continuing the low level of rentals.

A three-year arms program, costing a total of £4,700,000,000 ($13,160,000,000) over the planning. It will reach a peak in 1952 and 1953.

In this year alone, £120,000,000 will be spent on airplanes, £60,000,000 on tanks and other vehicles, a similar amount on ships and £18,000,000 on radio and radar equipment.

To make sure the arms flow on schedule, the powers and powers of direction over production will be used, including the allocation of labor and of storage space."

The survey estimated men and women in the armed forces will rise from an estimated 800,000 this year to about 900,000 in 1952 from now.

Output 500,000 now are working on arms production. This will be doubled by 1953-54.

The estimated trade in 1950, Britain earned a surplus of £220,000,000 but now, the survey said, "it would be impossible to maintain a surplus during a rearmament period."

The survey said the sterling area had a gold and dollar surplus of £300,000,000 in 1950, compared with a deficit £1,331,000,000 in 1949. Now "the reserves overcease to grow or even decline somewhat."

Protests Return Of Alleged Reds From Yugoslavia

Sudbury, Ont., April 3—(CP)— Peter Borovitch, leader of the Yugoslav colony here, protested today the return to Canada of men he said are avowed communists.

Mr. Borovitch declared that Sam Lazich, whom he described as the former local leader of the communist party, is returning from Yugoslavia after going there four years ago.

He said the federal government is "criminally soft and stupid . . . to readmit any of these people who are known to be communists."

Mr. Borovitch claimed the return of the Yugoslavs who left Canada were the most rabid communists in the country. Borovitch said: ". . . they were no good to this country and never will be."

MacArthur Wants More Canadians At Front as Soon as Possible

Vancouver, April 3 —(CP)— Gen. MacArthur wants "more Canadian soldiers in the Korean front lines as soon as they can get there," Brig. Rockingham of Canada's United Nations brigade said last night.

Brig. Rockingham had just returned by plane from Tokyo, where he had "a very valuable conference with the U.N. commander.

The brigadier made a 10-day tour of the Korean war theatre. He plans to lead the 2,500-man Canadian force, Wash., to Korea later this month.

Gen. MacArthur told me he wanted us in the line just as quickly as we can make it," Brig. Rockingham said reporters today.

He said his tour of the U.N.'s front line convinced him that "they could do with a few thousand more troops right now."

He reported that Gen. MacArthur had praised the "fine work" of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry who have been in action for several weeks.

Lt.-Gen. Matthew Ridgway, Eighth Army Commander, and all other U.N. field commanders also praised the Patricias.

Brig. Rockingham spent a day and a night with the Patricias in action. He also visited their base quarters—when he left the area 36 hours previously—was seven miles south of the 38th parallel.

"They can look out for themselves," he said, "and because the Canadians were faring in the rugged mount-in terrain.

The brigadier said of co-operation at the front is simply wonderful." Brig. Rockingham said.

In Japan, the brigadier visited Lt.-Col. F. R. Stone, commander of the Patricias who were forced to leave the front when he picked up "a mild dose of smallpox."

"It was very mild and he'll be out of hospital next Thursday" and will go right back to his Patr," he said.

Mother Beaten, Stepfather Slain By Woman's Son

Two Boarders Witness Shooting in Toronto Home

Toronto, April 3.—(CP)—An 18-year-old electrician's helper gave himself up to police last night after breaking up an argument between his mother and stepfather by firing a bullet that took the man's life.

In a brief court appearance today, Richard Cosentino was remanded until April 10 on a charge of murdering Robert Shepherd, 45, at Shepherd's east Toronto home.

The youth's mother and two boarders who witnessed the shooting said Shepherd had been drinking and was beating his wife and Cosentino attempted to intervene. Cosentino then ran to his boarding house and returned with the rifle. Witnesses said the youth again ordered Shepherd to leave his mother alone. Shepherd lunged at Cosentino and the youth fired.

Mrs. Shepherd said her husband completed about a dozen jobs as a barber and canned vegetables which she had prepared hastily after the kitchen table collapsed under the weight of the dinner dishes, pots and pans. A view she had prepared previously.

Negro Society Tries to Prove People are Honest

New York, April 3 — (AP) — On the theory that people are honest, a Negro educational organization today started losing new half dollars.

It expects to lose up to a possible $5,000,000 of the 50-cent pieces. It hopes to get its investment back, plus some.

Fifteen girls deliberately lost half dollars in Grand Central Terminal, hotel lobbies, phone booths, subways and railroad stations.

Each half dollar, a coin specially minted by the federal government authorization, is in an envelope with a letter addressed "to an honest person."

Negro Woman Dies at 110 At Owen Sound

Owen Sound, April 3. (CP)— Reputed to be at least 110 years old, although she herself stubbornly maintained that she was "only 96", Mrs. Robert Hornby, the oldest member of this city's Negro community, died at her home yesterday.

Her father, the late John (Daddy) Hall, was for many years noted as the city's town crier.

Ringing a bell and wearing a uniform, he used to patrol the streets calling out items of news and advertisements for coming attractions. He died at the age of 118 after having grown a third set of teeth and having regained his eyesight after several years of complete blindness.

The son of a Negro mother and a Mohawk Indian father, Hall was captured in childhood by a raiding American slave traders at his home near Amherstburg. He was sold as a slave to a Kentucky plantation owner named Catlett, the second in Canada.

Mrs. Hornby was the last survivor of "Daddy" Hall's family of 21 children. He was married five times.

Highway Travel Difficult Due To Flooded Areas

Montreal, April 3 — (CP) Road travel on the St. Lawrence River's north shore was a round - about business of fleet detours today following a flood at Berthierville, 40 miles northeast of here.

Water from the Chaleur River, a small stream emptying into the St. Lawrence, overflowed to a depth of three feet, cutting the Montreal - Quebec highway. Rail lines across the north shore of the highway are unaffected.

The provincial department closed the highway to Quebec to traffic. The south shore route was the only one left for motorists who have to cross the St. Lawrence by ferry from Ste. Angele de Laval to reach Three Rivers and the road north to Shawinigan Falls. Ferries also ply to Quebec City and crossing by ferry from Levis.

A 3km area on Montreal Island backed the water up into Pointe-Aux-Trembles where three - quarters of the town's basements were flooded. Another danger point was Repentigny on the St. Lawrence south shore opposite Montreal, where the water is not yet known to be at its crest.

Residents were ready to evacuate their homes near Ste. Marie, 30 miles south of where the Chaudiere River empties into the St. Lawrence. The water was a foot deep in the district.

Ameliasburg Wants to Join City School Area

Sequel to the city's wait-and-see policy on the High School Area question was enacted in cold fact yesterday afternoon at city council, when three councillors from Ameliasburg asked to be heard, and asked that they be given support in their move to stay in the Belleville high school area.

Two spokesmen of the three, Mr. Monkhurst and Harry Pulver, told the city council that the plans underway in South Hastings to build a second school for secondary education for rural pupils did not meet with approval from Ameliasburg. "Our pupils now have the opportunity of studying at B.C.I.V.S., and we believe the education they get there would be superior to anything they might get in the second school," they said.

Their own county council has already given three readings to a bill to allow them to withdraw from the South Hastings unit, and two to a by-law to permit them to join the Belleville area. "When we joined the South Hastings unit," they said, "we were under the impression that we would be able to send our pupils to city schools. Now the situation has changed."

Motion to Reduce City Speed Limit Is Defeated

A recommendation that representations be made to provincial authorities to have the speed limit within the city limits reduced to 25 miles per hour was defeated in city council yesterday afternoon by a one-vote margin.

The recommendation was introduced by Ald. William Argue, "to protect the children of residential areas" from speeding automobiles. Mr. Argue claimed that the reduction in speed of five miles per hour from the present limit would give children that much more protection, and would be worthwhile. He also claimed that "several delivery companies in the city are breaking the speed limit every day, particularly on Victoria Avenue."

Mr. Argue said that because of difficulty in obtaining cars for victims, motorists were operating at high speeds in order to get 45 miles an hour, and getting away with it. This statement brought the retort from Ald. Hollingsworth Thomas: "Well, if we can't control the speed of the motorist in 30 miles per hour, and they're travelling at 40, what difference will it make when the limit is lowered or not? That won't make convictions any easier."

Too Frugal Reason

Alderman Argue said that the obvious fault in the limit was that it operated over too broad a range. He reiterated that 20 miles limit could be applied to traffic in front of Albert College at 12 midnight and on the Bridge and Front Pic on Bridge Street at noon.

"It would be workable, and for that reason, we shouldn't pass it", Alderman Harry Rollins said, and was seconded by Ald. Hollingsworth Thomas.

The recommendation was defeated with Aldermen Clarke, Duffy, Porter, Haig, Lummiss and Argue supporting, and Aldermen Latimer, Hollingsworth Thomas, Hyde, Countryman and Mayor Foster against it.

Will Supervise Construction of New Church

Mr. Archie Greenwood, building superintendent of Calvary Temple, has come to Peterboro to ough to take charge of the construction of a new Pentecostal church in that city, which will seat 700 people.

Mr. Greenwood's wife, Sonja the Reverend Laurie Price spoke appreciatively of Mr. Greenwood's spiritual Christian character and the fact that he had given unstintingly of his time and energy in the construction of the new Belleville church.

Of kindly and cheerful disposition, Mr. Greenwood will be missed in this community, where he has gained the love and respect of all who were associated with him. Everywhere he has worked under his inspired leadership.

At the grand opening services Mr. Greenwood was interviewed by a journalist who said, "I suppose you are a proud man today —or is proud not the right word?"

"No—not proud," smiled Mr. Greenwood, "just happy — very, very happy. God deserves all the praise and all the glory. I'm happy that I was able to use me in the building of this church. It seems that God wants me to go on building churches and if that is His will, then that is what I am going to do."

Mr. Greenwood has built new Pentecostal churches in Toronto, Oshawa, Cobourg, the large tabernacle at Lakeshore Camp near Colborne which seats fifteen hundred people, as well as Calvary Temple in Belleville. His services have also been sought to build a new church in Napanee.

CAMPAIGN INITIATED

Hamilton, April 3—(CP)— A "war on cancer" has been declared by the Canadian Cancer Society. The society's campaign was initiated yesterday by the Hamilton Traffic Committee. All motorists who live near their work and do not ride their cars in business are being asked to leave them at home. Jack MacDonald, chairman of the committee, said, "it won't do any harm to get some exercise and will save the trouble of a diet."

Canadians Lulled by Capitalistic Thinking Habits Says CCF Speaker

One of the basic problems of Canada today is that her people cannot be persuaded to change their thinking habits. "Our whole national buildup and education facilities are designed to make people think of the capitalist system as eternal," said M. Young, Maritime director of organization for the C.C.F. party said here last night.

The speaker charged that because of inflation, the government of today, is using policies that "constitute a flagrant betrayal of the Canadian people, by stealing the value of their bonds and savings. They have let prices run wild, and they are bewildered— they don't know where they are going in this crisis of inflation."

Mr. Young was in the city to address the C.C.F. national expansion drive, and spoke to members of the local organization.

Canadians think this capitalistic system has the final answer to it can't change, and that things are as good as they ever can be," he said. Mr. Young said that national income figures for 1950-51 will be greater than the goods produced by each family in Canada approximates $5,000. Yet statistics from the Dominion Welfare Council indicate that 79 per cent of family incomes is in the $2,500 class.

Tax Burden Shifted

"The most of us know that there's something wrong — that we're not as well off as we were in 1945," Mr. Young said. "For years both the Liberals and the Conservatives wanted to get rid of price controls and national production controls. They were part of the C.C.F. policy."

"Now," charged Mr. Young claimed, there was distribution of goods and purchasing power. Everything has gone up, even without putting in C.C.F. policy." The high-income groups were removed from the high-income bracket, while the low-income groups were forced to put on direct taxation."

The 1945 and 1949 campaigns of the old-line parties in Canada were financed by big business, according to Mr. Young. "Our gigantic corporations are on profit-taking sprees now, that they never dreamed of years ago. The Canadian people have been hand over fist to Ottawa by a subservient government."

Party Aims for Security

The present setup has led to a situation where most of the Canadian people are living on the borderlines of security. "And the big corporations are making hay while the sun of capitalism shines." He continued that his party was not asking something for nothing, but rather that, as a society, the vast wealth of the country be used to give some security to Canadian families.

Mr. Young condemned the health program that was instituted by the present government, and pointed out that in Saskatchewan, which provides for family sickness of all kinds, "in this country," he said, "there is enough wealth being produced to give us a health plan. If one province can do it, this nation can."

Because of inflation, rationing on dollar levels has been imposed in fact, and the result is that it is more likely to wreck the country than any of the old parties and big business today are following the type of civilization that breeds communism, Mr. Young said. "Secure, prosperous people are not communistically inclined but in Canada today is a system which will ultimately break down, and from which will rise communism."

Claims Experts Wrong

Mr. Young claimed that political experts who said that there was a world swing back to the right when the Australian and New Zealand socialists parties were defeated, and when Churchill almost defeated English Labor in the last election, were wrong.

In reality, the speaker claimed, what had happened was that the old-line parties had adopted some of the socialistic measures and rods into power on them. "That's all that has happened," he concluded, "and because of the old parties today are policies that the CCF has popularized."

Motion to Transfer C of C Offices Upstairs in City Hall Deferred Back to Committee

City Council, in a discussion of lasting more than three-quarters of an hour yesterday afternoon, refused to make any final move on a recommendation that would move the Chamber of Commerce out of its first-floor quarters at the city hall to make room for the new Department of Health.

At the end of the discussion the original recommendation that the Chamber be moved was referred back to the committee, and a second recommendation by Alderman Angus Duffy, that a committee of the council meet with the Chamber was carried.

The committee as appointed by the mayor, will consist of Aldermen Angus Duffy and Lattimer. Most of the argument Monday centred around whether or not sufficient accommodation would be provided by the space the Chamber occupies now, and considerable inconvenience that might be caused elderly people in walking upstairs if the health department is located in the auditorium of the city buildings.

Primary Service

Aldermen Tice and Lattimer combined to point out that the Chamber of Commerce, in providing its primary service of tourist information, should remain on the ground floor, where it would be available easily to visitors. Alderman Lattimer also advanced the view that the city should not spend a lot of money on alterations in the Chamber offices, and find out later that the health unit needed more room than was available.

Mayor Potter, on the welfare side of the picture, said "these people shouldn't be made to walk upstairs. The offices are available and should be made available for the department of health. It's not our job to obtain accommodation for the Chamber of Commerce, but we must obtain it for the health unit."

Alderman Lattimer came back "Yes, but can it be conveniently located on the first floor?" and Alderman Tice repeated that tourists would not walk upstairs to get information they want. "That's what the Chamber is for," he said, "and besides that the department of health won't have half enough room on the first floor."

Alderman Thomas claimed that he and Alderman Duffy had interviewed Dr. A. M. Brusla, the medical officer of health, and that the doctor had said he was confident that the Chamber offices would provide enough room for the unit.

Debate Question at Length

After a suggestion from Alderman Rollins that the matter be removed from the auditorium to make room for the health unit in there, to a committee where the money for renovations would be obtained was defeated, and no conclusion reached. "We haven't the money for renovations" Mayor Potter said. He then suggested that the Chamber itself might help in the cost of renovations.

That was answered by Alderman Haig, who said "the Chamber of Commerce is going to Belleville Wednesday to aid in the setting up of the department. He was then asked if he would ask for the opinion of the outsiders on whether or not the Chamber offices would be big enough, and report back to council.

City People Partners With Rural Dwellers in Conservation Speaker Tells Rotary Club

Joint interest in conservation by rural and urban populations was urged here yesterday by A. S. L. Barnes, Conservation Division of the Department of Planning and Development, in a Rotary Club address.

"Conservation", he said, "was not the business of the farmer alone. City people are partners in the movement since what affects the rural municipalities affects urban alike. The sooner all realize that conservation is everybody's business, the better country they will have to live in."

Reviewing the history of conservation in Ontario, Mr. Barnes pointed out that as far back as 1911 Hastings County Council set up a reforestation committee, which recommended the purchase of some 2,000 acres at a cost of $2 per acre.

"With people getting a broader view of conservation, the government set up a branch in 1945, which now is made up of five interlocking divisions. In 1946 the Conservation Authorities Act was passed and since that time 13 Authorities have come into being and 13 surveys being made. The most interesting of them", the speaker said, "was that of the Moira River Watershed".

Uses Map

Using a map to illustrate his points, Mr. Barnes pointed out the geological set-up of the Moira Watershed. "350 million years ago", he said, "the sea washed over this area up to a point near Tweed and Lake Stoco. Silt deposits built up a limestone formation in the southern parts.

Later a glacier swept down from Quebec, which took all the soil from the rocky formation of the northern area, broke up the limestone, and formed boulder formations south of Tweed. Great streams of water flowing south left large ridges in the form of rolling hills.

Geological formation in Hastings county, Mr. Barnes said, are also well marked that several universities send students here for study. Formations here are like huge textbook drawings.

The Moira River is 55 miles long and drains 1,000 square miles. A feature of its watershed is that a large proportion of its land is suited for forests. At one time from 150,000 to 175,000 logs floated yearly down the stream. The area had the greatest lumber mills west of Ottawa. While the land has been denuded or sold to a certain extent it still retains tremendous forest potentials.

Long-time Project

The Moira Conservation Authority Report recommended that the entire area be given more protection. Reforestation might be undertaken by planting 200 trees to the acre, and hardwoods wherever they can be planted. This would be a long time project.

There are many sandy areas where there is a considerable depth of soil but which are unsuited to farming. He also pointed out feels the Authority should acquire them and see that reforestation is maintained.

"A 2,200 acre area in New York State supports 12 families the year round from the annual cut", the speaker said. It would not be difficult for the same situation to become possible in the Moira Watershed if the cut was restricted to annual growth. It is possible to get first returns in seven years from Christmas trees, and in ten turns would take from 30 to 40 years to develop, but once the projects started "rolling" they would carry themselves.

Splendid Facilities

Mr. Barnes paid tribute to the fine recreational facilities contained in this area. He has visite many places but he saw things in this district he has never seen before. One, he said, was the old mill at Madoc, which he believed was the only upright sawmill in Eastern Ontario, if not Eastern Canada. Its old machinery was still complete. "These are the kind of things people want to see," he said.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Freeman Burrows and club appreciation expressed by Rotarian Newton Thompson.

Several Guests Present

Several guests were present. Representing the city were City Comptroller Harold Bateman and Aldermen Harry Rollins, County Clerk Eric Denyes and County Treasurer Ross Bailey represented county officialdom. Reeve Leo Grills, Sidney and Reeve Fred Mitchell, Thurlow, were present with members of their township councils. Also present were Conservation Authority secretary Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Judge J. C. Lane, Picton, and representatives of Prince Edward County.

MARMORA

Wolves Still Seen In North, Lake Twp.

Marmora, —Wolves are still plentiful in the northern part of Marmora and Lake Township, according to Lloyd Lawrence, local hunter and trapper. Many fresh tracks are to be seen, about three weeks ago Sanford shot a fine specimen with a single shot, but has not accounted for any since, although he has seen another large wolf a week ago near the old Franklin house. The other animal he had seen on his rounds was an otter.

Public Lavatory Closed by Order Of Mayor Potter

Belleville's public lavatory behind the city hall has been closed by order of the mayor, and will remain closed until it is in respectable condition again. Mayor Potter, after inspecting the building with sanitary inspector George Whitman, ordered the lock put on the door, last Wednesday.

"That's the filthiest place I've ever seen," Mayor Potter said. "It has a very offensive odor and is very dirty. There were empty beer bottles and whiskey bottles all over the place."

"What, no wine bottles?" injected one council member.

"Yes, wine bottles, too," the mayor replied.

The mayor continued that the building will not be open for public use again until it is cleaned up. Council members were quick to agree that if the city is going to maintain a public lavatory, it must be under constant supervision or its condition will deteriorate. No further action was taken.

Refused to Pass By-Law

In by-law sessions, council refused to pass the granting of a "quick-claim" deed to J. J. Mc-Cardle, and on a 10-3 division, refused to bless the renting of the Market Street Arena to Keith F. Cooper for $20 a month.

The city arena came up for discussion twice, once when chairman of finance A. McLean Haig asked if the commission could meet in the near future and present a condensed financial report for council. The second time came when Alderman Lummiss asked when the manor had started work.

H. J. McFarland of Picton was going to buy the arena. The reply he got from Mayor Potter was to the effect that it wasn't immediately ascertainable that the story got its start, but that its quality might be judged by the fact that one year ago the same arena was rumored to be taking over the whole city.

REPORT ON HOSPITAL

Alderman Haig reported on the annual meeting of the board of governors of the Belleville General Hospital last week, and said that he believed that the "situation there is definitely improved."

"The average daily receipts from October of 1950 until the first of March have improved by about $200 per day," Alderman Haig stated. "This indicates that the payment of the accounts receivable are coming in, and that more strenuous efforts are being made to collect current accounts."

More Assistance For Gold-Mining Industry Planned

Ottawa, April 3 — (CP) — The government today moved to bring legislative machinery into operation to provide between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 in subsidies in 1951 for Canada's gold - mining industry.

In a notice on the Commons order paper, Mines Minister Prudham said he will bring in a resolution to amend the Gold Mining Assistance Act and incorporate the new payment formula announced by Finance Minister Abbott March 9.

The resolutions also will cover amendments to provide subsidy payments for the last quarter of 1950.

Main point of Mr. Abbott's plan is that mines with a production cost of more than $22 an ounce will be subsidized on not less than half their 1951 production that is sold. In the previous scheme the minimum was one - third.

Body of Glen Miller Man Found in River

Trenton (Special)—The body of Joseph Coveney, who drowned at Glen Miller Jan. 30 was found this morning in the Trent River.

The body was found 50 feet below the CNR railroad bridge in the town, on the northeast side of the river. It was discovered by Roy Coveney who was walking his dog about 11.30 a.m. The dog became excited and barked at something at the water's edge. When Cooney investigated, he found the body.

Identification was made by Vincent Brennan, brother-in-law of the dead man, and George Foster. They identified him by his watch and clothes.

HOLES IN PAVEMENTS KEEP DEPARTMENT BUSY

With city pavements in an unusually poor condition this spring the local public works department is hard pressed to keep ahead of the holes which appeared during the winter, it was reported today by City Engineer Charles Mott.

Streets in all sections of the city were affected with many of the holes appearing even during the winter months. The public works department has been working in the east end of the city during the past week or so but were instructed this week to fill the worst holes in streets on the west side of the river.

DEATH IS NEAR

This is being written on a rainy, dismal Sunday afternoon. At our backs, the Moira River sings and gurgles as it moves quickly down the riverbed to the Bay of Quinte. It is to a dangerous condition, swollen already by spring rains and the melting of snow and ice farther back in the country.

On the east side of the river, five boys are playing along the river bank, running up and down on the slippery, huge slabs of stone that sit on top of the high banks below the Lower Bridge. They are throwing sticks and wads of paper into the fast water, delighting to see them sucked away before their eyes. Each is close to death, but there is no worry.

The warning does no good. They give a rude answer to friendly advice that the stones are covered with rainy slime, and that one false step would plunge them to death. They laugh.

On the other side of the river, five more boys, all appearing to be less than sixteen years of age, play along the edge. Two climbed down and waded in the edge of the river, in water that sometimes topped over their knee-length rubber boots. Twice, one of them slipped and almost lost his footing, while his three companions on the top ledge laughed at his predicament.

The two in the water walked from just below the Lower Bridge until they came to a fisherman's net slung by the shore. They played with that for a while and climbed out of the river. If no one had been there to help them, they would not have been able to get out.

The high, fast tide all other rivers at this time of the year, is in a greedy mood. Swollen and muddy, it takes everything that dares to get in its way. Its top surface swirls over its white caps, and underneath, strong currents lash out with fury. It never stops, and its power is too much for young arms and legs to battle.

This year has already seen a double tragedy in the river. Will there be more? These boys are not by parental supervision, but not tightly. Young boys left to their own designs on a wet Sunday afternoon find fast water entertaining and somewhat of a challenge. The stark danger of a rapid-moving river does not appeal.

Here is a plea for parental alertness. Parents must warn their children each and every day. "Stay away from the river" must become household words. Until they do, the danger remains and the boys and girls invite death.

A WORTHY CAUSE IS FOUND UNWORTHY

Exposure of the books of the United Emergency Fund for Britain last week by the Financial Post will serve two purposes. They balance sheets of the fund revealed that approximately $593,000 was collected, supposedly for the purpose of sending food parcels to ration-ridden Britain. Of that amount, only $880 was expended in the actual purchase of foodstuffs.

The better part of the collections was used to promote the scheme itself, and the promotion was done so well that the federal government even contributed $30,000 to the fund. Salaries, printing, travelling expenses, publicity, advertising, telephone and telegraph bills all took huge bites of the fund's monies.

Originally, it was intended to obtain 100 wealthy citizens to contribute $1,000 each, to start the proposed $7 million fund well on its way. Later, the objective was dropped to $5 million, and then to $3 million. Despite the small expenditures for food, U.E.F. claims that it has sent more than 100,000 tons of foodstuffs overseas, through two separate agencies set up for that purpose. That does not alter the situation.

First warning after an exposure of this type must go to the well-meaning men and women who lent their patronage and names to the fund. They will now realize that further investigation of any cause is warranted before they allow their names to be used, and that they must pay closer heed to the report "good deal" of patronage.

The second warning goes to the general public. Established funds or organizations, such as the Red Cross, or the Community Chest, are distinguished from newer agencies set up for specific purposes. Where there is any doubt, contributions should be withheld until verification of purpose is obtained. In the U.E.F.B. case, donations were obtained ranging in amount from $75,000 down to school children's nickels and dimes.

Those two warnings comprise the first purpose. The second purpose lies in government investigation of such funds, including the probing of their sources of capital, and the outlay of the monies they obtain. In this case, the premier of Ontario has announced that a full investigation will be made.

And if, as the Financial Post claims, the men who were behind the promotion of the United Emergency Fund for Britain have already re-engaged in the food parcel business under another name, their activities should be subject to close scrutiny immediately.

SLOW PROGRESS

At ten he looks at twenty — and there's envy in his eye.
At twenty he imagines that the years go slowly by.
Ambition spurs him onward, but his progress seems so slow
He wonders if he'll ever get to where he wants to go.

You can bid him to be patient. That his merit will be learned,
By the time he reaches forty recognition he'll have earned.

But he says: 'I'm nearing forty and it seems to me somehow
I cannot wait much longer. I should be successful now.'

I know the ways of youngsters and life's meaning, might and noon,
They are eager for promotion but they want it all too soon.
Best success is slow in coming, and if earnestly they strive
The golden opportunity they're seeking will arrive.

No picture machine ever operated in Belleville had anything like the appearance started by Sherman's Moving Pictures which will open one day's engagement at the opera house this evening. The views of the funeral procession of the late Majesty Queen Victoria are said to be striking grand. The scenes depicting the life of Joan of Arc are said to surpass those of Edison's. The comic scenes are very amusing. It requires eight men to handle the company's paraphernalia.

The Rev. G. R. Copeland of Deseronto, a former pastor of the Tabernacle Methodist Church here, occupied the pulpit in that church at both services on Sunday.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Two eyes, a nose and a mouth: that is all any of us have. Yet we are all different. Different as day from night.

We can live a long life, and in all that time see not a hundred people who resided on the other side of the street: and not five times in our lives would we actually mistake anyone for somebody else.

The infinite variety of the human face is one of the marvels of nature; although I am told a country farmer with dozens of birds can soon distinguish them one from another. Dog men have no difficulty recognizing dogs; though most of us who own a cocker spaniel must have had the experience of whistling urgently at a perfect stranger we mistook for our own cocker.

Among domestic animals, there is probably as much variety as there is in humans. But in wild nature, it is a different story. Now and then, one particularly large size or one with peculiar markings may stand out from his fellows: but the vast majority of foxes seem to be alike as two peas. So do most wild birds. Andy Tyson, a famous northern Ontario trapper who has spent many years as a controller of wolves, says that this impersonality of appearance in wild creatures may be due to our slight acquaintance with them. Among wolves, he can see as much variety as with dogs of the same breed, each with some characteristic of size, bearing or behavior. But in the case of mink, otter, muskrat, he imagines you would have to be acquainted with several of them over a period of time to be able to detect the differences.

What strikes Andy Tyson as curious about human beings is that while they are acutely aware of the differences among them on the outside, they are determined to believe that they could all be the same inside, if they would only try.

Western Farmers Buy City Houses

Saskatoon. (CP)—Real estate men report that farmers have been buying city houses at an unprecedented rate during the last five years.

Many of the farmers moving into town are retiring. Others are spending the winters in Saskatoon, then moving back to the land for the grain-growing season.

Business men say the increased farmer population to Saskatoon is part of a trend all over the west.

"Ninety per cent of the farmers buying now plunk down full cash," said one real estate man. "We're darn glad to see them."

Several real estate men said they know of farmers who own homes on the farm, in the nearest village and in the city. Some farmers are buying several city houses as investments.

PARKING RECEIPTS UP

Sydney, N.S. (CP)—Steady increase in receipts from parking meters was reported in this city. Returns for 1950 totalled $12,385. The meters are all paid for and the funds go into the general revenue account.

GRAND ILLUSION

The advertising fraternity, latest victim of the "brickbat" to the fine art of salesmanship, has apparently come up with a new form of research in that industry.

Pleading monumentally in their efforts to have us love soap chips, deodorants, toothpastes and 40,000 other products, the advertising boys have announced a self-proclaimed "Public Relations Week" in which we are all urged to become enamored of the "forces" behind of their pitch.

Being aware of advertising is like being aware of mosquitoes in the lower Yukon. Both are wellnigh inescapable and tolerable only the hide of a rhinoceros.

Advertising, as such, needs no defence. In any competitive business it may be the difference between security and ruin. But let's be honest. Advertising have changed it from a reliable work horse to a two-headed monster forever breathing hotly down our necks.

We are a possession—proud and possession—poor breed on this continent. Advertising, aimed at further away from the simple things, trading peace of mind for pleasure, substituting for doodads, and advertising must shoulder its share of the blame for that.

The fraternity invites us to consider the future of its appeal. It's important that we do. It is a staggering thought that a new product now can all the air (with the lone exception on this continent of the CBC), absorbing all their blows into the tender, living flesh of television, and spend 40 to 50 percent of every newspaper and magazine.

It's a fearsome force and used these days not merely for the selling of commercial products, but to sell a materialistic way of life best suited to the manufacturers themselves.

New Markets

In its infancy, advertising was a simple matter of telling the public that there was a certain demand for a certain number of products, and that the best of these products would have the quickest turnover.

In its infant nurture, advertising outgrew this innocent adolescence and began to spend money, to be a medium not merely attract existing markets but to create entirely new markets and in this its sole sense of responsibility has been to the manufacturers.

The great message of advertising today is aimed at youth. In every field of whetting a false appetite the huckster is not above playing upon the adolescent fears, inhibitions, the fears and neuroses of its victims.

The now-familiar approach is that without such-and-such a product the customer faces a loss of Week."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

YOUTH

Spring was at hand in all its glory. I had counted the days. "Daddy, can I leave my hair uncliped close?" Gratified I ran all the way to the village barber shop and mounted the high chair and listened to the sound of the clippers that threatened one of boyhood's fond dreams. Cost twenty cents!

Sitting in my 28th floor office in the big city watching the stream of yellow cabs and taxis and trucks flowed endlessly up and down the avenue below, I remembered the urge to get my hair trim and manicure. To my secretary: "Please call me a barber and get me a date and make an appointment. You know—Dominion Stores, Simpsons, Eatons—for haircuts when I was a boy. You just took your turn."

Slowly and thoughtfully I walked to my appointment, but as I edged near the barber shop door I couldn't shut from my mind those glorious days of youth, when I was a boy and if I wish I still had, but haven't now! Memories will persist. Now it's merely "your turn."

Here's your ticket, Mr. Adams—three dollars and seventy-five cents. (First time.)

"Mister, can I go along with you tonight and help you fight the Germans?" "Sure, Sonny, come along." And "Mother, can I take off my shoes and stockings and go barefoot? It's warm now and all the kids' mothers let them go." "No, you'd better wait another week. You may get a cold." "Oh, Mother—"

And there was the neighbor's cow that had to be driven to the pasture for the day, and then at times I had to fight for the right for which a quart of free milk was the reward. (Price five cents in the store.) But it was all a part of the glorious tasks of youth, for many a lesson was learned and many a small of earth was something to remember.

There were no "ears and rumors of war" in those happy days. There was universal peace, and workers saved their money and put it into the banks to accumulate for the future for "old age." Workers took pride in what they did. People were honest because they had good Glorious youth of yesteryear!

ONE VOTE FOR THE EDUCATORS

Who is doing the better job today in molding the lives of children—educators or parents?

A lot of people will not like to hear this, but if I may be allowed to offer an opinion, I would say that the educators are doing the better job. I say this with full realization that there is much to be deplored in modern education. Children go through school without being able to read very well and to spell at all, without knowing the alphabet and without being able to write a decent hand. Yet it must be admitted that many people of high school and college age today appear to have an intellectual maturity which none of us had at their age and which a considerable number of our ancestors appear to have had.

Parents are the best friends for their children' than ever before, probably, in human history. Yet there are a lot of things being done too much for their children, despite the mandate to discipline them hand and foot, and asking only one question, namely, which way youngsters want? Further more, modern parents are the gay set of the ages. Children have never known in generations. They are party-minded. They are in the limelight of the room and behave at 45 about the same as they did at 25. Some modern homes are as fine as humanity has ever willnessed, but there are some that are not fine.

Education or parents? Which has done a better job for youth? I cast my vote for the educators.

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Adoption of the 22nd Amendment limiting the Presidential tenure of two 4-year terms, prompted James A. Farley, former Democratic National Chairman to say in a letter to the editor of a New York paper: "We are tragically in the case of President Roosevelt in utter breakdown of his great strength in his third term. Worse, we saw his nomination in 1944 when it was widely known among political leaders that he was a dying man.

It has been standard among political leaders why did those leaders keep the knowledge to themselves? Were they serving their own country or some other country by remaining silent about the man's unfitness

Or is Mr. Farley now looking at things as Mr. Hoover does, with the aid of hindsight?

In 1930 I examined Gov. Cox at the gubernatorial residence in Columbus and during a meeting of the campaign office next his private residence in Marion in the early fall. Prohibition was the issue on which Cox was running. I found Gov. Cox in excellent health as well as physically alert. He looked, and was, a deep sincere fleshless and breath-holding type. There was no greater disturbance of blood pressure and pulse rate than one would expect in a man half his age.

Senator Harding was affable enough, but when he was asked and purposed to discuss the health status and outlook of the two presidential candidates, the newspapers he flinched. Obviously he did not choose to tell the public how poor the condition of his health. In fact he exuded a confidence in his physical and confidential the information I might gain from my interview with him before he talked at the Marion Star and I would be known as the senator.

But I did predict privately to those with whom I discussed the hazards of the presidential office that Harding, if elected, would not live to serve his term.

So, now, Mr. Farley and I are fifty-fifty in our hindsight boasts, and in a showdown I believe I could find witnesses who would swear that I made that prediction privately. Can Mr. Farley live up a witness or two who will swear that he was known among political leaders that F. D. R. was a dying man when he was nominated in 1944?

Both F. D. R. and distinct confidence in the friendly known as T. R. inspired the admiration and affection of millions because of his unbounded enthusiasm. Milk or diluted fruit juice is the healthful beverage for children.

ANOTHER STEP

Adoption of a resolution by the Canadian Medical Association to learn of any shortcomings our heroes may have evinced when they were dying.

Here I use the word dying in the biological sense—physical degeneration, retrograde evolution, decline, the years or decades after the years of peak of development and growth. From the moment one reaches that pinnacle, since there is nowhere else to go, one must begin the long slide down the other side.

It becomes more and more manifest that our country was at a grave disadvantage in the Yalta conference because of two grave weaknesses, namely, booze—and I mean vodka and all the other intoxicants consumed by the participants — and the incompetence of a dying man to use ordinary good judgment.

Physical degeneration (and of course impairment of judgment) is inevitable in our next fifty-five or sixty, and the wisdom that comes with years cannot entirely compensate for this natural loss of judgment. Take Mr. Hoover's course of the display of senility for example. Or consider some of the ignominious performances of senators who should have been retired to the chimney corner long ago.

The 22nd Amendment is a step in the right direction, but only a step. As long as a president can hope to be re-elected most of his waking hours will be devoted to influenced by that ambition. It is too late now that Eisenhower has been ratified the 22nd amendment did not limit the Presidency to a single term, of perhaps six years.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Calling Names

I read and enjoy your column whenever I get a chance. I would have learned many things from it. I am now 17 (V.F.) and 6 feet tall.

Answer—I have never called any one geek, sucker or jerk, but I want to read what the writer says, not what you think he intends to say.

Unfortunate Child

We have a child 14 months old. He loves candy. Is artificially colored, sweetened, carbonated drink that stimulates heart, nerves, kidneys) and we give it to him. Is it all right for the health of child?

Answer—It is all wrong. The child will get all he needs with enough cheat-food in ordinary course, without your misguided affection for an unnecessary feeding for stimulants. Milk or diluted fruit juice is the healthful beverage for children.

accompanied by Mrs. Post at the piano.

This very impressive service was brought to a close by a prayer by the Reverend H. O. Eastman.

At Mr. Eastman's request, the pageant will be repeated at the evening church service on April 15th.

Miracle Fabrics Promise Life Of Carefree Ease

New York, April 3. (AP)—The development of new miracle fabrics and finishes promise a life of carefree ease for the housewife of tomorrow.

Sparkling fabric finishes make clothes shrink-proof, wrinkle-proof, moth-proof, mildew-proof, water resistant, soil resistant and color-fast.

Newest synthetic fabric to come of age is dacron, little brother to the other two Dupont wonders—fibres, nylon and orlon. It will be particularly useful, say its manufacturers, for men's suits which will never need pressing.

Orlon, already on the market in such things as casement curtains and men's swimming trunks, has many of the same properties as nylon, such as high-tensile strength and quick-drying qualities.

Collegiate H. & S. Assoc. Delegate Presents Report on Educational Convention Held in Toronto

On Monday evening the Collegiate Home and School Association met in the gymnasium with Mrs. T. J. Harbeck presiding. Miss Ruth Silvester and Mr. Lloyd Reid, the two members of the teaching staff who accompanied the students on their trip to New York to see the United Nations at work, were commended by Mrs. Harbeck for their untiring efforts on behalf of the students to see that they missed nothing that would add to their knowledge and understanding of this world-important group.

Mrs. R. F. Gibson, who was the delegate appointed to attend the annual Home and School convention in Toronto last week, brought back a comprehensive report of the meetings she had attended and her impressions of the convention. 1400 registered delegates were present to study the theme that "Parents are Educators."

Mr. Don Graham, director of education in Forest Hill village, presented a demonstration of parent education groups, favorite subject of them six to ten members. He showed how student-parent difficulties could be dramatized with good effect. Mrs. MacLellan, president of Federation pointed out that parents had a most difficult job and were looking for help and this accounted for the growth of Home and School which has a membership of over 80,000 in Ontario.

Dr. S. Young, of CBC, explained how the radio has tried to maintain standards in the matter of script writing in carrying out educational programs. In a discussion on family life and education, it was made that boys and girls could benefit by an exchange of courses with the boys taking home economics and the girls manual training, so that as a housewife a girl could fix an leaking cord if it was needed or do necessary home repairs.

Child's Bill of School Rights

"A child's bill of rights in the school" was presented as a panel discussion led by Mrs. M. C. Ward, President of Central Committee. Those taking part were members of the Collegiate Institute Committee of which Mr. L. A. Kells is convener, and included Mrs. Thos. Rupert, Mrs. Ross of the Home and School Association in Madoc; Mrs. W. H. Finlay, chairman of Federation district No. 11; Mrs. R. D. Arnott, president of Queen Victoria Association; Mr. J. E. Bateman, principal of Prince Charles School and Mr. R. Hamilton, president of Queen Victoria Association.

The original suggested outline came from Dr. S. R. Laycock, Dean of Education at the University of Saskatchewan, and was intended to be a study of the rights of a child in the schools he attends during the years of compulsory education.

The discussion brought out the facts that a child is entitled to a school that has a definite policy for the student's physical, social, emotional and intellectual development and which plans to give him guidance in this development in harmony with his own ability and needs. He has the right to work so suited to his learning ability and level of mental development that he can succeed after reasonable effort. He has the right to the right kind of teacher.

Well-Adjusted Teachers Necessary

It was pointed out that a teacher should be well-adjusted and mentally healthy, have poise, calmness, tenac, honesty and emotionally suitable people. Such occupations where they will have greater possibilities for their own happiness and where they will not make much of their weaknesses a contribution to the misery and unhappiness of little children. The community should be pleased with teachers who fulfil the requirements and should show their appreciation.

A child should have a school building whose planning, floor space, heating, lighting and ventilation are in harmony with the best in modern knowledge so that the child's all-round development may best be promoted, and there will serve to promote community interest in the school and its program. The child has a right to adequate school equipment for helping the child to learn such as books, maps, charts, films, projectors, radios science equipment and also good household science equipment.

Necessary School Facilities

A child should have school facilities which will adequately provide for the less formal aspects of the child's development at school, school grounds which are large enough to provide adequate play space; an auditorium for use in assembly programs inside games; dramatic and musical activities; playrooms for use in inclement weather; a library for general use. A school curriculum which is flexible enough to meet the needs, interests and abilities of all children is a right of the child. This should enable the school to realize its objectives for the pupil of self-realization, good happy human relationship; economic efficiency and civic responsibility. A school should have a policy regarding discipline which will regard this aspect of the school's job as one of guiding the child's growth toward self-control and self-direction.

A school should have a policy of testing upon difficulties whether in reading or other school skills or in character from a diagnostic point of view with remedial measures wisely applied.

A child has a right to parents and teachers who make every effort to understand one another and to co-operate for the best all-round development of the child and also to a school which is integrated with the life of the community in that it co-operates with all the community agencies in promoting the growth and development of children, takes its pupils out into the community in order to study community problems of health, welfare, safety and recreation and to make recommendations to the proper authorities regarding them matters, makes use of community resources in person and organizations in promoting the development of the child in the school. Finally the child has a right to a high school education that will meet his abilities and needs.

Thanks Expressed

Mr. G. E. Currie expressed the thanks of the meeting to the members of the panel, pointing out that changes come slowly but that they come as a result of study and changing conditions.

Mrs. Ward read a letter from Dr. Laycock to the discussion group which said in part, "I have just received a copy of your panel discussion and am pleased with it. Since I had a considerable share in the development of "The Child's Bill of Rights in the School," I am particularly happy that the members of the panel which is discussing it all came from my home county. You probably know that I was born at Marmora, went to high school in Madoc, took my grade 13 at Albert College in Belleville. May I wish you every success in the panel discussion."

The discussion was presented at the Home and School convention in Toronto last week.

Coffee and cakes were served by the social convenors, Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Gibson and their committee, when the members gathered at the milk bar for a friendly visit and refreshments.

Suspended Sentence Given Two Men For Assault on Huntingdon Farmer

(By Staff Reporter)

Convicted of assaulting Elmer Wilson, Huntingdon township farmer, at his farm home on March 17th, Everett Rushnell of Oshawa, and Donald Rushnell, Toronto, were given three years suspended sentence when they appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Madoc Monday afternoon.

In addition to the suspended sentence, Don Rushnell will pay costs of $27.20, while Everett Rushnell was assessed $46.80 costs.

Clinton Rushnell, father of Donald, also charged with assault, was acquitted by the magistrate, when evidence failed to show he had taken an active part in the fracas.

The assault for which the three men were charged took place in the Wilson home, the result of which, Mr. Wilson was seriously injured and had to have a doctor's care.

Court Packed

The court proceedings were followed closely by a large number of township residents who jammed into the court room the second floor which lasted well over four hours. The three men charged were defended by E. Ormonde Butler of Belleville, while Assistant Crown Attorney R. S. Gordon Robertson prosecuted.

Although the charges heralded forth such thing, Crown witnesses intimated that the three men had gone to the Elmer Wilson home for purpose or evening up for a fracas which Mr. Wilson and Clinton Rushnell had had a day or so previous to the assault. Witnesses said the three Rushnells had crowded into the Wilson home and had failed to leave when ordered to do so.

Ordered Intruders Out

"I ordered them out but Everett just laughed and said bed words," testified Mrs. Wilson, wife of the complainant. "He then hauled off and swung his fist at me."

She said that her husband had then intervened and had struck Everett knocking him down. A fight between the two men had then ensued, this starting in the kitchen and ranging into the dining room and back to the kitchen."

In the fight Mr. Wilson had been struck on the head with a chair wielded by Everett Rushnell and had been knocked down and, according to Mrs. Wilson, had been kicked in the face and in the ribs.

"Everett is a boxer and that is the way they fight — with their feet," she said.

Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling who attended Mr. Wilson following the fight said he had a lump on his head "the size of an egg" that he was applying cloths to, and had bruises on his ribs, a broken nose and blackened and swollen eyes.

Visited Rushnell Home

Mr. Wilson told the court that he and Clinton had fixed yards and a fences a few days previous to the assault when he and a neighbor had gone to the Rushnell home to get some equipment borrowed by Mr. Rushnell and to settle for an account which Mr. Rushnell owed him.

Also when Don Rushnell had been home on a weekend from his job in Toronto, Mr. Wilson said he had been talking to him on the telephone and had asked him to come over during the afternoon to settle an account.

The Rushnells denied there had been any pre-arrangement among them regarding the visit to the Wilson home on the night which the fight took place. They said they had stopped in on their way home from Belleville when Don said Mr. Wilson wanted to see him.

Asked For Apology

Mr. Don Rushnell said he had no idea what Mr. Wilson had wanted to see him for, but one of his reasons for going to the Wilson home had been to ask Mr. Wilson to apologize for what he had said to his mother a few days previous.

Asked why he wanted Mr. Wilson to apologize, Rushnell replied it was for what Mr. Wilson had said to his mother on the day of the previous fracas. At that time he said his mother had asked Mr. Wilson to stop and had brought a neighbor and his mother quoted Mr. Wilson as replying "you never saw but what a woman like her might put an axe through a man's head."

All the evidence taken was in the charge against Everett Rushnell, counsel agreeing that the same evidence would apply to the other two charges.

Magistrate Lloyd found Everett Rushnell guilty as charged and dismissed the charge from Mr. Rushnell, the charge against Don Rushnell.

Had Been Belligerent

In finding Don Rushnell guilty the magistrate said Don Rushnell had taken a belligerent attitude in demanding an apology from Mr. Wilson when the complainant had shown an apology was asked by the mother. In acquitting Clinton Rushnell of the assault charge he said the accused had escaped only by the skin of his teeth and could consider himself lucky."

Witnesses called by the Crown included Dr. E. A. Carleton, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Reid who were visiting the Wilson home at the time of the assault.

Defence witnesses included the three Rushnells, Mrs. Clinton Rushnell and Mrs. Louise Morgan, a neighbor who overheard the telephone conversation between Mr. Wilson and Don Rushnell.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY may be the smallest county in the province of Ontario but it is one of the biggest canning areas in Canada. Over the years substantial farms, factories and communities have been built on crops used for canning.

GROWERS and processors, like ordinary individuals, have cost of living problems, too. As processors, our anxieties are to sell the crops we put into cans, to give growers and workers a fair return and to make enough profit so that we can pay shareholders, replace equipment and expand our operations.

IN 1950 we paid farmers and factory workers in Ontario close to $100,000,000. This is a very large sum of money in any community—and in the canning areas it is certain money, contracted to be paid long before crops are picked.

Tomatoes	$27.00	$21.85	23% up
Peas	$85.00	$75.00	13% up
Corn	$23.00	$18.75	23% up

These are the established prices which canners will pay for the 1951 crop even though the price for corn was considered excessive and was not agreed to by the canners' representative. The Grower's Association now has repudiated all these prices, arrived at by their own official body, hitherto always recognized by them.

FARMERS are the last big group of independent business men and on them depends the well-being of countless thousands in every part of Canada. They can remain independent under impartial Ontario law—or they can socialize their farms very quickly indeed under irresponsible leaders with one eye on politics.

UNDER ever improving conditions up to the present repudiation, everybody gained. If canneries are driven to other provinces and farmers lose these cash crops, everybody will suffer. Of the ill-advised scheme suddenly to switch to non-cash crops, R. W. Neal, secretary of the Canned Foods Association of Ontario, gave the answer to the press a few days ago in a single sentence. "A revolution of this kind", he said, "could ruin thousands of farmers, workers and merchants in the canning areas."

This advertisement is published by the Canned Foods Association of Ontario in the interests of growers, workers and communities in the industry, and in its own interests.

Detroit Tigers Fail to Impress Experts as Pennant Contenders, Lack Couple Long Ball Hitters

Lakeland, Fla., April 3—(AP)—Detroit has not impressed the experts as a pennant contender thi spring.

Bouncing around near the cellar in the grapefruit league, the Tigers show no signs of improvement over 1950. Basically, it's the same club that didn't have enough last September.

"We've got the same club," said manager Red Rolfe who speaks openly. "The same limitations of last year. Maybe we're better one place. Steve Souchock looks like he'll give us the threat of a long ball as a righthanded pinch-hitter."

Caution is advised in writing off the Detroit club. After all, the Tigers led all last summer and finished only three games back. Having the "same club" can't be too bad in this case.

Loss of Art Houtteman (19-12) to the army carved a gap in Rolfe's slender front line strength. But a sound Virgil Trucks (3-1) could take up the slack.

Hal Newhouser (15-13), Ted Gray (10-7), Dizzy Trout (13-5) and Freddie Hutchinson (17-8) make up the front line staff.

Catching is a prime headache for Rolfe. Joe Ginsberg, who split last year between Detroit and Toledo, is No. 1 man. Frank House, the $75,000 bonus kid, has been optioned to Toledo.

George Kell (.340) is the big man of the ball club. The talented third baseman tops the payroll this year. Kell is the best third baseman in the league and one of its best hitters.

Don Kolloway (.289) is back on first base. Gerry Priddy (.277) and Johnny Lipon (.293) at second and short round out the infield.

The "best outfield in baseball" is intact with Hoot Evers (.323) in left, Johnny Groth (.306) in centre and Vic Wertz (.308), the power man in right. Behind them the Tigers have Charley Keller (.314), Pat Mullin (.218) and Souchock, drafted from Sacremento where he hit .291.

Soo Greyhounds And Owen Sound Meet for Title

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 3 (CP) — The all-Ontario senior hockey finals get under way here tomorrow with the powerful Owen Sound Mercurys meeting Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds in the first game of a best-of-five series. The winner will represent Ontario in the Allan Cup race.

The clubs play again April 6 then travel to Owen Sound for games April 9, 11 and 13.

Owen Sound won the Ontario Hockey Association crown handily, taking 34 of 38 league and playoff games, while Sault Ste. Marie was a repeater in taking Northern Ontario Hockey Association honors for the second successive year, blasting Porcupine Porkies four in a row in the best-of-seven finals.

The lineup of the Mercurys lists 12 men who performed in senior 'A' ranks last years, before the top-ranking clubs were classified as "Major" with the new Alexander Cup going to the Canadian winner.

The Mercurys have Tommy Burlington, a former star with Cleveland and Providence in the American Hockey League, who played with Saskatoon last year. Three other former pros are Jack Ingoldsby who was with Toronto Maple Leafs, Bill Allum, a defenceman with Philadelphia, Cleveland and Minneapolis, and Pat McCreavy, formerly of Boston and Detroit.

Harry Kazarian, who performed with San Francisco and Atlantic City, pairs up with Allum on defence. Rookies are Andy Grant and John MacDonald while holdovers include Buck Forslund, Doug Gillespie, Mike Bukacheski, Fred Smith, Art Hayward, Bun White, Bob Markle and goalie Bob Gillson.

Led by former NHL star Don (Count) Grosso, Greyhounds had to rebuild this year after losing stalwarts such as Shey Mayer, former Toronto Leaf, Andy Mantha, Don Davidson, Zeppy Zago and Joe Krmpotich.

On defence, he installed 18-year-old Herbie Simon. Billy Visinski, who had intermediate experience, plays centre with the second string and third line is pivoted by Bernard MacIver, a junior last season. The other newcomer is Jimmy Mosienko, brother of Bill Mosienko of Chicago Black Hawks.

Husky Hodgson centres the first line with high-scoring Terry Biocchi and Ronnie Lay on the wings.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins set a National Hockey League record, up to that time, for overtime play 18 years ago tonight at Toronto. Ken Doraty scored the only goal to give Toronto the league title after 104 minutes and 46 seconds of overtime. The present record is 116½ minutes of overtime, set when Detroit beat Montreal 1-0 on March 24, 1936.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By. GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

MIKE WAS "PAT".

Every time one of the telephones tinkles in the sports department of this newspaper, and a voice with a trifle more than a shade of the accent of Ould Ireland inquires after the health of the sports joe, his family and forebears as far back as the long-tailed tree-hanging variety that started the first monkey business in the Ark, you can depend on it that something is cooking" along sports lines at the Trenton Air Station.

And so it was yesterday. The blarney - tinged tones of one Sergeant Leo Kelly, more familiarly known as "Mike", was much concerned about our health, the whys and wherefores as to why our paths had not crossed; what we thought of the tee-vee'd edition of the Senatorial Crime Investigation Committee; what day Christmas falls on in 1957; whether Errol Flynn is permanently hitched, and what the price of tickets would be for the third row Section "B" in the Helsinki Stadium where the 1952 Olympics will be staged.

Finally the loquacious "Michael" came to the point. It seems that on Wednesday, April 18, at 8.15 p. m., to be exact, the Trenton RCAF Sports Department, is staging a star-studded boxing show that will make all previous beak-busting extravaganzas look like a broken - down Punch and Judy exhibit.

"This card, me bhoy", gurgled the irrepressible Mike, "fairly reeks with class. If the boys who won golden gloves titles bring along their prizes, we'll have enough to equip a pair of pugilistic centipedes. There's enough champions coming to start a miniature hall of fame. The infantry, artillery, air force, and signals will be represented and all we need to round out a perfect evening of scrap is a couple of tanks."

Heading the card is the starry Don Wallace 140 pounder of Toronto who will meet AC1 Vic Trefry, Rockcliffe Air Station, Ottawa, 1950 golden gloves winner. In the semi-final Signalman Donny Spears, Vimy Barracks (128) tangles with AC1 Kid Boucher, maritime flyweight champion, from Camp Borden while in the second semi a grudge battle between Gerald Ellis, Trenton and LAC "Pinky" Mitchell, Rockcliffe holds the limelight. A special heavyweight bout between Lieut. Jim Honey (205), RCA, Picton and Fred Baer (195) of the Oakwood Boxing Club, Toronto, has been arranged. Five other bouts round out the card. Looks like a pleasant evening for boxfight fans come April 17th.

THEY FORGOT TO DUCK!

Maybe it's the high cost of living, or is it that the sunny southland is losing its winter appeal even to the feathered population? At least 15,000 mallard ducks can't be wrong.

This story, which should interest duck hunters, comes from Fort Peck, Montana. It states that some 15,000 mallard ducks found a home so warm in this icebox district that they didn't fly south with the other ducks last winter.

While other ducks began their annual migration from the north country to the southland last fall, the 15,000 wallowed in warm weather and got fat on grain handouts from the Federal Government.

The ducks took over the water flowing from tunnels below the Fort Peck dam power plant here in frigid northeastern Montana. The water stays about 50 degrees above zero — about 90 degrees warmer than the air temperature at times. With seepage from the giant earthfill dam impounding the Missouri river, the water forms a stream lined with brush that gives the birds security.

Federal fish and wildlife men tried to make the reluctant mallards act like other ducks and join in the flights to warmer climes last December.

Noise bombs were dropped from planes. Each time the ducks returned as soon as the planes left and the racket died down.

The authorities pinned their hopes on snow, which would cover the natural feed for ducks. Snow came. They stayed on.

It became apparent in January that the ducks planned to stay for dinner. So manager Fred Staunton of the Fort Peck Federal Game Range fed them a mixture of wheat and barley. There was plenty of grain. A boxcar shortage had plugged grain elevators and farmers were piling wheat and barley on the ground.

During the coldest days — when temperatures plunged to 30-40 below zero — about 40 bushels of grain were shoveled into Duck creek daily.

The ducks which stayed are in A-1 condition. Staunton reports a few died from lead poisoning inflicted by hunters, but most of them survived an unusually - cold Montana Winter.

Leafs Favored To Beat Bruins In Third Game

Boston, April 3—(CP)—Toronto's Maple Leafs have more men in better condition and are favored to win over Boston Bruins tonight when the two National Hockey League clubs resume their playoffs to determine a Stanley Cup finalist.

Each team has one victory in the best of seven series which will decide the opponent for the winner of the Detroit-Montreal playdown.

Captain Milt Schmidt, redoubtable centre of the home forces, may not play because of knee injuries. His inspirational leadership over the past few weeks, when he played virtually on one leg, was the main factor in the Bruins' drive for a playoff spot.

Ed Kryzanowski will centre for Woody Dumart and Bill Ezinicki if Schmidt is benched.

Bruins also will play without Johnny Pierson, in a Toronto hospital with a fractured cheek bone. Also injured are Boston's Murray Henderson, Pete Horeck, Viv Lynn and Dunc Fisher.

Conn Smythe, Leaf president and general manager, is convinced his team now has the advantage. "The Leafs never lose in the playoffs when the other team starts to get rough," he cracked.

Harry Watson is the only Leaf casualty. He is recovering from a shoulder separation and won't play.

Canadiens Sent To School, Hope To Beat Wings

Montreal, April 3 — (CP) — Coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens had his charges all primed for tonight's playoff game with Detroit Red Wings. He sent them to school yesterday; their exams come tonight.

A lot of hush-hush surrounded Canadiens schooling at their mountain hide-away at Val David in the Laurentian Mountains. Irvin had his players answering a quiz, presuumably on how they thought Canadiens could beat Wings and take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

But, like a teacher, Irvin mixed his schooling with play. Players took time out for bowling, pool and ping pong. Seven players came into Montreal for a workout. They were Paul Masnick, Roly McLenahan, Bob Dawes, Claude Robert, Ross Lowe, Bert Herschfeld and Sid McNabney.

Meanwhile coach Tommy Ivan sent a few of his Wings to Montreal from Granby, 40 miles southwest, to limber up under the direction of general manager Jack Adams. Their spare netminder Sugar Jim Henry was among them. Others were Jim McFadden, Metro Prystai, Vic Stasiuk, Joe Carveth, Fred Glover, Max McNab, Ben Wolt and Ivan Martin.

Neither Irvin nor Ivan made any predictions about the outcome of tonight's game.

Both clubs will remain at their temporary camps until late today and will come to the city by bus about an hour before game time.

Two Horses Favored to Win Grand National

London, April 3 (CP) —J. V. Rank's Irish challenger Shagreen and New York millionaire Jock Whitney's Arctic Gold are the co-favorites at 8-to-1 in the latest callover for the Grand National Steeplechase Saturday.

A late rush of money boosted Shagreen's stock in the callover last night. Not since 1929 has an American-owned horse gone into the race as the public's choice.

Some 40 to 45 other horses will be in the field for the hazardous Aintree course of four miles, 856 yards over 30 of the most treacherous jumps ever built.

They will include two former winners—Freebooter, in 1950 and Russian Hero, in 1949. Only four other possible runners—Rowland Roy, Lucky Purchase, Roimond and Revealed—have completed the course.

Twenty-two years ago it was another Whitney horse— Easter Hero—which the public liked for this crown jewel of the world's jumping races. Easter Hero finished second to Greglach, a 100-to-1 shot.

Arctic Gold is young as jumping horses go—no six-year-old has won the National since 1915 —and he has never tackled the Aintree course. But he's beaten everything he's been asked to beat including Freebooter.

Another good argument for Arctic Gold is his jockey, Tim Molony, who is the leading steeplechase jockey in Britain this season.

The Grand National will have a first-place purse of about £9,000 (about $27,000). Since 1931 it has formed the basis for the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

COLOURFUL Dick Irvin has always been sure-fire "hot copy." We verified this again the other day when we dropped in for a chat with the "grey thatch" coach of the Montreal Canadiens. Asked about the future of his team, Irvin was as optimistic as ever. Said he: "We've got a fine lot of youngsters coming up the line. Several French-Canadian boys we brought up for the play-offs are setting our town on its ear. They really helped us into a play-off spot." As far as the play-offs are concerned, Dick Irvin naturally believes the Canadiens should win the Stanley Cup. Pressed to pick a favourite team should the Flying Frenchmen fall short of the ultimate, Irvin looked skyward a moment, then pontificated: "If our planets are not favourable—if our numerology charts are not agreeable or our teacup readings incorrect and we do not win the Cup this year, I hope Boston takes it. That Milt Schmidt fascinates me as a competitor."

Irvin As Player:

As a judge of hockey players, Coach Dick Irvin should know whereof he speaks. A former top-flight centre himself, he set many leagues on fire, including the NHL. In the season, 1913-14, as centre of the Winnipeg Monarchs, he came east for the Allan Cup finals against the Toronto Rowing Club.

The "best of five" series had got under way in Winnipeg, where the Rowing Club won the first game 5 to 4. The Monarchs went on to take the second game 5 to 1. The third game ended in a 6-all tie and the two teams then came east to continue the struggle in Toronto's Mutual Street Arena. The Rowing Club were heavy favourites to win the trophy, but when the sticks were packed away after the game, skinny centre Dick Irvin had chalked up a personal total of NINE goals.

The final score was NINE to TWO for the Winnipeg Monarchs!

Irvin As Innovator:

When Irvin took over the coaching chore of the Canadiens some ten years ago, he introduced several innovations which are today standard practise in the major circuit. His favourite brain child was the icing of a complete set of forwards and defensemen. "Makes you feel like a Field Marshal sending out those players," smiled Irvin. "Only you've got to watch out you pick the right moment. I remember watching a kids' game where one team changed players just as the opposition started to sweep down the ice. Imagine the surprise of the goalie, when he found himself all alone facing a whole team. The fresh kids swarmed on the ice just in time to see the red light flash. I'll bet their coach's face was red, too!"

Who Said That?

At the present time, with his Canadiens in the play-offs, Irvin would like to reply to his friend, columnist Jim Coleman, who publicly prophesied that Montreal would never enter the charmed circle this year.

"'Dear Jim:
Turn red, white and blue—our colours. Ha, ha.
(signed) Dick Irvin.'"

Photo Finishes:

Congratulations to Maple Leaf goalie, Al Rollins. The towering Vanguard, Sask., boy walked off with the coveted Vezina Trophy in a last game-finish with sensational Terry Sawchuk of the Detroit Red Wings. A mere goal separated the two netminders as it did the goals-scored totals of Red Wing Gord Howe and Canadien "Rocket" Richard. Oddly enough, the Detroit Hockey Writers' Association picked Red Kelly as the Red Wings' most valuable player. Just shows you how powerful those Wings really are. Remember, they also have such diversified hockey talent as Ted Lindsay, Sid Abel and Leo Reise—and, of course, Terry Sawchuk. Dick Irvin to the contrary, we don't see how the Red Wings can fail to take their second straight Stanley Cup. If they miss, will our face be red!

Mormon Elders Lose First Game To Tri-Bells

Toronto, April 3—(CP)—Tri-Bells Monday night scored a 51-39 victory over Utah Mormon Elders in the first game of a best of three series for the Canadian Church of Jesus basketball championship.

Second game scheduled for today and the third, if necessary, will be played Wednesday.

The winner will meet Vancouver Clover Leafs in the Canadian final.

Tri-Belle were faster and better organized than the Mormons but the game was relatively close until Ottawan Isat Nellson for five goals in the third quarter. After he left the game Tri-Belle quickly increased the four-point lead they held at that time.

The Mormons, young mission-ary students, most of whom come from Utah and western United States, played slow, determined basketball but they lacked the scoring punch of Tri-Belle's mobile attack. Nellson, who now have a season's record of 21 wins in 3 games.

Another difficulty faced by the Mormons was the big basketball seems flow. They had trouble adapting themselves.

Richest Irish Sweep Draw In History Opens

Dublin, April 3. (AP)—The richest Irish Hospital Sweepstake draw in history began Monday. The ticket drawn from the huge drum will send prizes totalling £1,154,666 ($3,231,864.80) to lucky ticket holders.

The top prize is worth £30,000 ($150,000).

The draw is based on the Grand National Steeplechase to be run at Aintree, England, Saturday, over a course of both, miles, 856 yards.

Many tickets will be drawn on each of the 73 horses officially entered in the race.

The Irish Hospitals Trust—operators of the sweepstake—have doubled the value of all prizes this year.

Holders of tickets on the winner will get the biggest leg of the booty, $150,000. Second place is worth $60,000 and third $30,000.

Forty-four starters are listed for the jumping classic.

There will be prizes of approximately $1,000 each for all holding tickets on horses which finish ten of the money, and for those whose horses were accepted but later scratched.

And there will be numerous smaller consolation prizes.

An American entry, Jock Whitney's Arctic Gold, is the current favorite. He was last quoted at 15 to 2.

Barrie Flyers Defeat Marlies In Overtime

Barrie, April 3 — (CP) — Barrie Flyers scored two quick goals in overtime last night to beat Toronto Marlboros 4-3 in the first game of their best-of-seven series for the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A title.

Penalties played an important part in the fast, hard-checking game before 4,000. Second game is in Toronto Wednesday night.

Referees Frank Udvari and Jack Molenhacker divided 14 penalties evenly between the teams, and six of the eight goals were scored with a man in the penalty box.

The goals that sewed up the torrid contest were scored by Real Chevrefils and linemate Jack White, both while Ron Hurst of Marlboros was serving a penalty for pulling down Leo Labine in the Barrie zone early in the Toronto goal.

The series between the two top teams in the O.H.A. during the regular season coincidentally finishes the Memorial Cup play off series of their parent clubs.

Barrie, which finished in first place, is the farm team of Boston Bruins and Marlboros are in the Toronto Maple Leafs farm system.

Marlboros were outplayed most of the game by Flyers who outshot them 38-30. However, a stout Toronto defence and some good goaltending by Don Lockhart, kept the losers in the fight.

They had to come from behind twice to stay even with the Flyers, once in the first period after Doug Towers and Labine had given Barrie a 2-0 lead, and again in the third when Barrie led 3-2.

Labine's first goal was scored while Toronto's John Lumley was serving a penalty for slashing. Then, toward the end of the first period Danny Lindsay got Marlboros' first goal with Jim Morrison sitting out an elbowing penalty. Chevrefils joined him in the penalty box for kneeing and Hurst used the two-man advantage to make it 2-2, beating goalie Ellen Howes on a pass from Bill McFarland.

Towers got the only goal of the second period, banging the puck home on a passing play with Dan O'Connor and Lionel Barber to assist.

O'Connor was off for boarding with less than five minutes to go when Lumley scored for Toronto and sent the game into overtime.

An underdog team with a low-rated goalie have upset the NHL semi-finals. Montreal Canadiens won the first two playoff games against the highly favored first-place Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup race. Rocket Richard scored the winning goal in the third period of overtime in each game and Gerry McNeil has racked up a total of 182.19 minutes of shutout against Wings (more than three full games of shutout hockey). Clever Bill Durnan chose not Gerry took over, could hardly do better than little Gerry's record streak.

Conacher Does Not Like Present Style of Play

(By The Canadian Press)

Hockey is due for a decline as Canada's national game unless present roughness is eliminated, Lionel Conacher said Monday after being presented with a plaque by the City of Toronto.

The plaque was presented in connection with Conacher's being chosen in a CP poll as the country's outstanding athlete and football player of the half century.

"If that's hockey—I wasn't playing hockey for 20 years," Mr. Conacher, one of the most-bettered players in the game, said of the Toronto-Boston game here Saturday. Mr. Conacher now is Liberal Member of Parliament for Lisgar, Winnipeg.

He objected particularly to charging from behind which he said was being tolerated. "Eliminate that and you'll eliminate 90 percent of the injuries."

Fernando Gagnon Monday was ordered by the Canadian Boxing Federation to defend his Canadian bantamweight title before June 1.

Gene Letourneau, chairman of the CBF ratings committee, listed five contenders for the Quebecer's crown: Stan Almond Vancouver, now fighting in Britain; Clement Boldue Sherbrooke, Que.; Manny Sylvak, Montreal; Claude Meunier, Three Rivers, Que.; and Tommy Corrick Toronto.

Gagnon last defended his title Aug. 22, 1949, against Jackie Turner of Vancouver.

At Montreal Leo Nadeau Monday was fined $40 and costs for scalping $1.75 tickets to the Montreal Canadiens-Detroit Red Wings playoff game last Saturday for $10. Seven others were fined $30 and costs on similar charges.

Players Receive Most of Money For Four Games

Boston, April 3—(AP)—Proceeds of Saturday's 1-1 Stanley Cup series tie between Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins will be handled in routine fashion, National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell said Monday night.

"Except for the score," explained the league head, "the game is just the second game of the series. The major portion of the money will go to the players."

He added that should an eighth game be necessary to complete the best-of-seven semi-finals between Leafs and Bruins, proceeds would be divided between the two clubs after the player pension fund receives the proper share.

Players receive the majority of proceeds of the first four games in the cup playoffs, both semi-finals and finals. Clubs do not share in the proceeds until after the first four games.

N.B.A. May Strip Ike Williams Of Title Crown

Chicago, April 3 (AP) — The National Boxing Association beasan action today which may strip the world's lightweight boxing championship from Ike Williams for his failure to defend it.

Williams has not risked his 135 pound crown since Dec. 5, 1949, when he outpointed Freddie Dawson of Chicago in 15 rounds at Philadelphia.

Williams failed to abide by an NBA edict to sign for defense of his title by March 31, Dawson's manager, Harry Rudolph, asked that action be taken on the issue.

Executive committeemen of the NBA are being polled today for decision on declaring Williams' title vacant at the direction of Arch Hindman, NBA president. It will take several days to complete the poll.

Meanwhile, Williams got in hot water with the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission. John Degroso, member of the board, announced that Williams has been suspended because he failed to meet Tommy Campbell in a feature bout at the Philadelphia Arena last night.

Williams is due in Chicago Thursday to begin training for his April 11 non-title bout in Chicago Stadium with Fitzie Fruden of Toronto.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A convention in bridge is not a blowout for visiting firemen. It means a bid with a special (artificial) meaning. Permissible is an artificial convention if it is not a private convention.

A private convention is an artificial convention that is known to the using pair and not to their opponents. This is illegal and unethical. It is considered the same as cheating in bridge.

An artificial convention is not private when commonly known. As when it has been widely published. Or is in a popular book. Or in community use. Then it is legal and ethical.

Several artificial conventions are in use. Such as double (for takeout), four no-trump (see and sing shower), overcall in opponent suit (to show no losers in the suit that was bid.)

The overcall in an opponent suit is a spectacular convention of the artificial type. Among other things it says to partner: "It will not lose any tricks in this suit."

Suppose an opponent bids one heart and you bid two hearts. It is an overcall in an opponent suit. That is, it is a defensive bid in a suit that an opponent has just bid.

This means that you have a strong, powerful hand. Besides which you are saying that you will lose no heart tricks. That is, either you have the lost ace or you are void in that suit.

Take another powerful the west hand shown here:

♠ None
♥ A K Q 7 5
♦ K J 6 3 0 4
♣ A ♣ 8 4 2

Suppose south starts with an opening bid of one spade. Did two spades. It will say: "Partner, have no fear about the spade suit. You can depend on it that I will lose no tricks in spades."

Use this only with a knowing partner; one who knows the answer. Not with somebody like Mrs. Knittingham. Gosh, no. She will pass down spade bid and I hate to think what will happen.

Dorothy Bone Smashes Three Bowling Records

Three city bowling records went by the boards yesterday, and males of the species are wearing scarlet-hued countenances today.

For it took an attractive young miss to knock a few haughty male keglers from their records pedestal with a brilliant performance.

She is Miss Dorothy Bone, member of the KVA club of the Commercial Mixed League, who crashed the maples to establish the ladies records for single and triple, and the highest single rolled by anyone in any league this season.

Miss Bone bowled her record-breaking single of 431 when she claimed 10 strikes after "sparing" in the first frame. In the 12th, she hit the head pin.

Her high triple was 802 with singles of 346-431 and 135. Not bad bowling in any man's league. Her single, it is claimed is highest ladies' score ever bowled in the city.

Omaha, April 3 — (CP) — Omaha Knights, their first United States hockey title since 1942 as they overpowered Tulsa 9-2 in the playoff finals Monday night, before 4,059.

Brunetson opened the scoring followed by Folk, Taylor and Durham before Tulsa managed a goal. Then after McMillan sank Tulsa's first Unlac and McKay came back with further markers. Macey ended the scoring with a Tulsa goal.

It was the fifth and deciding match of the best-of-five series.

COMMENDS ARTICLE

Dear Sir,

Having read your excellent article on 'Preserve the Pickerel' in Monday's paper I consider you for your stand in this regard. I am sure it will be read by many without a dissenting voice.

I would go further and say if the public would refrain from buying these fish from those gentry who fish by night with a spear, if the matter is gone very few would fish in this manner for the sport of it.

One sees too many individuals on our river banks at this time of year after sundown and I may say they are not contemplating going for a swim.

Yours very truly,

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 3—(AP)—A star for eight months and a has-been at four years. That's the story of the brief but sensational movie career of Baby Leroy.

His full name is Ronald Leroy Overacker. Now 18, he's a strapping six-footer who could hold his own in any kind of altercation.

"When I was in grammar school I got into a fight over being called 'Baby,'" he laughed. "It's not so bad any more. Not so many people know about it."

I asked him if he had any desire to resume acting, when he finishes his schooling.

Net Acting

"I never thought about it," he admitted. "It just doesn't appeal to me."

Leroy remembers nothing of his film career, so his mother, Mrs. David Epstein had to fill me in.

"Leroy got into pictures quite by chance," reported his mother. "I happened to be at a luncheon where a teacher from Paramount Studios was speaking. She said the studio was looking for a baby to be starred with Maurice Chevalier in 'Bedtime Story.' He was eight months old then.

"He got the role and then did several other pictures, including about four with W. C. Fields."

The feud between Baby Leroy and Fields, who allegedly hated children, is legendary. I asked Mrs. Epstein if working with the comic was hazardous for a child.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Wednesday, April 4

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Stimulus in the air must be directed along constructive lines today, it can prove very helpful. Money to be made in sound transactions, sales, etc. Mind temper!

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—All favorable aspects but you will turn mediocre matters into solid achievements if you extend yourself some and don't waste time dreaming. Important trades, mechanics favored over art.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Mostly up to you personality and the demands of others. Decided how much you can, will, accomplish. You may not be your usual scintillating self but you can advance, with same caution.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Day suggests moderation in all things, particularly in pleasures, eating, drinking. Best achievement obtained if you are sensibly careful to master your duties or play. It will pay.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—May not be best time to seek a raise or better position but work hard with future in mind, you won't lose out. Urgent tasks will conclude if you use trouble than or tricky matters.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—You may feel restricted today and less alert than at other times, but this is often more helpful than you think. Will give you some needed rest and time for checking on work, health.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Same tendencies as Taurus now. Hold to sound principles, attend first to your specific tasks. There will be time later to tinker with new tries. Your fine balance a big aid.

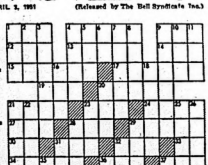
October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Promising rays for your energetic, difficult matters. You in armed forces will make new history, great gain for humanity's security. A good day for hard work, sound planning.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Very favorable influences in your sector. Mars and Jupiter only planets now so advantageously aspected. Speed ahead in all sound matters, money interests, manufacturing essentials, etc.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Your Saturn says take a little more pains in tedious but necessary detailed work, in all tasks and matters where patience, accuracy are important. Advancement can be made.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Not too difficult a day but you'll gain objectives quicker, make whole day run smoother if you refuse to be side tracked from a well planned schedule. Neptune favorable. Be prompt.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Sound, clear judgment governed by Jupiter's aspect, add to this intuitiveness and knowledge gained from experience and you will come out ahead in day's program. Have faith.



YOU BORN TODAY: Action, speed and cleverness are inherent. Many diversified talents in Aries but it is a must that you curb any domineering tendency. Thinking your ideas and way are always right. You have so much of good in you and so great a chance to advance in your profession or trade that it is imperative you keep failings from defeating the high success that can be yours. Do not be hurried into important decisions, changes in plans. Pray when troubled, and seek advice from competent people.

Russia Accused Of Operating Spy Schools

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Yugoslavia accuses Russia of operating spy schools 'in satellite countries to train agents for espionage against Marshal Tito's government.

That isn't surprising. It's well known that Moscow maintains an elaborate counter – intelligence system and operates schools not only at home but in occupied territory and foreign countries.

However, we should be naive if we thought Russia was the only country having such a system. Every major power in the world has its agents at home and abroad. Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi of Hungary a year ago said the United States maintains "the greatest spying organization in the world."

Let us hope Rakosi is correct, because there's plenty of work for counter-intelligence agents. You will recall that not long ago the U.S., Canada and Britain made a concerted drive again red spies with startling results.

Counter – intelligence agents these days have to be not only smart and brave, but they must have careful training. Merely a Mata-Hari affair, using the diplomat into giving up deep secrets to the seductious girl—although of course women are employed in the service.

Candidates for employment as intelligence agents are carefully selected and screened to determine their special qualifications. A candidate who, for instance, aims at foreign service, must have one or more foreign languages.

However, counter intelligence isn't by any means confined to diplomatic and governmental affairs. More often than not the agent will find his task in institutions plants and other vital industries among the ordinary workers.

The counter-intelligence agent who gets caught is out of luck. The penalty is imprisonment or death. In the Russian satellite states great numbers of "spies" have been sent to prison or have been executed.

LEGISLATURE

During the night lifting the House approved expenditure of $10,742,000 by lands and forests department, the last of this year's budget estimates.

Can't Reach Agreement

Repeated government efforts to reach agreement with the Great Lakes Lumber and Shipping Company on a supply of sawlogs for its Fort William mill have failed, Premier Frost told the legislature.

"I don't know whether I can across any more difficult personalities to deal with in my life," Mr. Frost said during consideration of lands department estimates.

A visitor in the speaker's gallery during the debate was E. E. Johnson, president of the Fort William company, who earlier Monday presented a brief to a legislative committee charging that government "strangulation" methods had denied his mill a supply of logs and forced it to close, putting 3,000 persons out of work.

The Fort William mill, number bill was rated by the company at 125,000,000 board feet a year, the premier said. Mr. Johnson thought the area could sustain the mill on an exchange basis with pulp companies, with each forest interest exchanging supplies with the other.

"Our information is different than that," Mr. Frost said. It couldn't be done on the basis of a sustained forest yield. It was probably doubtful if the mill could operate on a sustained yield from the Thunder Bay area at a mill production of 60,000,000 board feet —the highest figure it had ever reached.

Minister Supports Premier

Lands Minister Scott backed up the premier's argument. To operate both the Fort William and Lakehead Pulp Mills under an exchange basis, with one supplying the other with logs needed, the area could not produce sufficient sawlogs and a surplus of pulpwood would have to be exported.

The Fort William mill can be operated, Mr. Scott said, but its annual production would have to be tied to the production of pulp mills through an integrated cutting plan.

The question of exporting was raised earlier in the debate by Charles Cox (C—Fort William), who charged the government with failure to reduce the amount of pulpwood exported.

Mr. Cox said the Liberal government had permitted export of pulp during the depression to provide jobs in the forests.

Has Become Curse Claim

"What was a blessing then has become a curse," he said.

Premier Frost countered with the statement that exports were in fact being reduced.

"For the first time there is an Ontario government with a policy of reducing exports," said Mr. Frost. The government was trying to overcome the effects of export licences permitted by a previous Liberal administration before the last war.

The Fort William member said inability to obtain an assured supply of newsprint was a "contributing factor" in the closing of the Edmonton bulletin. A newsprint shortage had forced the Brandon (Man.) Sun to reduce its size. Toronto newspapers were having trouble getting newsprint supplies, he said.

Urged to Increase Grants

The government was urged by one of its own members to increase emergency grants to the province's small fairs.

T. L. Patrick (PC—Middlesex North) urged that appropriations for such grants be made when the money through had weather — be increased from $10,000 to $20,000. He spoke during the budget debate.

Grants for Class A and B fairs had been increased last year, but the small Class C fairs were essential to rural communities As an example he cited the Ilderton Fair, sponsored by the London Township Agricultural Society, which holds its 100th annual exhibition this year. Such fairs were hard hit if they are rained out, he said.

Mr. Patrick, a well-known sheep breeder, attacked the low prices paid for wool.

A huge stockpile of wool five years ago had disappeared and the current shortage had resulted in increased prices throughout the world. The province's sheep population was the lowest in 20 years, and cloth made from high-price wool was being imported from England while Canadian farmers continued to receive a low price.

Mr. Patrick called on the minister of agriculture to halt what he termed "a traffic in inferior bulls delivered to stock yards. They should all be slaughtered," he said, instead of being resold to farmers.

He praised two conservation schemes in Southern Ontario—in the Thames Valley and the Aux Sable Valley. They would mean much to farming in the areas.

Would Make Britons Backyard Producers

Norwich, England (CP)—Niel Armstrong, a solicitor, aims to make Norwich the best-fed city in Britain.

He is organizing a food production council designed to prove the country can supply more of her food from her own backyard.

"Our main object is to encourage and interest every man, woman and youngster with a bit of land, however small, to produce as much as they can," said Armstrong. "And that goes for all of Britain."

Associated with Armstrong are the small pig keepers' council and the national allotments and garden society. All want to increase production in Britain's back gardens.

During the Second World War, "backyarders" produced 8,250,000 tons of food. In 1949 they provided 13,500 tons of pork, 30,000 hundred weight of rabbit meat and a quarter of the country's eggs.

Armstrong has personal experience as a backyard farmer. After the war, he dug up his tennis court, planted vegetables, bought a couple of hens and rabbits and started farming. Now he keeps 10 chickens with an average yearly egg yield of 150 from each hen.

Canadian Tourist Loses Passport, Has Stirring Trip

London. (CP)— Next time amateur playwright Dave Conway goes on a continental holiday he'll keep a tight grip on his passport.

Conway, from (1ST Admiral Rd.), Toronto, left Canada recently for a holiday in France, Switzerland and Italy. Last month, on a visit to Genoa, he left his passport in San Remo.

"I was promptly arrested in the railway station by Italian police," Conway said in an interview, "I was held for a week. Finally the Italians took me to the British consulate, which arranged to have my passport sent from San Remo, and I was released three days later."

Conway said that during his imprisonment he had a scuffle with a guard, and was subsequently beaten up by three men he identified as Italian governmens employees. He said he decided not to make any charges against the men because "the whole thing probably resulted from language difficulties."

The 30-year-old Conway, who was born in Wigan, Lancashire, is director of youth activities at a Toronto church. In the last two years he has appeared in and directed several of his own plays, produced at the church. He also appeared in "Night Must Fall" at Drumlin in 1944. He plans to return to Canada in June.

Army MP Convicted Of Assaulting Constable

London, Ont., April 3 (CP)— Two policemen, one an army man, were injured when a fight broke out in Dundas Street before a crowd of 500.

Today L. Cpl. William T. Cooper, 22, of the Army Provost Corps began a three months sentence for assaulting city constable John Kinnear.

Cooper pleaded innocent.

Kinnear said that when he tried to arrest Cooper, Cooper

Controls Removed On Construction Of German Ships

Bonn, Germany, April 3—(AP) —The western allies today removed all restrictions on the size and speed of German merchant ships and lifted their bans on production of synthetic oil and rubber.

They also permitted the Germans to resume production of synthetic ammonia, chlorine and styrene, and removed controls over production of machine tools and primary aluminum.

[illegible] Bundestag still war controls on Germany's potential war industries leaves aircraft, naval craft and military weapons as about the only things the Germans are forbidden to make.

Even with these arms bans remaining, however, the new authorwrenched away his billy and slugged him twice across the head.

Kinnear said the attempted arrest came after he broke up a melee in front of a dance hall. Cooper, he said, hit him in the face with his fist and declared "no cop is going to interfere with me."

The smartest dog ever!
Sport is showing off his big act. He can retrieve a stick with the best of 'em. He's ready now to have Dad teach him another trick!
Whether your pet is a pedigreed prize-winner or "just dog"—a good training tip to remember is patience. Don't expect him to master a lot of new tricks at once . . . don't show anger if he doesn't "catch on." Reward him with a friendly pat each time he tries hard. Above all, be patient.
There's plenty of fun and exercise to be enjoyed in training your dog. You're doing something different, and relaxing your mind and body. It's another Canadian Way to Good Health!

Blast Reduces Shopping Centre to Shambles

St. Paul, Minn., April 3. (AP)—Fire and explosions reduced a sprawling shopping centre to shambles Sunday. Two persons were hurt.

Damage estimates ran as high as $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 making the blaze St. Paul's costliest.

Nine of the 17 business places in the block-sized centre, were heaps of rubble after the blaze.

Firemen said flames apparently broke out in a supermarket about 2 a.m., E.S.T., and spread through most of the "L"-shaped centre.

Shortly after the blaze had engulfed a drug store, an explosion ripped it apart.

Cause of the fire was not determined.

The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Rutt

"We've another member some- where," Northcott said, "but I don't know where he's gone. Well, I suppose you'd like to freshen up a bit. I'll show you to your cabins."

When Ede came back on deck, she got a pleasant surprise. Sitting in a wicker chair, talking to Mrs. Winwood, was Gil Summerfield.

"Why, Gil," she said. "How nice. You're the last person I expected to find here. I didn't even know you knew Mr. Northcott."

"Known him for years," Gil told her. "He was a few classes ahead of me in college. But I haven't seen him much since then. We've only—sort of renewed our acquaintance lately."

"Well, treat him nicely, Gil," Ede laughed. "He's our best client."

"I know," said Gil and, for just a second, Ede thought that there was seriousness in his voice.

Mrs. Winwood, a chattery, vapid woman, monopolized conversation on the afterdeck as Northcott's cruiser slipped down the river. And she also monopolized Dan Reagan for whom, she averred openly, she had "fallen for a big way." She nick-named him Handsome Dan, and Reagan, after an embarrassed glance at Ede, handled the situation with surprising aplomb.

"Handsome Dan!" he said. "Isn't that the name of the bulldog they use for a mascot at Yale? I'm flattered and insulted, half and half."

"I like your big Irishman," Gil Summerfield said to Ede later.

"Dan's swell," said Ede warmly. "He's certainly been a good friend to the Frey."

"He's lucky." They had stopped at the rail and Gil looked down at the smooth water, pewter-colored now, streaked with crimson from the dying sun. "He's in a position to be a friend."

Again Ede sensed that undercurrent of seriousness in his voice.

"Gil," she said suddenly. You seem to have something on your mind."

"Not a thing." His eyes were still on the water. "Nothing but a little spare hair."

"Your hair," Ede said, "is almost luxurious. It's your attitude that worries me."

"Sorry, lady," Gil lit a cigarette and flipped the burnt match overside. "But I don't know what you're talking about."

After dinner there was a bridge game and this seemed to be the element of the horse-faced Mr. Winwood. Partnered with his wife, he played against Mrs. Northcott and Gil Summerfield. And it soon developed into an earnest contest.

At the first mention of bridge, Dan Reagan had stated his position flatly. He didn't know the first thing about the game; had never played. He hoped that fact would not cramp anybody's style.

"Not at all," Northcott said cordially. "We're seven, as the poet says. Not enough for two tables. Besides, I've things to do around the boat. I couldn't play myself."

It left Ede and Reagan free to prowl around.

A low moon, like a pale disc, was climbing slowly into the black vault of the sky. It cast a feeble light that was hardly more than a suggestion. And then a puff of wind, whipping over the starboard rail, blew even the suggestion away.

On deck the following morning Ede learned from the chattery Mrs. Winwood that Gil Summerfield had gone ashore in the small motorboat that the cruiser carried.

"He went very early, bag and baggage," Mrs. Winwood said, amplifying her news. "Must have been something pretty important."

"Must have been," agreed Ede. But she wrinkled her forehead, puzzled. It wasn't like Gil to go off without saying goodbye to her. Northcott explained blandly, at lunch.

"Mr. Summerfield received an urgent message by radio," he said. "A business matter. It's a shame it had to spoil his weekend."

All afternoon the cruiser slid through a sea calm and still, like blue glass. Reagan, who seemed to be avoiding Ede, occupied his time by fishing with Northcott and Mr. Winwood. It left Ede to the mercy of the ladies as she soon decided that Mrs. Northcott's conversation was almost as trivial as Mrs. Winwood's. As the day wore on, she grew rather bored.

At precisely 5 o'clock, however the boredom vanished.

Mrs. Northcott had gone for a nap and Mrs. Winwood had wandered off to supervise the fishing Ede escaped to the afterdeck with a novel borrowed from the ship's little library. She had been reading for half an hour when a shadow fell across her book.

She looked up quickly. Lewis Northcott stood there, faintly smiling.

"I've been wanting," he said dropping into a chair next to here, "to have a little talk with you."

Ah, Ede thought, being invited on this cruise was not entirely social. And then something—perhaps it was the little smile curling Northcott's lips—warned her of danger.

But she said, encouragingly "Yes Mr. Northcott?"

For a moment he gazed out over the still water. Then his eyes came back, seemed to fix on hers almost hypnotically.

"I'm the kind of a man," he said abruptly, "who usually gets what he wants."

It was not said with any bragadocio. Rather, it was a cold statement of fact. And Ede knew that it prefaced something. She felt herself tensing, involuntarily. But she kept her voice light.

"You sound," she said, "as if I have something that you want."

His colorless eyes stared at her even harder. "I do."

"And what might that be?" Ede asked in the same light tone.

"An advertising agency," said Northcott quietly.

[Ede started. "Perhaps I'm stupid, Mr. Northcott," said. "But I don't seem to understand."

"I'll make it a little clearer." Northcott smiled again. "You have an advertising agency. I want to buy it."

"Oh." She strove to keep astonishment from showing on her face. "This is rather surprising, Mr. Northcott, but suppose it isn't for sale?"

He waved this aside. "It's been almost long experience, Miss Frey, that everything is for sale— if the price is right."

"But why," Ede asked, to gain time, "do you want our agency in particular? It would be easy enough for you to start an agency."

"My reasons," Northcott said, "aren't particularly pertinent to this talk. Miss Frey, I won't cloud the issue with words. You own 51 percent of the stock of Frey and Company and you don't want to sell. But let me make my offer. I'll give you. . . ."

Science against pain

Science progresses: For 50 years we have used little white tablets—acetylsalicylic acid—for the relief of pain. Today this familiar painkiller is available in a new form without the disadvantage of insolubility, acidity and bitter taste. It is called DISPRIN.

Why take DISPRIN?

Because DISPRIN is soluble and substantially neutral. When taken in water as recommended, it enters the stomach as a true solution and not as undissolved particles. It is therefore less liable to cause stomach discomfort.

DISPRIN is readily absorbed. Because it definitely dissolves (not merely disintegrates) it permits speedy absorption and gives quicker relief.

DISPRIN is palatable. Even children will take it readily.

Science steps forward with DISPRIN

DISPRIN is now available at your druggist, bottle of 24 tablets or Handy Pocket Packet of 6.

C.N.R. May Have Recorded Last Deficit For Years

New Capital Structure Being Set Up By President

Ottawa, April 4 — (CP) — The Canadian National Railways' record over-all 1950 deficit of $3,361,000 probably will be the government line's last red-ink entry in a high-revenue year.

The government is taking steps to clear away the clutter of ancient debig that has dragged the C.N.R. into the red steadily, even in times of buoyant operating returns such as last year's record high.

Plans are to do this at the current session of Parliament through setting up a new capital structure for the $1,500,000,000 company. The new set-up recommended by the Royal Commission on transportation, headed by C. D. Howe, would have left it with a surplus of more than $14,000,009 for 1950.

As it was, the debt - burdened capital structure drew off all of the company's $42,418,000 that was available for interest and left it $3,361,000 short of meeting the interest obligations. These figures were given in the company's annual report tabled in the Commons yesterday.

The income deficit represented the difference between last year's showing since 1945 and was based on all-time-high gross revenues of $353,831,000 — also a record $53,000,000 from 1949. The higher gross was due to a combination of higher freight rates and greater freight traffic.

At the same time, operating expenses took a jump from $478,-501,001 to $425,597,000. Payments this rise were wage increases, higher costs of materials and equipment and other unavoidable expenses that go with more traffic haulage.

From the net operating revenue of $59,834,000 there were deductions of $17,417,000 — nearly up largely of taxes — to leave the $42,418,000 available for interest charges.

The over - all deficit compared with one of $9,950,000 the year before.

President Donald Gordon, reporting to the government for the first time since taking over at the start of 1950, referred to the company's heavy debt burden and said also that it "is confronted with substantially increased wages and other costs for this year. The 40-hour work week to be started June 1 would add "substantially" to costs.

DRAWS "GLONCAIRIG"

Hamilton, April 4. (CP)—Only out from Ireland four years ago, Mrs. Robert Hill of Hamilton, has been crowned a horse in the Irish Sweepstakes this weekend. The horse she drew was Gloncarrig, whose odds are 25 to 1. Gloncarrig's win was the first sweepstake ticket she has bought since she came to Canada, although she always held a ticket "back home".

TRAFFIC HELD UP

Calcutta, April 4 — (Reuters) — Schoolboys sat down in a street in the town of Kharagh yesterday and held up traffic for several hours. Police finally arrested eight and dispersed the rest. The boys were protesting against trading being allowed to use the street. They alleged a truck had recently knocked down one of their schoolmates there.

JOIN WITH ITALIANS

Taranto, Italy, April 4 (Reuters) — Five units of the United States fleet, the cruiser Newport and four Italian warships in exercises off the Italian naval base here. The American ships were two destroyers, a submarine and two minesweepers. The exercises will go on for several days.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 4 (CP) Synopsis: Winter still holds sway over most of Ontario. Cochrane 30 degrees southwest of Fort William. The thermometer dipped to five below zero at Kapuskasing. Blankets the province as far south as Muskoka, and maximum temperatures were days near the freezing point even along the lower lakes. Little relief from the monotonous weather is in sight for most of Ontario today and tomorrow — but there will be some sunshine in western sections. Afternoon temperatures will be about five degrees higher on Thursday.

COMMONS SEEKS POWER TO DEAL WITH COMMUNISTS

By Bill Can Take Away Citizenship Rights

Ottawa, April 4—(CP)—A three-pronged program may emerge from the current session of parliament to give the Canadian government greater power to deal with communists and other subversive elements in Canada.

The commons yesterday approved the principle of a bill giving the government wider authority to take away the citizenship rights from disloyal Canadians.

While the measure was under study, Justice Minister Garson disclosed that his department is working on a draft amendment to the Criminal Code to deal with communist activities. If the cabinet approves, the amendment will be submitted to parliament.

Citizenship Minister Harris hinted that proposed amendments to the Immigration Act will provide for the deportation of naturalized Canadians who are deprived of their citizenship for disloyalty.

The bill making the amendments to the Canadian Citizenship Act, already passed by the senate, is due to receive third and final reading today in the commons.

Members said the bill is a step in the right direction but that additional moves are necessary to combat subversive activities. Stanley Knowling (PC—Toronto Eglinton) noted that the immigration act does not give the government power to deport naturalized Canadians who are deprived of citizenship. Mr. Harris interjected that the government already has indicated its intentions of amending the Immigration Act. He could not indicate the changes to be made at this time.

Tables Report

At the house opening, Transport Minister Chevrier tabled the annual report of the Canadian National Railways. It showed that in 1950 the C. N. R. enjoyed the highest gross revenue in its history and the biggest net operating return since 1945. The deficit amounted to $3,000,000 compared with $42,000,000 in 1949.

High Prices Continue At Cattle Auctions

Toronto, April 4—CP—Auction sales continue to bring high prices in all parts of this province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in a weekly report.

Young cattle sales have been particularly high. One litter of eight 75-pound feeder pigs brought $33 each at an auction sale at Lansark county.

Record attendance was reported at county seed fairs in Grey, Muskoka, Lanark and Nipissing.

There was a serious shortage of farm help in Ontario. Excellent to poor runs of baby chicks are reported. Maple syrup prices ranged from $4 to $5 a gallon.

Floods Take Increasing Toll in Quebec Communities, May Force Mass Evacuations

Montreal, April 4 (CP) — Three government ice-breakers battled through heavy ice jams in the St. Lawrence River today in a race to Montreal to relieve inundated suburbs.

The ships Lady Grey, Ernest Lapointe and the Sorel were reported working through ice packs in the swollen river, 40 miles east of Pointe Aux Trembles on the east end of Montreal Island.

The communities have been hardest hit of several Quebec municipalities as the St. Lawrence spilled over its banks causing mass evacuation and thousands of dollars of damage.

One hundred families fled the rolling St. Lawrence at Pointe Aux Trembles. An 8-foot thick in spots ice and water rushing through the streets of the community of 7,500. Another 100 homes were under water and three-quarters of the town suffered from at least basement flooding. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

At Beauceville, the swollen Chaudiere River lived up to its threat of the last two days by overflowing into 100 riverside homes. Residents fled to higher ground in a heavy rainstorm that added to the flood tide. An ice jam three miles downstream caused the flood.

Still further downstream, lowland communities of St. Joseph and Ste. Marie were in danger. The water already has crept over wide areas of farm land, the river at 22 feet above normal and still rising.

Railway communications between Quebec and La Malbaie were cut about 69 miles east of Quebec by a combination landslide and flood. Heavy rains loosened tons of earth, and rock and sent it thundering over the line. Then the St. Lawrence crept in and washed out the railway bed.

Road travel between Montreal and Quebec on the north shore of the St. Lawrence remained closed today. Several feet of water covered the highway for three miles last way between Montreal and Three Rivers.

At the junction of the St. Maurice and St. Lawrence, the water continued to creep up on waterfront buildings at Three Rivers. Last night only 12 feet above normal, and ferry travel to the St. Lawrence south shore was hazardous.

The Red Cross, civilian volunteers and police pitched in at Pointe Aux Trembles. Families were given emergency shelter in the Red Cross drop zone, where families refused to leave their flood-threatened homes, they were ordered out by civic authorities.

Huge ice floes battered evacuated homes, lifting some off their foundations.

PREPARED FOR TREACHERY

Despite the presence of his comrades, one of whom can be seen reloading his gun in the background, this United Nations soldier is taking no chances on treachery by his Chinese communist prisoner. So he keeps his weapon trained on the end as he takes him into headquarters near the 38th parallel. The crawling communist, after hiding out in the fields, had just crept from his position to surrender when this photo was taken. — Central Press Canadian.

Farmer Admits Shooting Four Through Window

Conway, Mo., April 4 — (AP)— A 23-year-old farmer today admitted pumping a volley of shots through an Ozarks farmhouse window and killing four persons.

Sheriff E. L. Cunningham identified the farmer as Kenneth Essery, who lives near the scene of the slayings, and said he verbally admitted the shootings, which occurred last night about four miles southeast of here in the Ozark hills of Southern Missouri.

Four persons who responded to a call for aid from the farm family found them dead on. One of the four was wounded.

Prosecuting Attorney John Hosmer said Essery declined to give a reason for the shootings. No charges have been filed.

Order Company To Knock Out Word 'Liver'

Washington, April — (AP)— The government has ordered Carter's to knock the word "liver" out of Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Furthermore, the Federal trade commission said yesterday, Carter's must stop saying without qualification that its pills will help you need when you're down-and-out, dizzy, tongue coated, sour-in-the-dumps, irritable, bilious or sullen.

The F.T.C. conclusion, as summed up in an accompanying statement by Commissioner John Carson:

"Carter's Little Liver Pills were and are, as the findings of fact show, nothing more than an irritative laxative compound."

The company, officially known as Carter's Products, Inc., will test the decision in the United States Court of Appeal.

In Ottawa, an official of the health department said he does not want to "commit myself on whether Canada will consider similar action on Canadian manufactured Carter's Little Liver Pills.

BLOODY PURGE AT NEW HIGH IN RED CHINA

Believe 212 Killed In 13-Day Period

Hong Kong, April 4—(AP)—Reports from mainland China indicated today the communists' bloody purge reached a new high the last two weeks in March.

Still, the reds declared, the program of blotting out all opposition must be increased in intensity.

The Peiping radio announced mass executions Saturday of "a large group of counter-revolutionaries" at Tientsin and of 23 at Swatow. This brought to at least 212 the number of executions officially announced in the 13-day period ended March 31.

It is impossible to determine the exact number executed.

Official and unofficial Chinese nationalists sources at Taipeh, Formosa, reported hundreds of red executions, with thousands more under arrest on the mainland. The communist defense ministry has said about 10,000 await execution at Nanchang, Kiangsi province capital.

There was no way to confirm the many reports flooding out at Taipeh.

The nationalists have charged the victims of the red purge already total more than 1,000,000.

The Peiping radio gloated the example set by recent executions at Peiping and Tientsin and urged the purge be stepped up.

Turned Over to Court

The broadcast then turned to the case of five Canadian Roman Catholic nuns, priests, lay teachers and accused of causing the deaths of 2,116 children. It hinted this would be a model example of how and where to "mobilize the masses."

It said more than 1,700 "representatives of housewives, workers, medical profession students and various other circles" were mobilized for the trial at a Canton meeting March 30. The nuns have been turned over to a people's court for punishment in accordance with the law."

It was not disclosed whether they were present at the rally, where demands were made that they be sentenced to life and publicly degraded by being paraded through streets of Canton.

Hong Kong Roman Catholic sources said the nuns did not work at an orphanage but at a receiving centre for Canton's numerous drifting and abandoned children. The nuns they added, took on the task when the city itself failed to make any provision for handling the ever-present problem.

Communists Offer Heavy Resistance To U.N. Offensive

500,000 Reds are Reported Massed for Spring Drive

Tokyo, April 4 — (AP) — An Allied task force drove four miles north of the North Korean border today against heavy communist resistance.

A field dispatch said the task force met heavy red mortar fire and some artillery fire near Tongyong, four miles north of the border on the western front. But it drove ahead.

(Reuters news agency said front dispatches indicated the communists were offering their stiffest resistance since the start of the current U. N. offensive. The reds were making a serious effort to relieve Allied push across the 38th, Reuters added.)

Another Allied force nearby punched two miles into red Korea in the Yongyong area.

Earlier reports said an American unit had crossed parallel 38 on the central front and routed Chinese reds from two hills. The patrol was probing the outer areas of a huge new build - up which almost 500,000 communist troops are massed for an expected red offensive.

The strong force which crossed parallel 38 Tuesday along a 15-mile stretch of the western front withdrew by nightfall under heavy fire.

Mig Shot Down

In the air, American Sabre jets destroyed one Russian-type MIG 15 jet fighter and damaged two others yesterday in a swirling dogfight near the Manchurian border.

Other allied planes ripped into communist ground forces and supply lines. They destroyed four tanks, six trucks and five railroad cars in 37 sorties flown yesterday.

The front control came on the continued report that a large group of reds is moving into the communist build-up area north of Seoul.

Intelligence reports say there now are nearly 500,000 combat troops in this area, prime for the long-expected spring offensive. Unseasonably spring weather and glue-like mud will favor the reds, who will launch the greatest attack of the war any day now.

U.S. Fighters and Thunderjets hammered the red transport network. Preliminary reports Wednesday said they had severely damaged or destroyed and several direct hits on the Sonchon railroad yards.

Scattered Fighting

There was scattered ground fighting on the western front. A brief skirmish was reported eight miles southwest of Yonchon and another eight miles northeast of Yonchon is six miles north of the border and 36 miles north of Seoul.

U.N. ground and air forces claimed 1,795 enemy casualties in Wednesday's fighting. The U.S. Eighth army reported 1,410, air forces 208 and carrier-based planes 185.

Two American tank forces that crossed the line Tuesday in the west pushed 2 1-2 miles into red Korea before they were forced to withdraw.

Special Trip of 21 B.C.I. Students To United Nations Sessions at N.Y.

'Huge Sucess' Says Staff Advisor

Twenty-one students of BCIVS and their advisor returned announced their trip to the United Nations at New York last week a "huge success." They left Belleville one week ago Monday at six o'clock in the morning, and were back here Saturday night, travelling both ways by bus.

Accompanying the group, all members of the Junior United Nations Club of the school, were Leslie F. Reid, staff adviser, Miss Ruth Silvester, also on the staff at BCIVS, who chaperoned the girls, and Arnold C. Campbell, chairman of the Board of Education.

The students, through Bruce Kidd, Canadian vice-consul in New York, were able to get some tickets for the United Nations Assembly sessions. "There were literally thousands trying to get in to see the assembly," Mr. Reid said. At that, the BCI group had to work in relays, since tickets were not available for all of them.

Thrilled by Discussions

Mr. Reid said that scarcity of the tickets was pointed up by the fact that Senator Lester Connell University, also visiting U.N., couldn't get in. Senator Connell is Jacob Malik Russia's well-known representative and veto expert, during the Korean crisis. All the Belleville students were at the sessions, he said, when they were thrilled by the discussions, Mr. Reid said.

The arrangement with the Trusteeship Council of U.N. the students were shown special films dealing with the work of the organization. Lunch at the cafeteria at United Nations also found "fascinating" because of the wide variety of nationalities and languages served.

Visited New Quarters

In addition, the group visited the new U.N. headquarters in Manhattan, and toured Radio City Music Hall, the Hayden Planetarium, the American Museum of Natural History, the La Guardia Air Field, took an NBC television tour, saw Rockefeller Centre, the Empire State building and many other points of interest. They tied it all up with an overall tour of New York City by chartered bus.

"Rates for the tours were greatly reduced because of the size of the group," Mr. Reid said.

The boys stayed at the Sloane House, and the girls at Spellman Hall of the YWCA. Everyone met at six o'clock each night for discussion. Accommodation and transportation were paid for each student, but each had to bring his own meals. "Individual costs probably amounted to $20 or $30 Mr. Reid said.

Helped Raise Money

Finances for the trip were obtained from the Board of Education, the Chamber of Commerce and four service clubs—Rotary, Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Y's Men. In addition, students themselves raised $115 toward the cost of the trip.

The students left New York Saturday morning at 8.30 and did not get back to Belleville until midnight. They came back by way of the Hudson River, and stopped at the Royal Military Academy for a while. They toured that institution, and then came on to Belleville.

Apart from the educational advantages of the trip itself, Mr. Reid said that he was well satisfied that the group had got everything out of seeing the United Nations function at Lake Success and that everyone had a really "a lot of good out of the sessions."

Were they tired after the long haul Saturday?

"Just dead beat, that's all," Mr. Reid commented.

Four students and an adviser from Toronto also made the trip.

Former Residents of Campbellford Die of Gas Asphyxiation on Trip

Former residents of the Campbellford area, Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Meiklejohn of Edmonton, were found dead when gas was believed to be accidental gas asphyxiation at a tourist cabin at Drumheller, Alta. They had left Edmonton to visit their daughter at Carson City, Nevada. The deaths took place March 23.

The coroner's report in Portland said it was believed the couple had been preparing a cup of tea and had turned on the gas for some reason. The theory was that either oxygen in the room became exhausted or that the deaths were caused by leaking gas.

The body of Mrs. Meiklejohn was found on the bed and that of her husband beside it, her feet. Mr. Meiklejohn was 65 and Mrs. Meiklejohn 61.

Both were born in the vicinity of Campbellford and had gone West in 1906. They had lived at Edmonton since 1921.

They are survived by one son, Donald of Edmonton, and three daughters, Marguerite of Edmonton; Mrs. Colin Bruce, Mission City, B.C., and Mrs. William Johnstone of Carson City, Nevada.

Mr. Meiklejohn had four brothers, Edward and Ernest of Prowort, Alta.; Clarence of Vancouver Island and Stanley of Edmonton, and a sister, Mrs. Sanford Meiklejohn, of Springbrook, Ont. Mrs. Meiklejohn has a sister, Mrs. S. Holden, at Stirling. There are two brothers, George Wilson, of Frankford, and Roy Wilson, of Napanee.

A double funeral was held at the Foster McGarvey Funeral Home at Edmonton with interment being in Edmonton Cemetery.

Boys' Training Schools in Three Countries Outlined

Difference in the operation of Boys' Training Schools in Canada, Britain and the continent was the theme at a three day clinic for the Madoc Home and School Association held by Rev. Bent, rector of the Y.M.C.A. here.

Mr. Bent spoke to a large audience in the auditorium of the Madoc High School, pointing out the necessity of discipline in boys and discipline as exercised in different schools.

He called upon his experience in this work, while in England and Europe, comparing them with the schools in Canadian institutions.

"Education and discipline in Canadian schools," he said, "were far superior to that overseas. More personal attention is given to boys here, and when their terms have expired they are sent back to different environments than that from which they came. Places in society are arranged for the boys while in overseas institutions, although generally considered, not much provision is made for the boy's welfare after he leaves."

The Y.M.C.A. Boys' Choir provided the musical entertainment of the meeting. Mrs. Stan McBride acted as accompanist.

C of C Secretary-Manager Outlines Functions to Club

Kiwanians heard an outline of the Chamber of Commerce and what it is doing for the city of Belleville at their Tuesday luncheon figure Freeman Burrows, secretary-manager, explained. He explained to the club the functions of the Chamber, and what it was trying to promote within the city.

"People in Belleville should appreciate more fully the advantages we have," Mr. Burrows said. "We live in one of the finest small cities of Ontario, under fine municipal government." He reviewed the industrial expansion in the city during the past few years, the fine position for tourist trade, education within the city, and the growth of a decade.

"The city's growth has been phenomenal," he said, citing 15,000 in 1940 to 23,700 last year. Building permits for the year totalled $1,500,000, keeping pace with the growth in population. Into this situation, the Chamber of Commerce, a voluntary organization of citizens attempting to promote the civic, commercial and industrial capacities of the city.

Chamber Affiliated

The local Chamber is affiliated with the national Chamber of Commerce, and embraces the national purposes (1) to foster communism; (2) to maintain and advance the principles of free trade; (3) to support private initiative; (4) to represent businessmen at Ottawa; and (5) to improve the welfare of the communities across Canada.

The local Chamber has a membership of 265, and it is emphasizing a year-round program of public relations and publicity for the city. Mr. Burrows outlined the Chamber's recreation, public election meetings, credential checking of delegates to conventions, urban-rural relations, and tourist promotion as activities the Chamber has on hand in.

Must be Helpful

"We do our part to help promote the tourist trade," Mr. Burrows said, "but the public must be friendly, courteous and helpful to visitors."

Industrial expansion was mentioned by the speaker as being one of the Chamber's most important jobs. It is the accepted agency through which negotiations are made by industrialists for sites in the city. "We have the machinery for selling Belleville to the industrialists," he said, "but we need leads and cooperation from the citizens."

Mr. Burrows urged that a common spirit of working together be developed to keep Belleville moving. "Belleville tomorrow will be what the present generation sees fit to make of it—nothing more and nothing less."

Base metals dipped fractions. Heading the list downward were Waite Amulet, Quemont, Golden Manitou, Labrador, Noranda and East Sullivan. Hudson Bay bucked the trend for a 50 cent gain.

Western oils declined pennies over a broad front.

Cheese Makers Want Producers To Supply And Pay For Labor Required to Take Sediment Test

The Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association will request the Ontario Cheese Producers to supply and pay for the additional labor required at factories this season to take samples for sediment testing of patrons' milk.

This was decided at the annual spring conference of makers from the Central district, which was held Tuesday at the Hotel Quinte. Members unanimously passed a resolution to bring the matter to the attention of the cheese producers.

In passing the resolution members voiced their approval of the new legislation calling for sediment testing of all milk and said they would rendily the necessary co-operation in putting it into effect. But they pointed out that taking two samples of milk per month meant considerable additional labor particularly at the time of receiving milk from the patron when composite samples for butter fat testing, checking for flavor and weighing is done.

Must Make Honest Attempt

They noted that unless an honest attempt is made to place a proper grade on the milk by way of the sediment test, the effort would be useless.

C. B. Lackner, director of dairying urged the cheese makers to bring the matter to the attention of the producers' association as early as possible and in the meantime talk with their patrons regarding the importance of clean milk.

Jack Bain, chief dairy instructor, for the Central and Western Ontario, agreed that sediment testing of milk would mean additional work for the cheese maker, "if this is the case then they should receive more money for their work" he said, "I feel that a satisfactory arrangement can be worked out."

Should Pay Premium

Frank Gallagher, salesman for the U.E.L. factory, said there should be a premium paid to the farmer for supplying "A" milk to the factory.

He noted that under the regulations both "A" and "B" milk would go into the same vat to make cheese, while "C" milk would be returned home to the patrons.

"Paying for milk on grade may eventually come," replied Mr. Lackner. "We are not sure that this year we have the right answer. But it is new, both to us and the industry, and possibly there will be changes next year."

Mr. Bain observed that the regulations calling for sediment testing would be of lasting benefit to the industry as it applied to all branches.

Still Other Markets

Ivan E. Lenard, export sales manager for Canadian Breweries Ltd., urged that it should be possible for Canada to sell quantities of cheese on the export trade to foreign countries. He noted that roughly 91 percent of Canadian export-cheese has been going to the United Kingdom and suggested there was a market in still other countries.

"The answer would be a sales problem," he said. "If we can sell Canadian beer abroad there is no reason why Canadian cheese cannot also be sold."

To do this the cheese industry would have to be properly organized. One of them survives and is to attend the beatification rite.

319,690 Bibles Distributed in '50

Toronto, April 4—(CP)—More Bibles was the theme today at the national executive meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Canada.

The society said that all work of the last year and all future plans are aimed at furthering its objective of making more Bibles available for all persons—written in the languages they speak and at prices they can afford to pay.

Nearly 10,500 New Testaments were given to Canadian service men, and gospel in his own language was made available for each immigrant entering Canada in the last year—continuing two services begun by the society at the beginning of this century. Total Bible circulation in Canada in 1950 was 319,690 in 55 languages. Two thousand copies of the Book of Proverbs went to the Arctic for Eskimos speaking the Baffin Land dialect.

In addition to meeting expenses in this country, the Canadian society contributed $253,832 for world-wide work.

THE HIGH COST OF AN ELECTION

The high cost of living has hit, of all things, provincial elections. On the off chance that the Ontario government will go to the people in June of this year, the election committee of the legislature has figured out the costs of such a move.

While nothing has been forthcoming from the party in power with regard to a June election, some parliamentarians of the official opposition have stated in public that there definitely will be an election soon. On that premise, the committee went ahead, and found that the cost to the taxpayers would approximate $2,000,000.

Large factors affecting the cost were increased prices quoted for printing the voters' lists, and a larger staff of enumerators. In 1948, the price of an election was reckoned at $1,360,000.

Cuts in service this year, if there should be an election, will eliminate some costs, and prevent the price going any higher than it is. Delivery of voters' lists to all homes will be stopped. This is a good move, and will not make for any inconvenience on the part of any voter. In addition, lists have been formerly posted on school doors which not be tacked up this year, because it is felt that their readership is negligible.

Cost of the home lists was estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000, a large sum for the small service provided by the rosters. It might well be used in other fashions. School door lists, along with those posted on telephone poles and posts, are the first to be target of student destruction, despite warnings of severe penalties.

One member, Mr. Aurele Chartrand, objected in committee sessions that the cost of radio time and newspaper advertising had risen, along with the rentals for halls for enumerators. Chartrand would do well to remember that radio services and newsprint have risen in price, in keeping with increased costs throughout other industries. Radio and press are affected by the high cost of operation in the same manner as other industries, and they must make up the deficit in consumer charges.

In addition to the direct cost of the election to the taxpayers, money must be available for the purchase of the necessary candidates. That money must come from the public, in the form of donations. Hence, the actual cost to taxpayers of an election in the province will go far above the $2,000,000 figure.

For the tremendous cost of a federal election can hardly be imagined, when all parties and candidates are counted. Spread over ten provinces, the amount of money involved in voters' lists and in campaign funds would be staggering.

No serious objection can be raised, however; democracy is cheap if it can be maintained at any price.

THE SCOURGE OF THE GREAT LAKES

A campaign to rid the Great Lakes of the sea lamprey scourge by electrocution has apparently failed. The Ontario government announced recently that their experiments have shown that from lampreys resisted the shock, and fish in the waters were killed by the current.

Thus, the battle to eliminate the lampreys from fresh water must take another turn. The period has been a spreading factor and time through the Great Lake chain, and as long as two years ago were regarded as a definite menace to fishing as far back as Sault Ste. Marie. Anglers there have found that the fishing population has declined both in quantity and quality due to the transferred sea-water predators.

These eels, through the years, have moved from the Atlantic coastal waters up through the St. Lawrence River, and progressively, through Lake Ontario, into the Welland canal and Lake Erie, and finally into the upper lakes of the chain.

Game fish in the lakes provide a living for many men, and their destruction by lamprey eels is a factor that both Canadian and United States governments must consider. Now it has been found that electric currents, even at high voltages, find the eels' hides a tough barrier. At the same time, the one-second shocks killed game fish which were swimming in the vicinity of the electric charge.

The conclusion reached by the Department of the Interior was that no economical method of electrocuting the lampreys seems possible. From area reports of fishermen who have come into contact with the lampreys, or with fish that have suffered from lamprey attacks, the danger is of paramount importance.

While scientists fighting the lampreys seem to have been defeated, it is to be hoped that the delay is only temporary. Too much commerce, of great value on both sides of the border, lies in the Great Lakes to give up now.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Never in your life will you eat at a really good restaurant, as far as the cuisine and cold collected. In most businesses, the customer is always right. Not a jot. If the president of a thriving concern is one of those urbane, affable persons, the chances are that a couple of his vice-presidents and the purchasing agent are tyrannous.

But of all the businesses in the world, surely running a restaurant is the most finicky. Unlike the motor car or washing machine industry, you can't work out a model, and then go into production. In the restaurant business it is not each roast that has to be right: it is each slice off that roast. It is not each big pot of grandma's special that has to be perfect: it is each personal serving of it. In no other realm of industry is the consumer so sharp, so critical and so touchy. Each slice of beef is a gift of butter, every insignificant glass of tomato juice, has to be delivered just so. Every plate, knife, fork, has to be immaculate. It is not industry but art in this sense: that the customer has to be approached in the way a singer approaches his audience. Each effort is individual. This has to be it.

If you have, behind the scenes of a restaurant, a frenzied staff with a constant attitude of urgency, who watches not merely the production of the dishes that appear on the menu, but each and every small dish of sauce, garnishing and entremets; if he is a spitting who prowls the kitchen with an eye to everything coming in the back door to every last dish going out the serving door, then you have a famous restaurant for sure. You can get cod baked with Provencal sauce or garlic and tomato that will make you wonder where you've been all your life. And if, to the astonishment of the waiter, you order tea instead of coffee, that screech you hear in the kitchen is the staff in search of some idiot pouring stale boiled water into the pot, instead of gay, new sprung water. Heaven bless good cooks; and may they have no rest.

MAYOR OBJECTS

Sarnia, Ont., April 4—(CP)—Mayor W. J. Nelson last night maintained his firm objection to expenditure of $61,000 on four new pumpers for the Sarnia fire department, mentioned at a recent report of the Ontario Fire Marshall.

Over his outspoken objection and that of Alderman Paul Blundy, a recommendation for purchase of the four pumpers was passed on to city council by the fire protection committee.

The mayor argued the city could

CARS INCREASING

Halifax — (CP) — E. S. Campbell, Nova Scotia vehicles registrar, said here there are nearly 130,000 drivers in the province "and we are well on the way to hitting the 100,000 mark in the number of vehicles." This year is expected to see a big increase over last year, when 11,000 new cars and 16,500 new drivers were registered.

DARWINEN'S LAMENT

Slyham, Suffolk, England (CP) Daily women complain housewives use empty milk bottles for shaving soap and as scatter rims and vases but dangrd it there isn't a new model car built to look like a convertible, with a top that doesn't leak? Then the ladies would be glad! . . . What did people do before there were baby sitters? . . . Betty Hall thinks it "chic" to crocus at my doorstep, the calling card of Spring." . . . Some one once told me about the fellow who rang the door-bell at a certain house which was divided into apartments and asked the man who opened the door if he could speak to Mr. Smith? Man said, "you rang the bell only once." Fellow says he did, and so what? "Well," the man replied, "Can't you see the card over the bell with three tories for Mr. Smith? Do I hats keep running back and forth every time some Tom, Dick and Harry rings the bell once?" Fellow apologized and door-bell slammed the door angrily in his face. So, similarly the caller rang again—twice this time. Same man opened the door. Fellow says, "Oh, I'm really sorry to bother you. I'm still looking for Mr. Smith." "Well, what-d'ayawant?" the man asked. "I'm Smith." Because the list is as hypocritic as a fire in a grate.

I like James Stephens' verse called "The Rivals":

I heard a bird at dawn
Singing sweetly on a tree,
That the dew was on the lawn,
And the sun was on the sea;
But I didn't listen to him,
For he didn't sing to me.

I didn't listen to him,
For he didn't sing to me
That the dew was on the lawn
And the wind was on the sea;
I was singing at the time,
Just as prettily as he!

Aimee Semple MacPherson was the most gracious woman I've ever met. . . Description: She's the kind of a guy who wears a Homburg . . . People do get angry at the remarks that come from their radios. Fellow writing to the Chicago Daily Parade of love-starved, chicken chested crooners, raving, publicly, in forceful terms, the grim procession of bobbing, stooge standing for the sentimental slop. Our feelings have been wrung and drained; they cringe from the first note of the crooning. Even the approach to the end seems to have the little thrill of elation. It has brought only a tired sense of relief. . . .

There must be real dough in psychiatry these days. People not only have their heads examined, but their eyes will think it's butter, and margarine if there isn't a new model car built to look like a convertible, with a top that doesn't leak? Then the ladies would be glad! . . . What did people do before there were baby sitters? . . . Betty Hall thinks it "chic" to crocus at my doorstep, the calling card of Spring." . . . Some one once told me about the fellow who rang the door-bell at a certain house which was divided into apartments and asked the man who opened the door if he could speak to Mr. Smith? Man said, "you rang the bell only once." Fellow says he did, and so what? "Well," the man replied, "Can't you see the card over the bell with three tories for Mr. Smith? Do I hats keep running back and forth every time some Tom, Dick and Harry rings the bell once?" Fellow apologized and door-bell slammed the door angrily in his face. So, similarly the caller rang again—twice this time. Same man opened the door. Fellow says, "Oh, I'm really sorry to bother you. I'm still looking for Mr. Smith." "Well, what-d'ayawant?" the man asked. "I'm Smith." Because the list is as hypocritic as a fire in a grate.

Robert Service wrote a little thing called "My Masterpiece" that might be dedicated to a great many writers—myself . . . Goes this way:

Psychological Moment to End Korean Conflict

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison of Britain left Washington for London the other night that "this is the psychological moment" to try to end the Korean war.

Simultaneously, Warren Austin, United States delegate to the United Nations, expressed the opinion to newspaper men that from a military point of view that is the time to end the fighting in Korea.

Now it's hardly likely that these two almost-identical expressions were pure coincidence, especially since they were made yesterday by France. Indeed they seem to be the fruit of conferences in Paris, especially since we know that the 14 allies who have troops with the U.N. army in Korea have been considering a possible policy declaration on the Korean issue. Conversations have been proceeding in Washington without fanfare.

No U.N. Move

As far as the United Nations itself is concerned, it is said there is no move under way in that organization. The impression is, however, that doesn't indicate lack of interest. It's due to the fact that the matter is being discussed in Washington.

Here it should be emphasized there is no indication the Chinese "hand was extended" in Korea that has been nothing further than that which they rejected Gen. MacArthur's negotiation offer of March 24.

Since then there has been a fresh massing of red troops in Korea. The Peiping government has declared that it will eject the U.N. forces from Korea, and the current communist gathering of troops could represent a preliminary to such an effort.

As regards this being the "psychological moment" to try to end the war, that may be true if you emphasize that little word "try". MacArthur's troops are in possession of Seoul and have pushed the line up to it; force at the hotly-disputed 38th Parallel. Hence, under present circumstances, the air lift to Tokyo gets about $350 a month. The pilots get $80 and $100 a month, a worth between $800 and $1000 a month. . . . Life is so peculiar.

Historic Paper Given to Archives

Toronto, (CP)—A copy of the Gazette Literaire published at Montreal in 1778, is an important new addition to the Ontario Archives. Dr. C. W. Jefferys, provincial archivist, received it from Dr. Sugmund Samuel of Toronto, noted collector of Canadiana.

The four-page paper, tabloid in size, was the third to be published in British North America. It was preceded by publications at Halifax and Quebec. Longterm precedessor of the Montreal Gazette, it was published by Montreal's first printer, Fluery Mesplet, and only two copies are believed to be in existence.

Mesplet was born in France and emigrated to Philadelphia in 1776 he was sent to Canada by the Continental Congress and Benjamin Franklin. Dr. Sprague said that at that time the American Revolutionaries hoped to persuade Quebec would join the revolting American colonies.

Mesplet did not continue long. Dr. Sprague explains, but Mesplet was thrown in Montreal His editor, Jautard, was hostile to the government and the newspaper was closed by suspicion. The issue of May 26, 1779, contained four articles condemned as seditious by the judges. Mesplet and Jautard were both arrested.

"The newspaper had lasted less than a year," Dr. Sprague said, "but printing during a civil war there was no news from the battlefronts. Its interest is in fact elsewhere. It appears to be, as the title suggests, purely a literary journal. But doubtless in what was printed there were allusions to political matters which it is difficult for the student of today to recognize but which would be understood by contemporary readers."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON TAKING A WALK

We can always walk when it is impossible for us to ride. We were created to walk, to go places, to find out things, and to carry on business. Carlyle would tell us that walking is one of the higher arts. The late Dr. John H. Finley was a walker. He has written about it with zest and enthusiasm, as many other famous ones have done. Thoreau and almost every great naturalist, for it has been by natural history that so many took to walking.

There is this about taking a walk—the moment you get beyond your own abode or estate, you become conscious of your relationship to the public conveyance. You see many a neglected bush or tree which you have in your camera with you, it can be snapped, and preserved.

No telephone calls follow you when upon a walk. You select your own companions, or else go alone. It becomes the supreme privacy for thinking things over, and stimulating ideas. And there is a freedom about taking a walk that rests the nerves and takes one out of oneself. Everything then takes on an importance far greater than the walker.

I recall so vividly the solitary walks I used to take when a boy in the small Michigan towns were I once lived. I would go out after supper when all the chores were over, and would almost feel the spirit and character of each house I passed. I knew what people were doing and thinking behind the lighted blinds. I would take a walk to the edge of town, where the mill race ran, and listen to its musical waters.

Thoreau tells in his "Walden" how he left Concord and went to the farms about him "without any damage to my poverty." Said he, "I found myself rich in proportion as I have since annually carried off and set my whole house on a wheelbarrow." What a rich world 'we can live in! Possessions can't help but be a burden to the multi-possessor. Without appreciation there can be no ownership.

Without any preconceived purpose I walk about my small island of Nantucket, and find among the summer months and gain beauty and peace and a sense of harmony with me throughout the rest of the year. Take a walk. You meet God intimately that way!

DESERT FULL OF TREASURE

The Republic of Chile is about 100 miles wide and 2600 miles long. The northern part is the most desolate desert waste on earth. It never rains in that desert. There is not a blade of grass, a single cactus plant—not even a scrawny weed to be found in the whole barren waste.

Until recent years it was believed that this was waste land in one of the richest areas on earth. For it is here that there is found a layer of nitrate, which is eagerly sought by the nations of the world. Also in the largest single deposit of copper on the earth is in this Chilean desert. What men regarded as a worthless expanse of land twenty years ago is now known to be of more worth than the richest gold mine ever discovered.

God loves to hide secrets carefully. Today you may meet someone of whom you think you know ordinarily you would not give a second look. Or perhaps you would find him a bore. But, a divine kinship many things of priceless value are hidden beneath unattractive exteriors.

Remember the desert of Chile.

Woman's Missionary Society Opens 10th Biennial Session at Bridge St. Church

By M. AUSTIN

The 10th biennial meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada began Wednesday on Tuesday afternoon and will continue through until Thursday afternoon. The theme for the fellowship is "Stewardship Through Service". The motto of the meetings — "Not by Might, nor by Power, but by My Spirit", saith the Lord of Hosts, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." More than 80 delegates from the seven Presbyterials had gathered when the sessions began, and many interested W. M. S. workers were also in attendance.

Mrs. F. W. K. Harris of Peterborough is the president of the Conference Branch, and presided at the executive meeting, also at the roll call constituting the Conference Branch. A very happy feature of the executive meeting was the announcement that Miss Dessie Wagar of Peterborough has resigned her position there and is going to Trinidad to teach in the Mission Schools.

Two Questions to be Decided

Two of the changes in the constitution which were to be decided upon by the branch are as follows: (a) plan — at first each Presbyterial, e. g. president, a vice president, secretary of Christian Stewardship and treasurer (alternating) and three secretaries be delegated to conference branch meetings — or Plan 2 — the six chairmen, as above, and three to ten Presbyterial officers elected by the Presbyterial. The Dominion Board would have the right to ask certain secretaries to come to the annual meetings.

Certain by-laws were to be rearranged by the nominations committee; delegates to Dominion Board may be changed to allow only the president and four others — two may be officers and two may be Presbyterial presidents or their alternates. The reason for this contemplated change so that the work of the Dominion Board will become more familiar to the Presbyterial leaders and these to the local Auxiliaries. It was felt that there was important work to do which did not need to be handed down to the local auxiliary workers. A letter was read from the home organization of Dominion Board relating to Schools for Leaders.

Set Up Steang Committee

It was suggested that each conference branch set up a strong committee for study of the problems within their branch. All conference branch secretaries were a suggestion for that committee. Some of the thoughts for discussion were as follows:

1. Who should be encouraged to attend.

2. Should there be a minimum age limit.

3. Should new members be encouraged to attend.

4. Should a special class be arranged for the women of conference with the president of the conference branch, or a vice president as chairman.

5. Should a conference branch secretary be appointed for young-er groups. It was the feeling of the executive meeting that youth should be encouraged to attend the schools for leaders and no age limit be set.

Mrs. Harris brought forward a few recommendations from the school for leaders committee which met recently. All attendants for any session and meals must register and pay the registration fee; dietitian to know at least two hours in advance of how many for meals; recommendations regarding board for workers, etc.

Special Service

At four o'clock, a very impressive Communion Service was conducted by the Rev. D. MacTavish, minister of Bridge Street Church, the sermon preached by Rev. E. A. Kent, M.A., B.D., LL.D., principal of Queens University Theological College and president of the Bay of Quinte Conference. For his text he chose the words "I Will Lift up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills" and remarked that these words were written by and for a people who lived in a barren rocky country, and had on many occasions been saved by the hills. Scotland was a small country of mountains and rocks, and at one time the English kings led armies over the border to defeat the Scots. People, however, who live in the highland have weaknesses—they hold together very well—one clan against another. The Jews too quarrelled among themselves, and that put an end to their estate rather than the assault of the enemies.

The Two Mounts

The first of the two hills to which the Jews raised their eyes was Mount Sinai—to Moses, and the Law. When Jesus came His worst troubles were not with the poor of the streets but upon the scribes and pharisees who lifted up their eyes to Mount Sinai and the Law. Law always fails. It contains nothing to make people good, it only stops them from being bad. The second hill to which they [illegible] Mount Zion, Jerusalem, the centre of the nation, their religion and patriotism, the home of their fathers. They wanted a king who would put all other down and raise them up, and when He came they would not have Him, the terrible tragedy of Mount Zion. Another hill we must think of, not a large hill—Calvary — Unto Golgotha will I lift Mine Eyes—here the three crosses. Mount Sinai said, "Thou shalt not steal"—Mount Zion said, "Our King above all Kings of the earth"; and the third hill of Calvary, a place of cruelty, but there was and still is in the unknown hill the power to make people good, which the others didn't possess. He died that we might be forgiven. He died to make us good."

At roll call the following were constituted as the conference branch for the transaction of business. Past president, Mrs. C. C. Langley; president, Mrs. F. W. K. Harris; vice presidents, Mrs. C. W. Spafford, Mrs. H. E. McGinnis; recording secretary, Mrs. H. Langley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. G. Macfarlane, Miss-sr, Mrs. E. L. Fraser, and the following secretaries, Mrs. E. G. Bailey, Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson, Mrs. A. R. Blair, Mrs. George Haywood, Mrs. J. A. Hawkin, Mrs. R. M. McMullen, Mrs. A. A. Munro, Mrs. A. D. Corner, Mrs. R. J. Deacon, Mrs. L. E. Metcalf, Mrs. P. H. Naylor, Mrs. M. P. Austin, Mrs. A. G. Macfarlane. Mrs. Harris urged her audience to remember that missions is the church's greatest work for church throughout the world. We are engaged in a world-wide fellowship and we must not be half-hearted in our endeavors.

At the supper hour greetings were brought by the ministers present on behalf of the Ministerial Association of Belleville, the Bridge Street United Church and Bay of Quinte Conference.

Evening Service

The evening services were begun by a worship service under the direction of Mrs. W. J. MacPherson, president of the Lindsay Presbyterial, and the theme was "Stewardship of Personality, the Duty of Self Development." The paper was taketh by Mrs. F. Austin, who stressed the duty of Stewardship of body, mind and soul for service in the Kingdom of God. The Bible verse on which this was based "I beseech you therefore by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, wholly, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." At this service a beautiful solo was rendered by Miss McDougall "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked," and the dedication of the CGIT group of girls was welcomed.

The welcome to Bridge Street Church was then given by Mrs. B. Houston, president of Bridge Street Auxiliary, and by Mrs. C. D. McCallum, president of Belleville Presbyterial, and replied to by Mrs. Sourneti of Oshawa Presbyterial. Mrs. C. D. McCallum challenged the members of this conference branch to take more seriously the candidate work for life time service in the missionary field. In order to get more candidates we must first have our convictions sharpened that peace will alone come to the world this way. Second, we must realize more fully that it is our responsibility to help bring this about, and third we must go back home and do something about it. Only six missionaries have been dedicated to full time work in this branch since Church Union and we must do something more about it.

Tells of Missionary Work

The speaker of the evening was Miss Louise Scott, a missionary on furlough from Central India. She graduated as a nurse from the Western Hospital, Toronto, and in 1931 went to our Central India Mission, and was for some time on the staff of the Mission Hospital in Indore—the first hospital to do medical work among the women and girls. On her last furlough she took special work in public health nursing that she might establish a post graduate course for the native nurses in this field of work, and that they might establish rural health centres.

Miss Scott brought a vivid picture of her surroundings and work in this land of India, of the encouragement she receives from such groups of Missionary women as this group gathered here, and stated "we are ambassadors of our Master, we have a mandate to proclaim.

She said she brought to us the message of India as a commendation of what we together are doing—we work not for Christ with our Lord and Saviour. We are doing Christ's ministry, of healing in their hospitals, in their feeding their wounds, restoring to health and strength, we would not stop there but bring to them the consciousness of who is healing them. She spoke of the Indian gentleman who went to India last September from our W.M.S. of where they would be and what they would be doing.

The New India

She spoke of the new India, perhaps we would like to know what difference it has made. The natives thought the missionaries might be returning now to their own land, "now the government has gone", but Miss Scott explained to them that the missionaries work for a higher kingdom, one not made with hands, but one eternal in the heavens. Hindu people in high places are trying to cut out what they can do for their people. One asked her to send him some literature when she returned to Canada of why our people give to them, why we send out missionaries and why build hospitals for them.

Miss Scott said she could only show him our Bible and tell him whose we are and whom we serve. There is a greater challenge to you and me today than ever before. It is Miss Scott's hope to return to India to supervise the great rural public health work being done in small Christian villages throughout the land where the need for medical services is tremendous. It is quite a challenge, the task without faith would be impossible.

Mexican Main Dish Shrinking in Size

Mexico City, (AP)—The Mexican's menu rests on a mass of cornmeal dough, a mass that has shrunken lately.

Women daily line up at small shops where "masa" the cornmeal dough, is sold. Sometimes poorer customers line up before dawn to make sure of their day's supply.

Out of this dough come the thin toasted pancakes known as tortilla, the Mexican bread. It has many uses and it's the Mexican staff of life because it's cheap selling at just under three cents a pound.

But this year the corn supply is rather short so that mass has been a matter of public concern. The government estimates that three-quarters of Mexico's 25,000,000 people eat an average of 1 1-3 tortillas a day.

Women's Guild Meets on 20th Anniversary

At the twentieth anniversary meeting of the Young Women's Guild of the former John Street Church, held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. George Wishart, Dufferin Avenue, the president, vice president, secretary and treasurer of the first organization, were all present and it so happened that the worship service and program were in charge of charter members with other charter members also present.

After the John Street Church fire this group continued as a unit, making Tabernacle United Church its church affiliation, but its membership has expanded non-denominationally.

As a result of the years "young" has been dropped from the group name.

A worship service led by Mrs. W. Hunter, was based on "Christian in Spite of Everything", a chapter in "The Power to See It Through", by Fosdick, and stressed the point that inward failure is not due to outward circumstances. Like Paul each can be "a fellow-worker with God".

Shall Germany Re-arm?

The program topic of study, led by Mrs. A. D. Archibald, assisted by Mrs. M. P. Buck, was "Germany, a menace or a promise?" The history of Germany since the Potsdam Agreement of 1945, shows the rift between East and West Germany with Berlin the dividing line and the only means of communication with the Soviet realm.

Economic recovery in West Germany has been wonderful but imports are still greater than exports, indicating that it is a serious problem, the economy is out of balance, and by no means least important is the great refugee problem.

Since Sept. 1949, West Germany has been a democracy, but what hope is there when the average German has no interest in politics, the strong nationalistic force and the leader cult still exist and there is a great gulf between the masses and the more fortunate?

To the big question "Should we allow Germany to re-arm?" or "Should Germany be re-armed with the help of Western Powers?", many contradictory arguments were advanced.

Only a democratic Germany can be an ally.

At the close of a lively discussion, refreshments were served, featuring a twenty-year birthday cake. A pleasant social time was spent reminiscing.

Show Big Advance in Canadian Furs' Style and Output

Toronto — (CP) — The emancipation of the fur coat into a big industry for women buyers is one of the chief Canadian fashion developments of the last century.

Tremendous advances in the art of breeding, processing and styling are responsible, says Louis Bender, who has been in the fur business for nearly 50 years, more than 30 as a manufacturer.

Canada has become one of the leaders in the fur manufacturing business although the value of dressed and manufactured furs now is only a portion of the total fur industry's value.

While the price of finished fur garments now is at a peak level it's hard to say whether the trend will continue. The fur manufacturing industry is subject to the whims of the fashion world, cycles of animal productivity and of course the willingness of the customer to pay the prices asked.

Bender says that a half century ago the fur coat was made mainly for men. "About 50 years ago men's fur-lined coats, fur coats, hats and gloves, as well as women's fur stoles or shoulder pieces, muffs and collars were manufactured in Canada on a small scale. Women didn't care for the bulky, unglamorous fur coats men wore, and they favored mostly cloth coats trimmed with fur.

Skilled Newcomers

"Very few people in Canada then knew the art of fur manufacturing. Most men's and women's fur garments were imported from Europe. It dominated the dressed fur market at that time because the Hudson's Bay Company had the right to take raw furs out of Canada for auctioning in England to buyers from all over the world.

At the turn of the century a few Canadian women wore fur coats, some made in Canada but mostly imported from Europe.

Between 1900 and 1910, however, many skilled European furriers arrived in Canada. With the aid of important scientific and mechanical improvements they were able to manufacture fur coats stylish enough to attract the fashionable woman. As a result in the early 20s the first Canadian raw fur auction sales were held and women's fur coats were made on a comparatively large scale for the first time in Canada.

The fur industry now produces solely for women, says Bender, and it's unlikely that men's fur coats will ever again be fashionable. It is the ambition of most women however to own a fur coat, with muskrat, Persian lamb and Hudson seal the most popular, but fine coats of wild mink for instance may range from $3,000 to $60,000.

Through scientific cross-breeding and fancy dyes the fur industry has been able to keep pace with the demand for more and more stylish fashions. There are so many types of furs available now — each with different grades of quality — that no furrier knows them all.

Mr. Mrs. W. Gee Celebrate 25th Anniversary

On Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. William Gee, 14 Bettes Street, celebrated their Silver Wedding in the form of an anniversary supper with the immediate family and friends present.

The tea table was pretty appointed with daffodils and carnations, upon a white damask cloth, and graced with a very lovely cake commemorating the event.

Following the supper, the evening was spent talking over old times, reliving the years since April 2nd, 1926, when Mr. and Mrs. Gee took their vows before the Reverend Mr. Fallis, at the parsonage in Toronto.

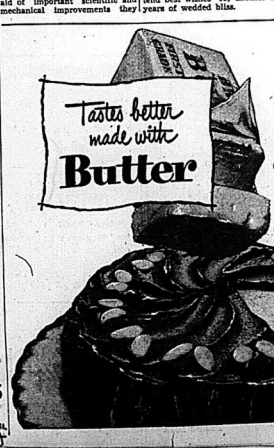
The citizens of the city join in hearty congratulations, and extend best wishes for another 25 years of wedded bliss.

Recent Easter Bride Showered With Gifts

Last evening, a delightful miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Foxon, Grier Street, to honor a recent Easter bride, Mrs. Leslie Bridger, (nee Jean Short).

Games and a social get-together were enjoyed during the evening.

The tea table was daintily adorned with a Scotch lace cloth covered by a two-tiered pink and white shower cake topped by a bride's basket filled with pink and white sweetpeas and white carnations. Crystal vases of pink and white sweetpeas flanked the cake, while streamers of pink and white fell from the chandelier above to the four corners of the table.



Master Michael Foxon, small son of the hostess presented to the new bride, a gaily decorated wagon filled to overflowing with many gifts for which Joan most graciously thanked the givers, as well as for their good wishes.

After the gifts had been duly admired, refreshments were served by Mrs. Alma Short, mother of the bride, Mrs. A. Wannamaker and Mrs. Morley Cragg.

Fashion Flashes

NOT PRACTICAL, as is the tailored gray or navy flannel or worsted suit, but much more colorful and charming is the softly tailored suit of gabardine in such shades as shrimp or salmon pink, Normandy blue, sand gold, or Nile green.

GOOD ON THEIR OWN and better when combined is a two-some of boxy, full-length coat of black woollen, with collar and cuff inlay and lining of tiny black and white checked silk surah that matches the simple shirtwaist frock made with a jet-buttoned closing to below the waist.

What a scrumptious cake . . . sugar, moist and delicious. You can tell it's made with butter, for only butter has that creamery-fresh flavour. It's rich in natural vitamins, high in food energy. So if you would be famous for fluffy cakes and feathery pastry, use golden butter in all your baking.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

Isaac Newton was lucky he sat under an apple tree.

In India scientists and philosophers used to sit under banana trees, with huge bunches of bananas dangling overhead. Bananas became known as the "fruit of the wise men". Fortunately the thick tough banana stalks usually kept the heavy bunches of fruit from falling on the sages' heads.

In many cake and muffin recipes, mashed bananas are used in place of milk. The soft fruit keeps the cake moist and rich.

Use mashed ripe bananas to make a bran loaf bread. Like all quickbreads, this loaf should not be cut when it is still warm or it will crumble. Let it stand at least two hours after removal from the oven.

The all-bran should be mixed with the banana pulp so that the all-bran can absorb before it is added to the batter. Be sure the pan is well greased with butter or the loaf may stick to the pan.

Banana Bran Bread

1-4 cup shortening at room temperature
1-2 cup granulated sugar
1 egg
1 cup all-bran
1 1-2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon baking soda
1 1-2 cups mashed bananas

Preheat oven at 350 degrees. Grease and flour a loaf pan about 8 inches by 4 1-2 inches. Force bananas through a colander or strainer to make 1 1-2 cups pulp.

Stir shortening to soften. Gradually stir in sugar, beating until light and fluffy. Add unbeaten egg. Beat well.

Measure sifted flour. Sift again with baking powder, salt and baking soda.

Add bran to bananas. Let stand 3 minutes.

Add dry ingredients and banana mixture alternately to shortening mixture. Stir only until blended.

Turn mixture into prepared pan. Bake about 40 to 50 minutes; or until top of loaf is firm when lightly touched, or loaf shrinks slightly from sides of pan.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET W. M. S. AND W. A.

A joint meeting of the Women's Association and the Woman's Missionary Society, of Bridge St. Church, was held in the Sunday School room on Friday afternoon last.

Mrs. J. Marsh, president of the W. A. presided. Following the business portion, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Harron and Mrs. Countryman's group. The worship service, entitled, "Christ's Legacy of Peace," was taken by Mrs. Lee and Mrs. McTavish.

Miss Loretta Lee, entitled, "Christ Is Risen", was accompanied by Mrs. Gulbridge at the piano, sang beautifully a solo entitled, "He Smiled on Me". A reading "Consider the Lilies", given by Mrs. Reid was much enjoyed.

A pageant 'At the Feet of Jesus' directed by Miss Helen Sulman was most appropriate at this season. Those taking part were: — Mrs. Ralph Morden, as Mary, Mother of Jesus; Mrs. Taylor Franklin, as Mary Magdalene; Mrs. Bert Howard as Salome; Mrs. T. Colden as Peter; Mrs. Neil O'Neil as James; Miss Loretta McDougall as John, and Miss Helen Sulman as the centurion; the soloists were Mrs. William Bourgoyne and Mrs. Fred Houston.

A social half - hour brought to a close an interesting and inspiring meeting.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Sister, Hussah!" sniffs reader. "More likely his wife!"

A week or so ago there was printed in my column a letter from a woman who complained that the sister of the man with whom she was in love was trying to stir up trouble between them because she didn't want her brother to marry.

From one of my readers— a wife who has good reason for her reaction—comes the comment that amounts to a loud sniff of disbelief in the sister angle.

Says she:

"After reading Mrs. L. M.'s case in your column today, I felt I had to write you a note and say that maybe you still have too much faith in men. You told Mrs. L. M. not to contact the 'sister,' I say Mrs. L.M. should at least get to see this person to make sure she's really a sister and not a wife.

"Unfortunately, I know of two husbands who use this sister routine. It helps to explain to the fluent lady-love why they can't get out weekends or stay out late nights. She is the examined sister at home. My own husband happens to be one of these philanderers. I found out because one of his girls took it upon herself to tell me that she had told her about and I had to prove I was his wife and the mother of his children. He is a charming and convincing liar.

Warns of 'Sister' Line

"Why do I go on with him? I guess because I love him and because of the children. He is kindly, sweet and generous with us. Moreover, he isn't aware of the fact that I know what he is doing again, and I keep hoping he'll see the error of his ways. Please warn your readers of the 'sister' line given out by those Don Juans."

While I am glad to transmit this warning to any woman who may be sending a willing ear to what this wife calls the "sister routine", it does seem to me, somehow, that women should be able to tell whether or not a man is telling the truth when he claims that he has a difficult sister. Of course, if I were one of these women, I think I would not have much use for a man who frankly confessed he was under his sister's thumb so much that he had no independence. But if a woman wants such a man, and believes his story, then she'd better put a little stumpion into him so that he'll assert himself, or else if he does get him in the end, the sister will certainly do all she can later to sour the marriage and may very well succeed.

No Faith—No Happiness

I think it might be a little unwise to suggest that every woman who is given the sister story denied that the sister be produced so that she can be sure it's all on the level. If a woman can't believe the man she professes to love without asking proof of everything he tells her, they're not going to be very happy together anyhow.

I would like to add that I think the husband of the woman who wrote me the letter must be pretty stupid not to appreciate the intelligent and spunky wife he has. She sees his good points, tolerates his bad ones, and is willing to wait in the hope that the good will finally outwit the bad. What more, for heaven's sake, does a man want that he should neglect such a wife for a light-of-love?

I hope that this wife's tolerance, understanding and patience will eventually receive their reward. But I also think that if her husband does finally "see the error of his ways" and come home to stay, he will be getting far more than she will, and far more, also, than he deserves.

Stole Suit

Stylish new details

By VERA WINSTON

THE big fashion for spring this year is the stole suit, and it appears in every type and at every price level. This one, fashioned of yarn dyed grey woollen, sports all the new notions. The hips are padded to minimize the waist and there are appliqued tabs of the fabric above the bow-button closing. The tabs are held by a rhinestone pin that matches the one at the small collared neckline. The skirt is pencil slim, and of course there is the ubiquitous stole.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Form at mother's note to teacher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending a written excuse to a teacher, is it proper to use a salutation and end with "Yours truly", or just word the excuse with no salutation and sign the name?

M. C.

As when writing any other kind of note, you should courteously begin with a salutation and end with an appropriate complimentary close. Like this, for example:

Dear Miss Marsh,

Will you please excuse Cynthia's absence from school last Friday, April——? It was such a stormy day, she had the beginings of a cold, and I thought it unwise for her to go out.

Sincerely yours,
Mary Smith Clark
(Mrs. Henry Clark)

(If it is a small, intimate school, where parents and teachers know one another well, you need not add the formal name under the signature.)

How best to spend, their savings to celebrate their engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are going to announce our engagement soon. My fiance and I have saved money for some kind of celebration of our engagement, but, we would like your advice as to what to do. Both his family and my family are living in small communities so small for an engagement-announcement dinner. So we thought we'd give a dinner for both families at a restaurant or nightclub. With our savings we could do this and have, too, not a large engagement party. Am I correct in assuming that it is the engaged girl's family who are supposed to give this dinner?

N. M.

Since you, it is supposed to be your parents who give any occasion at which your engagement is announced, would the following be a possible "allocation" of the budget? If your parents aren't able to pay for the dinner, could you not apply some portion of your savings to give a simple little dinner in your home, inviting only your fiance and his parents and perhaps some other members of his immediate family? (Or invite them to lunch on Sunday, or tea or other refreshments late Sunday afternoon.) This would announce the engagement and get started the close relationship between your parents and his. Then, as soon after this as you wish, give a party to celebrate the engagement, a simple, late-afternoon party on Saturday or Sunday, perhaps in the home of your fiance's family (many guests can be accommodated in even a very small apartment, if they love it); invite all the relatives and friends with whom you wish to share the happy news, and serve the simplest of refreshments. And . . . are you listening? . . . these two parties needn't cost as much as the restaurant or night club dinner for the whole. (So you will have some funds left over for whatever you wish!)

Cards for wedding congratulations addressed to "Mr. and Mrs."

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending a wedding congratulations card to a bride and groom, to whom should one address it? So often the card will arrive before the marriage, or there are many reasons why addressing it to "Mr. and Mrs." doesn't seem correct.

P. M. P.

The card should be addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." and timed to arrive as near as possible after the ceremony has been performed. Or, if there is too much uncertainty about the timing, plan to send a telegram of congratulations to "Mr. and Mrs." at the place of the reception . . . this to be read with the other festive telegrams at the reception.

BEAUTY

Excessive perspiration

The bathtub is supposed to be an institution, the daily bath a ritual. There are those among us, especially corsetieres and dress fitters, who doubt it. Offensive perspiration odor is still causing discomfort to the public nose. We run into it in elevators, public conveyances, in the movies. Considering the campaign for health and good grooming that is going on, one would think that this annoyance would disappear.

A girl may be ever so lovely and charming, sport the chic hairdo, wear grand dry goods, have the figure of a Diana, but if she carries the slightest suggestion of body odor nobody wants to get within a mile of her. She is disqualified for the society of her fellow creatures. She is handicapped if she has a job; many girls have lost good jobs for that reason. The number of suitors who have made a get-away, nobody can guess. Surely some member of her family should suggest to the victim of this trouble that she make an effort to overcome it.

It's easy and simple.' A daily bath with plenty of warm soap suds and a heavy brush, the use of a deterrent in the armpits, and a frequent change of undies will do the trick. Deterrents and deodorants come in different forms—liquids, creams, powders. If one doesn't prove efficient and satisfactory, another one will.

Whatever agent the girl uses, she should read the directions carefully. Some of the liquids must be used cautiously; they are powerful astringents and close the pores so the sweat glands have no outlet. No harm is done. The fluids seek other channels.

Hot baths, with a ten-minute soaking to loosen the dead skin scales to which sweat clings, are necessary. The shower should be followed by a quick, cold shower and a brisk rubdown with a coarse towel. There are body powders that are not only effective in overcoming the trouble, but which keep the skin smooth, free of the red speckles known as goose flesh; also, they impart a pleasing fragrance.

Rapid tissue waste, which takes place during a reducing campaign, may be responsible for hyperidrosis, or excess sweating is properly called. So the calorie-counter must be on her guard. An indigestion to nervousness or hysteria is a frequent cause, in which event one must practice emotional control, a good idea for the majority of the sisters.

Garlic and onions should be deleted from the diet; they stimulate the sweat glands.

Some member of her family should give her a hint.

Lions Club Stages Minstrel Show

Bancroft.—The Spirit of the Old South was realistically recaptured when Bancroft Lions Club staged their annual minstrel show in the auditorium of North Hastings High School on Thursday and Friday nights.

Outside, it was not the type of weather that was fit for man nor beast and the combined rain and fog prevented scores from attending. Those who did brave the elements saw and heard a smoothflowing, above average, performance. Amidst colorful parade of an ancient Mississippi river show-boat and southern pickaninnies, and to the strains of the nostalgic airs of Stephen Foster, the black-faced actors blended a medley of items into a continuous show.

The traditional minstrel act with singers, end-men, interlocutor and specialties occupied the first hour. With considerable ad-libbing and innumerable wise-cracks the comedians kept the gathering in a continuous round of laughter. Rounds of applause greeted the artists, Angus McTavish (Duncan Grant), the Sears Dancers, George Washington Jones (Bill Bateman), The Four Black Spots (Jim Brown, Bert Ellerbeck, Bill Bateman and Art Hewitt), and Mississippi Joe (Bert Ellerbeck), as they took the stage when there were lulls in the dialogue between the interlocutor and the end-men.

Jack Follis, Mike Burns, Dan Tanner, Cecil Wiggins, Bruce Turner, Cecil McAlpine, Art Tompsett and Everett Schram were a colorful group of end-men who did not have any serious moments from the opening chorus till the final curtain. Bill Hutton, one of the two white men in the cast, was the interlocutor.

Comic—Popular Numbers

Major Blowzes' Amateur Hour, with Jim Schram, as master of ceremonies, was a combination of comic and popular numbers. The various contestants were Hiram Bellbottom (Keith Killeen), The Four Maynooth Cowboys (Jim Brown, Bert Ellerbeck, Bill Bateman and Art Hewitt), Joe Glup (Art Tompsett), Patrick O'Malley, the darkened Irishman (Bill Bateman), Annabelle and Sammy (Mrs. James Gaffney and Lee Freiburger).

One of the hits of the show was, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew", with the Malamute Saloon filled with the pantomime cast as Negroes, while the narrator, Everett Schram, told the story of the Yukon to his grandson, Bruce Turner. Behind a realistic bar, the host (Mike Burns), dispensed for Dan McGrew (Don Tanner), the lady that was known as Lou (Art Hewitt), the ragtime kid (Jack Hutton) and an assorted company of sourdoughs and checkakos while the man from Thercreek (Jim Schram) and Dan McGrew once more fought their duel.

Completing the program, were Reg Wallace, who gave a three-part monologue, where he joined ably the parts of the playwright, the farmer and the farmer's daughter, and Mike and Ike (Jack Follis and Bruce Turner), who showed what could happen when the wrong people meet on a street corner.

Accompanist for the show was Jack Hutton. The director and producer was Ernie Thomas.

After the final chorus, the entire company was introduced to the audience by Jack Brown, president of Bancroft Lions Club.

Warning Causes Consternation In Village

Bancroft—Did the mysterious voice that warned the switchboard operator at Bancroft's telephone that a bomb would blow up North Hastings High School on Saturday night belong to a foreign saboteur or a mentally deranged person or an April Fool's Day prankster?

The question is still unanswered but it caused plenty of excitement and started many scare rumors in the village on Saturday. Efforts to trace the origin of the call were not successful and local authorities decided not to take any chances as the high school cost approximately $425,000 in 1947-48.

Special guards were posted during the night, while police patrol cars cruised around the vicinity, looking for suspicious characters, as it was thought that the warning might have come from a tapped wire. But nothing like a Sam Spade or Mr. X story happened, and school started as usual on Monday morning.

COMMONS SEEKS

George McIlraith, parliamentary assistant to Trade Minister Howe, tabled a white paper on Canadian investment outlook for 1951. It showed that Canada's business men, governments and institutions are planning to swell the country's investment boom to the highest figure in history—$4,300,000,000. In 1950, the investment was estimated at $3,791,000,000.

Mr. McIlraith also tabled a report outlining prospects for building materials for 1951. It said that the prospective Canadian home owner will have trouble building a new house this year. Copper tubing, steel pipe and fittings, hot-water storage tanks and wire nails and spikes.

Debate Amendments

In debate on amendments to the Citizenship Act, Mr. Harris said this will be the effect of the legislation:

1. Citizenship of naturalized citizens who return to their country of origin or former nationality without retaining substantial connection with Canada could be revoked after two years at present, a six-year period must elapse.

2. Citizenship could be revoked for persons convicted under the Official Secrets Act, as in the case of those found guilty in the 1946 Soviet spy inquiry. At present, this can be done only on conviction of treason or sedition.

3. Citizenship also could be revoked in the case of Canadian citizens by birth or naturalization who formerly declare their allegiance to another state without technically acquiring the nationality or citizenship of that state.

Opposition Leader Drew said the legislation would not make it possible to deal with actions by people who had come to Canada and were "abusing" the rights of Canadian citizenship and seeking to "destroy" Canadian institutions.

The government should still further widen the basis upon which citizenship could be withdrawn. It should have an amendment to the criminal code to deal effectively with communists.

Justice Minister Garson said his department is working on a draft amendment to the criminal code to deal with communist activities. However, that did not mean the draft would emerge as legislation. The policy would have to be decided by the cabinet.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1951

Power Capacity Next Year Will be 80 P.C. Greater Than In 1945 Says Vice Chairman

Toronto, April 4—(CP)—Expansion plans of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission will provide the province by 1953 with a power capability 80 per cent higher than in 1945, G. E. Challies, vice-chairman of the commission, told the legislature last night.

Reporting on progress of the commission, Mr. Challies said the $816,000,000 program had increased the hydro system's capacity from 2,300,000 horse power after the Second World War to 3,700,000 horse power at the end of 1952.

Total assets of the provincial and municipal power commissions total $1,543,000,000. The Ontario commission employs 20,024 persons, the minister said in his report to the legislature during its budget debate.

Additions of new generating sources, however, had not allowed the commission to build up a "reserve beyond even of an 'unprecedented' demand.

Reporting on the new advisory committee to the hydro commission, approved by legislature in 1946, will be formed, Mr. Challies said.

Name Nine Members

A maximum of nine members will be named, Mr. Frost said. It will meet to advise the hydro commission on matters of policy. He had not yet chosen the committee personnel.

Mr. Challies spoke of opposition in the United States senate to hydro development in the St. Lawrence River's potential 2,200,000 horsepower. Governments of Ontario, Canada and New York State were solidly behind the effort to harness the river.

Whether opposition could be overcome or not, he said, "common sense and justice alike dictate that Ontario and New York should no longer be denied access to the power they both need so urgently and which is theirs by right."

He denied a statement by Harry Nixon (L—Brant), that Jacobs Falls farm's hydro rates had risen 50 per cent since 1944. The increase had been only half, the minister said. The actual cost of power supplied to the farm of Farquhar Oliver, liberal house leader had been reduced 63 per cent between 1944 and 1950.

Mr. Challies also attacked statements by Walter Thompson, provincial liberal leader. Mr. Thompson's statement about the use of power by pulp and paper companies, he said, was 600 per cent wrong.

U.S. Will Not Prosecute Former S.S. General

Ansbach, Germany, April 4 — (AP) —American authorities today said they will not prosecute former S.S. General Otto Ernst Von Dem Bachzuselewski, who admitted he gave Hermann Goering his suicide poison in Nuremberg jail in 1946.

"We have been unable to corroborate his story," said William D. Canfield, U.S. district attorney here. "He admitted that he supplied the poison with which Goering committed suicide. The crime seems credible but he himself is the only witness we have. If he should withdraw his confession the charge would collapse."

Canadian Nuns Said to Cause Cholera Epidemic

Hong Kong, April 4—(Reuters) —Five Canadian Roman Catholic nuns arrested in Canton now have been accused of starting a cholera epidemic in the city in 1938, according to press reports from the south China city of Canton.

The reports said this charge had been made by 180 members of a peasants association in Shaho, a suburb of Canton who attended a "public accusation meeting."

The peasants, who also accused the nuns of "murdering" orphans said the infection had spread from the bodies of "baby victims" which the nuns left for dogs to eat.

A considerable number of persons in Shaho later died of cholera, the peasants said.

The convent of the Immaculate Conception, to which the nuns belong is in Shaho.

Though accusations made at public accusation meetings do not amount to formal charges they often form the basis for prosecution later in a 'people's court.'

The nuns were arrested about two months ago on charges of neglecting children at the convent orphanage. Chinese authorities who later took over the convent alleged that more than 2,000 Chinese children had died there.

(Canada's External Affairs Minister, L. B. Pearson, described the charges as "grotesque and unfounded." The British diplomatic service has been asked to do everything possible to help the nuns.)

The names of the Canadian sisters are: Antoinette Couvrette, of Ottawa; Jeanne Marguerite Gravel, assistant head; Elisabeth Lemire, Germaine Tanguay and Hilda Laperriere.

Ex-Convict Admits Abducting Girl And Boy Friend

McAlester, Okla., April 4—(AP) —Confessed murderer Claude Neal was freed today by a 23-year-old ex-convict who admitted he was the one who abducted the girl and her high school skating date Sunday night.

The girl was found about 1 a. m. huddled beside a tree under a bridge on a mountain road here. On the other side of the road, the body of her skating date, the ex-convict, Robert M. Phillips. He made no attempt to escape and surrendered his suspicion of kidnapping.

Chester Finley, leader of a posse, said the girl told him Phillips "raped her about two hours before he got there."

Bill Coghill, 17, was parked with the girl when the car in which Rink Sunday night when a man forced himself into their car and made them drive to Wilburton.

The car became stuck in a creek several hours later and the abductor walked away with the girl, threatening Coghill who did not follow.

Windsor Council Turns Down Pension Plan

Windsor, Ont., April 4—(CP)—By a vote of seven to six, Windsor city council last night turned down special scaled-down pensions for Police Chief Claude Renaud and former deputy chief W. H. Nesle.

The pensions, passed by Board of Control March 21, would have provided Renaud with $1,800 a year and Neale with $1,356.

Previously the Board of Control had voted to pay Renaud $2,160 and Neale $1,792 but council cut the figures to what turned that recommendation down.

After the vote was taken last night, council decided to instruct the Board of Control to once more look into the question of pensions for the two former police officials.

They were retired by the regional police commission after a limited officer investigation of the city's police department last fall.

ABORTION RING BROKEN

New York, April 4 — (AP) — Three doctors and four other persons were arrested early today as alleged members of a $500,000-a-year abortion ring. The arrests followed a raid on an apartment while an abortion was in progress, detectives said, adding that the ring performed about five abortions a day at police raiding from $350 to $1,500, depending upon the length of pregnancy.

BELGIUM RELEASES NAZI WAR CRIMINALS

German generals, left to right, Georg Bertram, Eggert Reeder and Alexander von Falkenhausen, are shown after they crossed the German border at Aachen on March 28 following their surprise release by Belgian authorities. The trio had been convicted of war crimes by Belgium and sentenced to long prison terms earlier in March. Von Falkenhausen, 73-year-old former wartime governor of occupied Belgium, and Reeder were given 12-year sentences; Bertram drew 10 years from the same military court. Their release was officially explained as due to the fact that they had already spent more than one-third of their sentences in jail prior to the trial. Allied observers in Germany, however, interpreted the Belgian action as a further move to obtain German support for both the Schuman plan on integrating European industry, and the remilitarization of Western Europe. — Central Press Canadian.

Ontario Legislature Aims On Prorogation Thursday In 1945 Says Vice-Chairman

Toronto, April 4 (CP) — The Ontario legislature today set its sights on Thursday as prorogation date for the 1951 session.

Only 12 bills remain for clause-by-clause study, already having been approved in principle. These bills, which include a measure to permit establishment of farm to marketing pools, are expected to pass the committee stage today and be given final reading Thursday.

Debate on the budget is expected to be cleared up today with the exception of wind-up addresses by F. R. Joliffe, CCF leader who heads the official opposition, and Premier, who holds the provincial treasurer's portfolio.

They will conclude their addresses Thursday, possibly during a morning sitting, then the House will vote on opposition non-confidence motions, clearing the way for prorogation Thursday afternoon.

Night Sitting Held

Another night sitting was held last night, and the House Heard an attack on Hope Royal Commission recommendations dealing with the private school system of the Roman Catholic Church.

Aurele Chartrand, veteran Liberal member for Ottawa East, whose constituency includes a large part of Ottawa's French-speaking population, said citizens of Ontario would have to pay dearer "if this commission had never come into being."

He was critical of the recommendation in the report which would reduce the number of grades for which private schools receive government grants. At present private schools are supported for eight grades; are supported for eight grades; the commission suggested this be reduced to six.

Mr. Chartrand noted that the government had indicated it would not accept the number of grades for which private schools receive government grants. At present private schools are supported for eight grades; are supported for eight grades; the commission suggested this be reduced to six.

Mr. Chartrand noted that the government had indicated it would not accept the commission's recommendations on the separate-school question.

The government minister aimed at ending a professional dispute between representatives and officials was given second reading—approval in principle, it changes the present level of cent contributions to a board of directors and enlarges its membership from 12 to 16, adding three optimists to the group which previously included only businessmen.

Repeals Demand

In the afternoon sitting, Mr. Jolliffe repeated a demand for a Royal Commission to investigate the operations of charities in Ontario. He spoke during debate on a government bill to clarify and regulate campaigns were undertaken "by men whose principal qualifications were that they were superintendents of mining stocks." The bill was Mimico for Northern Ontario, will be granted Honorary Degrees of Doctor of Divinity at this ceremony.

At the Medical and Nursing convocation, Dean of the Faculty G. D. W. Cameron, Deputy Minister of Health, Ottawa, and Dr. W. J. Rose, Kelowna, B. C., will receive Honorary Degrees of Doctor of Laws.

NOW IN OPERATION

Paris, April 2 (AP)— General Dwight D. Eisenhower announced today that his supreme allied headquarters for the defence of western nations has become operational.

Eisenhower called the supreme headquarters "a unified command, a mechanism to "preserva peace."

He said at a press conference that British, American, French and Canadian troops under his command already placed at his disposal now have come under his operational control.

Growers pointed out that their costs are rising increasingly for plants, picking, trucking, spraying. The high cost of pea seed has been 11 dollars a bushel, and on this crop at the $85 prices, they claim.

Several growers indicated that they are prepared to grow other crops if necessary. "I can make more from growing oats than from peas," one declared.

The meeting was told that growers Heinz, Kent and Harvey canning are refusing to contract unless price demands are met. Some processors in that part of the Province were reported as having increased the price to be paid for tomatoes.

PICTON

Canning Crop Growers Assoc. Continuing Fight to Have Growers Refuse to Sign Contracts

Picton—Prince Edward Canning Crop Growers Association is continuing its fight to have growers refuse to sign 1951 canning crop contracts, and the terms of those which have already been signed.

Though called on short notice and without advertising, some 150 growers overflowed Shire Hall, Monday night to support the association and urge growers to stand together in an effort to secure their demands for better prices.

On motion of Norman Leavitt and Clarence Rich, it was unanimously passed "that a petition be circulated among the gathering asking all to sign who are in favor of backing the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board is not contracting and cancelling contracts."

All growers present when the petition was passed signed the resolution which pledged "we agree not to contract and to cancel existing contracts until agreement is set for asking prices of the Marketing Board. They represented all parts of the county.

The Association plans to circulate the petition among those who were not present, and possibly hold further meetings to consolidate the stand of the growers.

Outlined Action

S. C. Peck and D. G. Reynolds, board members for Prince Edward, outlined the action taken in regards to obtaining prices. Donald Thompson, president of Prince Edward Federation of Agriculture, pledged the support of that body in its efforts. Directors representing each township reported contacting growers with good results. They stated that in some communities growers were almost solidly cancelling contracts.

The spokesman said that at least two canners are willing to pay prices in excess of those decided by arbitration, and unanimous by the grower. It was stated that one canner is contracting at $39 per ton flat for tomatoes.

Some growers protested reports that the increased price asked would put the canned product too high in price for consumers, and a flat price of $30 a ton is paid for tomatoes, it would mean but one cent more for a 28-ounce can of tomatoes and one-half cent more for a can of tomato juice, it was stated.

Afraid to Cancel

That some growers fear to cancel contracts because they might be discriminated against by the canner, was mentioned. In reply it was stated that any canner who shows such discrimination against a grower who refuses to sign now, or who cancels his contract, is liable to lose his licence. On motion of Fred Kelchapsy, the meeting went on record "that if any canner discriminate against any grower from this date on that the grower cancel their contracts with that factory.

The growers took issue with the Ontario Canned Foods Association as to percentage of increase granted, as revealed in a press release. It was pointed out that the growers have taken a loss during the past two years in having accepted cuts in prices awarded by arbitration in 1949 and 1950, amounting to $3.25 per ton for tomatoes, $5 per ton for peas and $3.75 per ton for corn. The reasons for the cuts were said to be were the heavy stocks of canned products and the processors' claim for help out of their financial difficulties.

Claim Situation Different

The growers point out that the situation in 1951 is entirely different, as stocks of peas and tomato products are in short supply, and sweet corn is expected to be in normal supply by next fall because of the present demand in the United States. Also, it was stated, the majority of processors have enjoyed a good year. On the other hand, the cost of all commodities and services used by the growers has risen greatly, and to bring about high production cost and uneconomical returns.

The growers maintained that the price cuts in 1949 and 1950 should be restored in view of the present favorable stock situation and rising prices for packed products and that the 1951 prices should be based on the 1948 levels for each crop.

The arbitrated and negotiated prices for 1948-1951 and asking prices are as follows.

Tomatoes—1948, $35.10; 1949, $22.09; 1950, $21.85; 1951, $27 which is unacceptable to growers who seek $30 a ton.

Peas—1948, $83; 1949, $78; 1950, $72; 1951, $85 not acceptable; $95 asked.

Corn—1948, $22; 1949, $22.50; 1950, $18.75; 1951, $23 ton prices not acceptable by growers who seek $28 a ton.

From these figures, the growers declare that the 1951 prices, declined by arbitration, give the growers only an increase of $2 per ton on tomatoes, one eight cent-a-dozen tin corn, or two percent; $1 per ton on corn, or four percent.

Minimum Prices

The growers were told that prices set were but minimum prices and that the Growers' Board will not approve them. They were told that there was nothing to prevent canners from paying the prices being demanded by growers, they contend.

Besides the government figures show farmers' costs have risen 21.2 points from 1949 to August, 1950, and 11 points since August, indicating the price of tomatoes last year, based on rising costs alone, should have been $30.32 per ton instead of $21.85 per ton as received by the growers, it was stated.

One grower pointed out that the consumer did not realize that the value of the raw product in a 20 cent can of tomatoes is but four and one-half cents a can and but two and one-quarter cents per can for tomato juice, based on a $27 a ton price.

Mrs. Ruth Miller Resigns as Editor Of Times-Herald

Washington, April 4—(AP) — Mrs. Ruth McCormick Miller resigned last night as editor in charge of the Washington Times-Herald.

Mrs. Miller, known as "Bazy" to her friends, is a niece of Col. Robert R. McCormick, president and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, which owns the Times-Herald.

She had a signed notice posted on the Times-Herald bulletin board saying:

"To all staff members:

"I resigned from the Times-Herald today. I tried to buy the paper but was unsuccessful."

The Chicago Tribune bought the Times-Herald in August, 1949, for $4,500,000. Mrs. Miller, then 28, was put in charge.

The purchase was from seven executives of the newspaper, to whom it had been willed by Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, late cousin of Col. McCormick, upon her death the previous year.

The Washington Post said Mrs. Miller resigned after a policy disagreement with Col McCormick.

McKim Township Plans to Fight Annexation

Sudbury, April 4 (CP) —McKim township, a municipality with about 12,000 population, plans to fight annexation by Sudbury, a city of about 50,000.

The township council at a special meeting last night with Gordon Watson of Toronto, legal consultant, decided to oppose Sudbury's application to the Ontario Municipal Board here May 16 for permission to annex the 13,305 acres of land.

Sudbury at present has an assessed population of 47,054 and the addition of McKim residents would make the city large enough to have a board of control and cocktail bars.

The application to the municipal board was made earlier this year. Since then two small sections of the township have been joined to Sudbury, one was a built-up area and the other was unoccupied land.

Decision to fight annexation was supported by public and separate school boards which feel that they would lose in grants by becoming part of Sudbury.

Public meetings are expected to be held in the next few weeks and a plebiscite may be held in McKim on the question of joining Sudbury, Ontario's sixth city in population.

The dance was in honor of the 21st anniversary of the first flight made by Air Hostess Ellen Church.

Blacksmith Finds Horse Cranky Like Some Humans

North Bay, Ont. (CP)—A Sesan horse is just about the worst animal ever in the world, claims Raymond Larocque, big broad-shouldered ,North Bay blacksmith.

Horses are a lot like people in his estimation. There are quiet horses and cranky horses. Unfortunately, the cranky ones are in the majority.

"Putting the shoes on a horse is tough enough, but when it comes the horse doesn't like it."

When a ton of horseflesh decides to get stubborn, 200 pounds of man can't do much to change his mind.

The 27-year-old blacksmith has been at his trade for five years, learning it in district bush camps. Five years have taught him the refined art of docking flying hooves and dodging snapping teeth.

Larocque hasn't been injured but he had a close call last year when a horse reared and fell on top of him. "I thought I was done for," he says, but he got out from under with no broken bones.

Rugged Task

The Duke's Bay smithy figures that a "bad" horse takes him average of 15 hours to be shod, and it's a struggle all the way. He recalls one team here that gives him real trouble. "I have to spend five or six hours on the first one," he says. A team of quiet horses however can be shod in three hours without misadventure.

One of the things that keeps Larocque busy is the fact that city-working horses are ready for new footwear in less than three weeks.

But Larocque has an advantage over the clerk who fits shoes for human beings. His shoe styles never change.

SKATES FOR ESKIMOS

Arrival of 12 pairs of skates from Saskatoon at Port Harrison, on the shores of Hudson Bay, brought smiles from Eskimo children there who plan forming a hockey team. The skates were delivered to North Bay by the Canadian National Railways and were taken to Moosonee by the Ontario Northland Railway. From there they were taken by dog team to Moose Factory and the last leg of the 2,200-mile trip was made by an Austin Airways plane. Former War Planes In Peacetime Role

London, Ont. April 3—(CP)—Two Mosquito bombers which never saw war action and have been stored at London airport for the last six years will take to the air again this week for a new peacetime role.

They are the last of more than 100 machines stored here at war's end. During the last few weeks the two planes have been put into shape by Leavens Brothers Air Service and will be used for high altitude photography.

The first is expected to leave here tomorrow for Ottawa, headquarters of the Geodetic Survey of Canada. The second will be ready for delivery about Saturday, George Walker, Leavens' manager, said today.

The fuselages, built to carry bombs, will be modified in Ottawa to carry cameras.

American Servicemen Warned Against Red Propaganda

Heidelberg, Germany — (Reuters) — The U. S. military authorities have circulated a blunt warning to American servicemen in Europe to be careful how they behave among people of Allied countries.

The aim is to thwart communist attempts to divide the United States from her friends.

A curious, shovelled, annoyed Scots captain marching smartly past a group of lounging American soldiers jeering at his kilt was used to illustrate what American soldiers should not do.

The warning, which emphasized the importance of strengthening American - Allied friendship, appeared in a recent issue of the information bulletin of the United States Forces European Command.

A long article, headed "Getting Along With Our Allies," gave American servicemen tips on how to conduct themselves overseas, including warnings not to brag, not to drink too much — and not to judge an ally by his plumbing.

Have Common Foe

The bulletin said, "You and your Allies are friends because you are both enemies of communism.

A special section on "German's Role in Western Defence" stated that every American serviceman in Germany is "an important element in determining whether German participation in the defence of the West will be whole-hearted."

It stressed that American forces in Korea are getting active military support from Australia, British, Canada, France, The Netherlands and Turkey, apart from South Korea. Elsewhere British troops were fighting communist guerrillas in Malaya and French troops were battling against communist forces in Indo China.

Aware of Weaknesses

Warning American troops of communist methods in creating "discord between us and our Allies," the bulletin declared that the communists are fully aware of potential weaknesses in the coalition Allied nations.

"They will tell our Asiatic Allies that all who fight on our side in Asia are 'tools of Yankee imperialism.' In Europe, they will spread the lie that 'the United States will fight to the last

Scots Should Weep! Englishman Makes Best of Bagpipes

London — (Reuters) — A spry little 77-year-old Londoner has been having a quiet laugh on the Scottish for many years.

He is Albert Henry Starck, who in a little factory in North London makes that most Scottish of musical instruments — och aye, the bagpipe.

He does it with a chuckle, because he supplies many of the crack regimental Scottish bands, not just in Scotland, but all over the world. He's never been to Scotland himself and hasn't a single Scot in his employ.

Queen Victoria is to blame for it. She picked up a love of bagpipes while visiting Balmoral, her Scottish seat, and insisted on having pipers around her even in London.

One of these was the late William Ross. He suggested to Albert Henry's father, a flute-maker, that he go into the bagpipe business.

Horrified at First

Starck was horrified at first. Bagpipes after dulcet flutes? But Ross prevailed, and soon the wail of the bagpipes was rising in London's foggy air.

Ross used the London-made pipes himself in more than one championship competition. He even introduced them into the band of the famous Scots Guards.

The fame of the Starck pipes spread to New Zealand, Australia, India and the United States. Starck also devised the Irish chromatic marching pipes, which have a true full scale enabling the sons of Erin to render all their own beautiful folk songs on the pipes.

At 77 Albert Henry, the founder's son, still does a day's work in the factory in the grimy Camden Town district. One of his jobs is to test the pipes when they are completed. He can "up and gie them a blaw" as readily as any Scot.

When he is gone the business will be carried on by his son, Henry, now 41.

Frenchman and Englishman," it said.

"To Americans who will listen they will loudly announce that the United States is once more preparing to fight England's war."

Mayor Ayrhart Serves Town By Remote Control

Montreal — (CP) — From his apartment home in Montreal a mayor runs a town 300 miles away.

He is Mayor Ernest Ayrhart of Campbellford, Ont. Business keeps him here most of the time but the 3,500 residents of Campbellford want him to stay in office.

Mr. Ayrhart, who has milling interests in Northern Quebec and heads Chibougamau Explorers, Ltd., says he will retire at the end of his term, but he may have a hard time doing it.

He retired once, was persuaded to run again and when he wanted to quit the next time the other candidates refused to run against him.

In 1946 Mr. Ayrhart returned to campbellford with the idea of settling down. He was born 16 miles from the town.

The townspeople made him mayor. Four years later he retired but in 1950 was persuaded to run again. He defeated three other candidates.

"Last July rock fever hit me again," he said at his St. James Street office in Montreal. "I came back to Quebec to re-establish myself in mining interests."

He wanted to retire again as mayor but at the nomination meeting in Campbellford last December three other candidates refused to contest the election and Ernest Ayrhart was mayor again.

He attends all council meetings and is constantly on long - distance telephone to talk over problems with other town officials. He gets full co-operation from his councillors.

Last Easter Sunday he asked 60 Campbellford business men to attend a meeting to discuss a new industry for the town. While almost everybody else was enjoying the holiday, 56 of the 60 business men turned out for the meeting.

Leafs Leave Boston With Game Advantage Over Bruins in Stanley Cup Semi-Final Series

Boston, April 4—(CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs travelled back to their St. Catharines, Ont., hideaway holding a one-game edge over Boston Bruins in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series.

The Leafs, who will rest today and work out Thursday and Friday, downed the Bruins 3-1 last night at Boston Garden for their second victory in the series which will determine the opponent for the winner of the Detroit-Chicago real playdown.

Breaks decided last night's tussle and one of the first to admit it was Conn Smythe, articulate president and general manager of the Leafs.

Bruins had a slight edge in territorial play until the 15th minute of the second period when Max Bentley scored a fluky goal which cracked the 1-1 tie.

Max had been ridden off as he skated in on the Boston cage, but retained possession of the puck as he moved in.

He shot the puck out towards his mates clustered in front of the net and it bounced off goalie Jack Gelineau's skate into the cage.

Bill Barilko's third-period goal was just a little more frosting on the cake.

Boston opened the scoring in the first period on Dunc Fisher's backhander over the fallen Turk Broda. That goal, only one of the opening game, was set up by Hal Laycoe, just rounding into shape after a layoff because of a cracked bone in his foot.

Bruins Short-Handed

Bill Ezinicki was finishing a minor penalty when Toronto tied it in the second with Sid Smith deflecting Jimmy Thomson's drive past Gelineau.

The Leafs will take it easy today after arrival at St. Catharines. They will skate Thursday and Friday and arrive at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens an hour or so before game time Saturday night.

Bruins will have today off. They leave by train Thursday for Toronto and will skate briefly in Toronto Friday.

The teams then will return here Sunday.

Leafs will be at full strength save for winger Harry Watson who is recovering from a separated shoulder. Bruins have a long list of injured. Latest word is that wing Johnny Pierson, who suffered a fractured left cheekbone Saturday night in Toronto will be unable to play this weekend.

Milt Schmidt is skating on two knees bound so tightly he can barely bend them. Vic Lynn and Pete Horeck are slowed by Charlie horses. Henderson still winces when bumped hard near his mending rib.

But neither Boston coach Lynn Patrick nor his players have given up and Patrick insists "we can still win."

Williams Decides To Defend Title Against Carter

Philadelphia, April 4 (AP)—Ike Williams finally has decided to defend his lightweight championship, but it seemly likely that the Trenton, N.J., pitcher will need a little too long to make up his mind.

Frank (Blinky) Palermo, Williams' manager, said Ike will fight James Carter of New York in a title match at Madison Square Garden May 11.

This move caused the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission to lift its suspension of Williams —but it didn't change the position of the National Boxing Association.

The N.B.A. had begun polling the 14 members of its executive committee to decide whether to declare Williams' title vacant because he ignored an NBA directive to defend his crown by March 31.

Arch Hindman, head of the NBA, said the poll will continue despite the agreement on the Carter match. Results of the poll won't be made known until next week.

Carter has only a fair record as far as title challengers go. In 61 bouts, he won 45, lost 10 and fought to a draw six times.

He is one of five boxers Palermo named earlier as possible foes for Williams when the NBA signed its March 31 directive.

Palermo said that if Williams gets past Carter in their 10-rounder he will meet Art Aragon of Los Angeles June 19.

This was news to matchmaker Babe McCoy who said at Los Angeles that he "gave up a long time ago" trying to arrange a Williams - Aragon championship fight. McCoy said that as far as he is concerned, Williams is no longer the lightweight champion.

Carter is rated seventh among the lightweight challengers by Ring Magazine, First is Freddie Dawson of Chicago, who Williams defeated in December, 1949, in Ike's last title match.

Turning Point Bentley's Goal In Second Period

Boston, April 4—(CP)—The winning Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins last night agreed that the turning point of their fourth Stanley Cup semi-final clash was the second Leaf goal —which Max Bentley shot home on a screen drive from Jack Gelineau's foot.

That tally made it 2-1 for Leafs and took much of the steam out of Bruins.

Maxie's blast was well behind the net and off to the right. He belted it across the front of the cage and it slipped in off the Boston goalie.

Leaf president Conn Smythe still isn't taking anything for granted. "It was a heck of a hockey game," he said, "and this series is far from over. That goal we scored from behind the cage was the one that did it."

Lynn Patrick said that his club played good hockey and was right in the game up until that all-important goal. He said: "It only took the idea 16 move young Max Quackenbush up from defence to centre in place of Paul Ronty to came from brother Bill.

Patrick said Max would centre as an amateur and then switched to the rearguard when he turned professional.

"I thought the Bruins played very well," Patrick added. "But we just didn't get the breaks."

World Champions Start Limping Back For Opening

Tucson, Ariz., April 4—(AP)—Doctor Casey Stengel is holding his New York Yankees together with baling wire and sticking plaster (again) as the world champions start limping back north to open the American League baseball season in less than two weeks.

A series of new injuries within the last few days, added to several others that have plagued the club all spring, forced Casey to play a line-up against Cleveland here yesterday which would have had difficulty finishing in the second division.

Casey is becoming worried and he admits he is in for trouble unless there are a few recoveries before opening day. It planned to have his starting team ready to go by this coming Saturday, but has abandoned hope of that now.

"What makes is worse," he lamented, "is that these kids get hurt and don't tell me about it so I could get them out of there. Then they start running and throwing again too soon."

He had particular reference to third-baseman Billy Johnson, who fractured a rib in an early inning of a game the other day but sand nothing and played out the contest. Now he is out for at least two weeks.

Little-Phil Rizzuto has a badly-pulled muscle in his left side and could be out for some time. So it has been necessary to move second-baseman Gerry Coleman over to shortstop.

Has Sore Thumb

Mickey Mantle, the wonder rookie, has come up with a sore thumb which threatens to give him serious trouble. The thumb swells to nearly twice its normal size after he has batted left-handed, the result, apparently, of a faulty follow-through.

Mantle can hit right-handed without ill effect but the Yanks have been seeing very little left-handed pitching, and until they do Mantle doubtless will have to stay on the bench. Casey is not going to risk such a prodigy at this stage—not when he knows Mickey will pack the park for the Yankees' final two exhibitions in New York.

To continue with the casualty list, pitcher Allie Reynolds still is having trouble with his salary arm, and there is no indication when he will be ready for a starting assignment. The club can't win a flag without the sturdy Indian.

Gene Woodling, alternate outfielder, has been able to play only at rare intervals because of a painful instep. Likewise first-baseman Johnny Mize, who has a troublesome side.

Joe Dimaggio has reported no particular ache or pain. It is just that the wonderful clipper finds it takes him increasingly longer to get into playing condition, and he looks far from ready at this stage.

GEESE GROUNDS

The Outardes river in Saguenay County, Quebec, was so named for the outardes (wild geese) which frequent its banks.

Moncton Hawks, playing without their injured star centre Bert Connolly, won the Allan Cup for the second year in a row 17 years ago tonight. The Hawks won the third and deciding game by 5-1 at Toronto. The Halifax Wolverines made it three straight for the Maritimes by taking the 1935 title.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By. GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

HISTORIC OLD MUG!

The battered old Stanley Cup only cost fifty dollars originally but if it were paid quiteage, even at the rate of current OHA referees, its value would run into four figures. It has travelled from coast to coast several times and has been held by U. S. teams on eight occazions, Seattle Metropolitans being the first American team to capture it, when they took the award in 1916-17.

Twice the Stanley Cup series was not completed, once owing to a fix epidemic that wrecked the Canadiens and resulted in the death of Joe Hall. That was 1918 ago when the Flying Frenchmen travelled to Seattle to meet the Pacific Coai champions but the team was stricken by the flu. The crippled Canadiens wanted to continue but the series was cancelled. A sorrowful group of hockey players returned east that year after leaving one of their mates in a far western grave. The other time was last the trophy was not decided was in 1899 when Winnipeg Victorias visited Montreal and, after a serious injury to one of the Western players, the referee went home, refusing to continue play and the cup was left in the possession of the Montreal Victorias.

The most unusual challenge for the cup came from Dawson City in 1904-5 when a team from the Klondike travelled 4,000 miles by dog team, boat and train to Ottawa to play the famous Silver Seven. It took the Dawson City club nine days to travel 420 miles to White Horse with the weather around fifty below. From White Horse they took a train for Skagway and from there went by boat to Vancouver. Then the cross - continent journey. Gold must have been plentiful in them thar hills to finance a trip like that.

The Silver Seven was at the peak of its fame and won two games from the Dawson City team. Frank McGee, one of hockey famous, who was killed in the First Great War established a remarkable record against the Dawson City team with eight goals in eight minutes and twenty seconds and a total of fourteen goals in a two game series. The Klondikers travelled on to the Maritimes and did not return home for many months. The present extended European tours of Canadian hockey teams seem short trips compared to the Dawson City expedition or forty-seven years ago.

Kenora came out of the west to challenge the Ottawa Silver Seven the following year and the old timers of the mid-west still claim that Ottawa sailed that tie to slacken the speed of the visitors who were threatening the reputation of the famed Silver Seven. Kenora, then known as Rat Portage, was scored by Tom Phillips as many claim was the fastest man on skates to ever play hockey, being even faster than Cyclone Taylor. Kenora won the first game 9 to 3 but McGee, with a broken wrist in a cast, re-joined the Ottawa team to keep the championship in the Capital. Percy LeSueur, who was with the Silver Seven always claims that it was mild weather and not skill that softened the Ottawa ice and ruined Kenora's chances. One of McGee's great scoring feats was against a Queen's team when he got four goals in sixty-four seconds, all on solo efforts.

The biggest game on record for the Stanley Cup was in 1927 between Detroit and Montreal Maroons when the Red Wings won on Mud Bruneteau's goal after 176 minutes and thirty seconds of play. Hooley Smith drew the longest penalty in Stanley Cup history in 1927 when he was with Ottawa and he hit Harry Oliver of Boston, over the head with his stick. Smith was suspended for a month of the following playing season but when he was reinstated Montreal Maroons purchased him for $22,500.

BASEBALL CONFAB TONIGHT!

Tonight at City Hall the executive of the Belleville Baseball Association, together with its directorate is holding an important meeting. The chief discussion centres around certain players residing in the city who cast in their baseball lots last season with Batawa and Picton. Much may hinge on the outcome of this particular confab. President Jack Carson has called the meeting for 7:30 and all members are requested to be on time. Decisions arrived at tonight will be aired again at another special meeting tomorrow night in City Hall at nine o'clock when representatives of the Batawa and Picton squads meet the Belleville executive.

PICTON ORGANIZES

What appears to be re-organization of the Picton and District Baseball Circuit took place last Friday night. It appears, according to communications received by the COBL executive that some confusion reigned over in the "little Spanish town" as to whom was who and what was what as regards the league organization.

However, the slate of officers of the official organization has been handed to us. The president is Dr. Carmen Slack; vice president C. F. Evans; 2nd vice, R. Gibson; secretary, Jack Goodwin and treasurer, G. Welsh. What, no Church!

Home-Winning Tradition Goes By the Board as Detroit Ties Canadiens in Stanley Cup Series

Montreal, April 4—(CP)—The advantage of home ice, said by hockey's Cognoscenti to be a deciding influence in the outcome of games has been a disadvantage so far in the Montreal-Detroit National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoffs.

Canadiens took the first two games in the best-of-seven series from Detroit on the Wings' home ice. Playing at home, the Montreal-ers dropped the third contest 3-0 and last night they came out on the short end of a 4-1 count. In other words, both teams are back where they started, each having lost two home games to leave the series tied 2-2.

If the current winning-away trend continues, Canadiens are assured of taking the series. They can count on a victory at Detroit Thursday, Detroit will take the next game at Montreal Saturday so even the series again, and Canadiens will have the final say at Detroit Sunday.

In last night's contest, it was Detroit all the way.

The Wings struck for two goals in the opening period and for two more in the finale to more than offset Montreal's solitary second-period marker.

Leo Reise, Metro Prystai, Gerry Couture and Sid Abel counted for the Wings. Elmer Lach counted for Canadiens.

Some 14,500 fans witnessed the game and didn't particularly like what they saw—a home team performing in big time fashion only in the second period.

The game was an open-and-tough affair, too, threatening to break out open on several occasions. Tempers were cooled in time, however, and only minors were called, nine in all of which six went to Canadiens.

Detroit had 26 shots on Gerry McNeil and Canadiens had 23 on Terry Sawchuk.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, April 4 (AP) — You can hear at least two versions of what's going on in the boxing trade hereabouts— both confusing. . .The officials version, heard in the International Boxing Club office, is that matchmaker Al Weill wants to bring in "every new fighter who should be seen in New York." . . . He already has produced Rex Layne, Irish Bob Murphy and Bob Satterfield, to the delight of the TV fans and a few cash customers. . .There may be more by the end of May for Bob Baker, sixth-ranking heavyweight, will get his first New York showing at St. Nick's next week; Young Chico Vejar is advancing to the main bout class and Paul Pender, flashy Boston middleweight, may appear here.

The guys who figure Al is shilling for heavyweight Rocky Marciano, managed by Al's son Marty give it to you another way. . . they claim Weill figured to give Layne, Murphy, etc., matches that would make them look bad and was unexpectedly rewarded with a series of crowd pleasing wing-dings. . . But the question is how the fighters can cash in on their new popularity on the air waves, The managers will meet Friday to demand more TV dough. They won't get much—and what can they do about it?

He Wanted a Live One

Johnny Clark, whose numerous activities include doing a bit of non-profit publicity for the non-profit Keeneland race track, recently tried to get a photo of War Admiral looking at the statue of his celebrated sire, Man O' War. . .Clark asked Bud Graves, War Admiral's groom to lead the horse up to the statue . . .But objected: "Don't think Wah Admiral would like dat, Mr. Johnny. He knows dat thing ain't alive."

Sports Before Your Eyes

Jack Kramer, who say he is giving up tennis touring, may tackle tournament golf next. He shoots in the upper 70s without much practice and is a heck of a competitor at anything. . . Most embarrassing mishap of the spring training season probably was suffered by Dick Young Baltimore Oriole rookie, when the batting cage collapsed. They had to untangle Dick like pulling a fish from a net.

TRI-BELLS EASY WINNERS

Toronto, April 4. (CP)—Toronto Tri-Belle last night won the Eastern Canada Senior Men's Basketball championship with a 50-43 victory over Ottawa Mormon Elders.

It was the second straight they Bears 2-1 before 7,022 last Toronto quintet in the best-of-three final series. Tri-Belle now meet Vancouver Clover Leafs in Vancouver for the Canadian title.

Paul Thomas was high scorer in the game with 17 points for Tri-Belle. Dales Geddes and Bob Peterson of Ottawa followed with 13 points each.

Cambridge Crew Arrives in N.Y. For Two Races

(By The Canadian Press)

The Cambridge crew has taken a quick look at New York and agrees with an emphatic "beak, beak" that the city's taxicab drivers are unique philosophers.

Today the pink-faced British athletes — small and slight by American standards — leave for New Haven, to start intensive training for race, April 14 against Yale, and April 19 at Boston against Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Boston University.

This British crew averages six feet one half inch, and 174 pounds. At bow is Harry H. Almond, 5-6, weighing a mere 144—about the size of an American coxswain.

Cambridge won the invitation to compete here by defeating Oxford by about 12 lengths in their annual 4½ mile race on the Thames, Here the British sculling race at much shorter distance—probably 1 5-16 miles at Derby, Conn. against Yale, and 1¼ miles on the Charles River at Boston.

At Toronto Pete Audette, who manages Montreal's Armand Savoie, said last night his fighter has been matched for an April 23 bout with Jean Richard, the winner to be named Canadian lightweight boxing champion.

Audette, who arrived with Savoie to prepare for the match with Toronto's Alan McAtee Monday night, says the boxing federation has okayed the bout.

However, Fred Steele, Ontario Athletic Commissioner, said "there will be no lightweight title match unless Arthur King is considered." King currently fights out of Philadelphia although he comes from Toronto.

The Winnipeg Club of the Western Football Conference said yesterday that Toronto Argonauts will meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers in an exhibition game in Winnipeg Aug. 20. Argos will also play at Calgary Aug. 18.

Turning to baseball, Philadelphia Phillies yesterday sent rookie right-handed pitcher Paul Stuffel to their Baltimore farm club of the International League. Stuffel was with Toronto Maple Leafs last season.

And at St. Louis, Cardinals, owner Fred Saigh said manager Marty Marion won't be ready to play before June and Sollie Hemus probably will be the club's shortstop this season. Marion underwent a knee operation in December.

At Moscow, the ninth game in the world's championship chess tournament between champion Mikail Botvinnik and challenger David Bronstein was adjourned last night after five hours of play. Botvinnik leads 4½-3½ in the 24-game match.

Rookie Netminder Sawchuk Given Praise by Adams

Montreal, April 4 (CP) —"For a club that let you down we did pretty good tonight, eh Terry?" Manager Jack Adams asked goalie Terry Sawchuk in the dressing room last night, after Detroit Red Wings trounced Montreal Canadiens 4-1 in the fourth National Hockey League play-off game.

Jolly Jack, who witnessed his first complete playoff game this season, was high in praise for his rookie netminder.

"It was this kid that pulled us through tonight," Adams told newspaper men and photographers after the game.

Adams told Sawchik to forget about the loss of the Vezina Trophy to Al Rollins of Toronto. "The team went out and scored the goals for you, Terry."

"We're back in it again."

Coach Tommy Ivan stuck with his earlier opinion that the series would go to the teams with the breaks.

"We had them again tonight," he said. "I think the series will go the seven games if the breaks are as divided in the next games as they have been."

On the other side of the rink, coach Dick Irvin of Canadiens was still confident that his boys will win the series.

"Sure, we lost two games at home—so did Detroit."

Quebec Citadels Loom as Threat For Junior Crown

Quebec, April 4—(CP)—Quebec's power-packed Citadels, provincial junior hockey champions, loom as a big eastern Canada threat for the Memorial Cup.

"We've been four years building the team and we're now at our peak," said Kilby Macdonald, N. H. L. to play his last year in special assistant to coach Pete Junior ranks with Citadels.

Martin.

The Quebeckers opens a best-of-five series here Thursday night against Inkerman Rockets in the Memorial Cup's eastern Canada semi-finals.

"We've scouted Inkerman in their series with Halifax St. Mary's and oft hand I'd say Citadels are a heavier club and have more depth," Macdonald said.

The most vital cog in the Citadels' machine is Jean Beliveau, a high-powered 18-year-old centre. He was the league's top goal-getter with 66 and turned down a reputed $15,000 two-season offer from Montreal Canadiens of the NHL to play his last year in special assistant to coach Pete junior ranks with Citadels.

ARMY WILL ATTEMPT TO HALT FLOOD MENACE IN MEDICINE HAT

MAYOR RILEY IS SEEN WELCOMING ARMY MEN

As a result of huge ice jams in South Saskatchewan river, near Medicine Hat, Alta., which have left 80 persons homeless due to floods, army engineers, assisted by all available reserve units of the South Alberta regiment, are being relied on to do from the ground with dynamite and other high explosives what the R.C.A.F. failed to do from the air with bombs, dislodge a 15-mile-long icefield jammed between the banks of the winding prairie river. Although 500 and 1,000-pound bombs smashed their target, it failed to budge the icefield, and until it moved the whole city is in danger of being flooded. — Central Press Canadian.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 4 — (AP) — After 50 years in show business, Lewis Stone admitted today he is keeping an eye on the new medium, television.

"Oh, I don't expect to get into it for some time to come," he added. "But I bought a set so I could keep an eye on television. It's not because I like it, I think the quality of entertainment is improving, but still has far to go. I'm just watching it because it's a new phase of our business that I might have to know about some day."

Stone doesn't seem too pleased that MGM once agents have advanced this is his 50th year as an actor. (And that his current "Bannerline" is his 50th MGM picture).

"It's just a date on the calendar," he shrugged. "I think it's a bore. The only comment someone could make is 'So what!'"

Chance Actor

Stone admitted that he had done pretty well for a man who became an actor more or less involuntarily. He told how it happened:

"My father's family was in the old theatrical troupe, the Boston Ideals, but I never had any great desire to act. I went right from high school to the army (in the Spanish - American War. When my outfit was being mustered out I found a story which I thought had dramatic possibilities. I worked out a play version and showed it to my uncle. He directed me to an agent who sold me on taking the lead role of actor who had gotten sick."

Stone caught up with the company in Canada. He planned to stay with it only two weeks but was talked into taking another role. This continued for several years.

He drifted to the movies in 1916. During his years in Hollywood, he has played many notable parts. He laughed about how he is most often cast as a lawyer. "I probably know more motion picture law than any man alive."

YOUR HOST MOVED

Arcadia, Calif., April 4 (AP)— Moving time came yesterday for Your Host, whose life was spared in the hope he will be rehabilitated for fighting and duty despite a broken leg suffered in a race last Jan. 13.

The California four-year-old is being transferred from his twin-stall barn at Santa Anita Park to the Circle S ranch of George Stratton 'at Canoga Park in the San Fernando Valley.

Lloyd's of London paid off a $250,000 insurance policy to gain possession of the thoroughbred from his owner, movie executive William Goetz.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

ARROW POINTS TO BOMBING ATTACK

The little of a defensive bidder has been fraught with dire peril. If he skipped, partner flayed him for not having zagged. And experts have done little to abate his sufferings.

Noted teachers mix overcalls with tactics, inferences and gobs of psychology. Duck soup for the already skilful. But it is hard on the average player who must lean on dependable foundations.

Along comes Horse Sense to group all defensive bids into four distinct types. It lists them in their order of preference. It tells how to know them apart. It offers a guide for remembering.

Starting with the strongest, here is the order of choice of the four types of defending bids: Overcall in opponent suit; jump overcall, double for takeout, simple overcall.

The guide is O-J-D-S. The O is for overcall in opponent suit; J is jump overcall; D is for double; S is simple overcall. No word is spelled with these letters. So, we use a sentence.

The sentence is "Oh, Johnny, don't swear." It is appropriate enough for a defending bidder. So, it should be easy to remember. The first letter in each word is the guide clue for choice.

Thus, if partner bids a J, he denies a O; if partner bids a D, he denies a J or an O. If partner bids an S, he denies what it takes for a a D and a J and an O.

An opponent has opened with a bid of one heart when you hold the west hand shown here:

♠ None
♥ 9 4 3 2
♦ K J 7 2
♣ A K J 10 8

You are a defensive bidder. Select your overcall. It is not an overcall in opponent suit. Nor is it a jump overcall. It is shy the qualities for a double. No. 0 or J or D.

Lacking what it takes for a stronger overcall, your only true bid is a simple overcall of two clubs. Say what you mean.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, April 5

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Wide open day and one that can be insane if you let it get you down. You will be better off staying on sound, conservative side with less talking, more listening.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Little to offer from some sources but hit your effort; advice is to be frank, many others are in emotic "boats". Intimate matters need extra care, heart interests kindly attitude.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Is perfection with assurance, will probably last only 'till about 2 p.m. Have plans laid well, study what not will do so you won't waste valuable time later. P.M. brighter now.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Dull, at times unfriendly, outlook. The keen and ever alert will escape most from even a little offered. Don't let outside conditions worry, cause eruptions at home.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Has stimulating day than may seem on surface. Be very guarded in speech, acts, how you answer mentally superiors. Don't force issue to point of arousing displeasure. Take it easy, Leo!

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Exercise all the skill and knowledge you have, especially in work and financial matters, prosperity affairs. Work, position could be impaired if you are not cooperative. Be agreeably smart.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra) — Indifference in work, contracts or personal affairs could cause unpleasantness. Every friend has its silver lining and whatever "clouds" today, you have much sunshine soon; pep up.

October 24 to November 23—(Scorpio)—Good day to test your mettle. Question self, "How am I doing?" We seldom realize feeling good after a good job—but how about not-so-good jobs? How can you improve matters?

November 23 to December 22 — (Sagittarius)—Be specific in plans, don't just take chances these days. Expediency is not always best matters will eliminate much worry, possible setbacks. Be alert, ready to act as needed.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—In wake of day's activities, you may find unexpected obstructions. Don't be excited or confused, work and also wait your turn, and recovery will be better and all the sooner.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—Aspects inauspicious but fine for making plans. Even professional undertakings. Study, try to vary your effort, thoughts profitably; take in greater scope to develop self.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Take more care in financial and general business matters. Over-aggressiveness won't help. Be determined, however, as you wait to ascertain if things are turning out as they should.

YOU BORN TODAY: are quick of perception, keen about what goes on around you. But you often lack that top desire or confidence to follow through to the high success possible. In general, an energetic, self-assertive, (over-aggressive at times). You can be influenced, but rarely driven. Remember diplomacy, co-operation are necessary for best all-round endeavor. Don't let your leadership ability become domineering. Avoid quick temper; give others credit they deserve.

The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Ru...

Ede caught her breath. He had named a figure that staggered her.

"Frankly," Ede said slowly, "I am wondering why you are willing to pay more than the stock is worth."

Northcott said easily, "A buyer's perogative, for one thing. For another, you do not wish to sell. Therefore, I have to make you a real inducement. For still a third, you can't get anything good in this world without paying for it, and usually paying high. It's best to tell you that I have—er—associates."

For just a moment Edith Frey was tempted. By pronouncing a one word syllable, she could rid herself for all time of a lot of annoyance and worry. She could be absolutely free to live as she liked, to go where she would, without strings or anchors. Her lips began to frame to the word. But they never uttered it. For, suddenly, she remembered old Cornelius Frey, pale and shrunken, lying in the great four poster bed. Death on the threshold of the room, but his eyes brilliant, intelligent, implacable as ever, as he built up my business and, dead or alive, I want it to go on. And I want it to stay in my own family.

No, she couldn't do it. She couldn't go against a wish expressed like that, and at such a time. It was too much like—like selling her father out.

"It's a wonderful offer, Mr. Northcott," she said. "A very generous one. But"—she shook her head—"the answer is no."

He looked at her almost unbelievingly. "Are you sure you're being wise, Miss Frey?" he said.

"I'm only doing what I have to do. I'd rather not discuss my reasons."

Northcott had evaded explaining his desire to buy. Why, then, should she explain her refusal to sell? "I suppose, though," she added, "that this will change things a great deal."

"It could." Northcott's eyes were dangerous now. "You refer to the account of course. Well, I haven't made up my mind yet what I'll do about that." He rose suddenly and leaned over the rail. "I was thinking of something else, Miss Frey."

Lewis Northcott turned and faced Ede Frey. "Suppose I were to tell you that right now—this minute—I practically control 25 per cent of the stock of Frey and Company?"

Through a kind of mist she saw him nodding the cold smile lighting his sharp chiseled face.

"I could be a very strong minority Miss Frey."

"Listen Mr. Northcott." Anger suddenly got the better of Ede, clouding her usually powerful clear thought. "I don't know what you mean. I haven't had time to do think it out. But I'll tell you this, definitely, Frey and Company belongs to the Frey family. And it's going on belonging to them. I don't understand your remark at all. I don't know what's going on or what you propose to do with your account. And I don't"—the words rushed out —"care very much, now. But I'm keeping control of that agency. No matter what happens."

He heard her out politely. Then he turned away.

"Very well, Miss Frey," he said. "Nevertheless, I advise you to think it over."

Only when he had gone, leaving her breathless and perplexed, did the full import of his disturbing statement flash to her brain. There was but one person, other than herself from whom Lewis Northcott, or anyone else, could obtain control of 25 per cent of the Frey and Company shares. That was her brother, Jeff Frey.

The next morning Ede learned, to her vast relief, that the cruise was coming to an unexpected end. Storm warnings had been received by radio. On the advice of the vessel's captain, Northcott was putting back to New York.

It was a welcome turn of events. In Northcott's presence, on his boat and receiving his hospitality, Ede felt distinctly uncomfortable now. And there was another, even more urgent reason why she wanted to get home. Jeff was due to return from his vacation. She could hardly wait to confront him; to get to the truth of his business.

Jeff arrived early in the evening. He looked brown and rested. Ede let him enjoy a drink before tackling him. Then she took both Jeff and Myron into a little room that had been her father's study.

"I'm afraid, Jeff," she began hesitantly, "that I've got to spoil your homecoming with ... well, office troubles."

He was instantly on the alert. "Now what! Can't a guy go away for a week without trouble breaking loose?"

"Apparently not. You see, Jeff, I spent this weekend on Mr. Northcott's boat."

"Oho," said Jeff. "Getting in right with the client, eh? You ..." Something in her face drove the levity from his tone. "Well," he finished suspiciously, "what about it?"

"Jeff," Ede said sharply. "I simply want to know whether you've sold, or are planning to sell, your shares in the agency to Lewis Northcott!"

A hunted look came into Jeff's face. He swerved, looked at the floor.

"How did you find out about it?" he muttered.

Ede felt suddenly weak. All along she had refused to accept the idea that Jeff would negotiate with Northcott in secret, now!" she asked.

She had confronted him hoping. Expecting, to hear his indignant denial. But now he was virtually admitting it...she sat down abruptly.

"I found out," she said dully, "when Northcott tried to buy my interest. When I turned him down he tried to frighten me by saying that—that he practically controlled 25 percent of the stock already. Well, Jeff"—her voice was heavy with disappointment—"Myron has only 24 shares. So—you're the only one, beside myself, who could sell 25."

Jeff managed to meet her eyes then. "Northcott's lying," he said desperately. "He doesn't control my shares."

"Then why on earth would he say such a thing?"

Myron spoke, suddenly unexpectedly. "Better tell her, Jeff."

Ede swung on him. "So you're in this too?"

"No," Myron said, almost comfortably. "I'm not."

"All right," said Jeff, frowning. "I suppose you'd have had to know, sooner or later. They did approach me, Ede. They wanted to buy my shares. And I—well, I told them I'd think it over."

"You know perfectly well Father didn't want any of us to sell the stock. Why didn't you refuse?"

"Because," said Jeff guiltily, "they offered me a whacking price."

All at once, she knew precisely when it had happened. A Saturday on which Jeff and Northcott had played golf. A Sunday night following with Jeff Frey drunk in his room and Myron stubborn and nervous pacing the floor. She got the picture. Jeff in an agony of indecision torn between a spectacular offer and a moral obligation.

DEATH SENTENCES GIVEN ATOM BOMB SPIES

French President Given State Welcome

Governor-General P.M., Cabinet Greet Noted Visitor

First Canadian Visit Ever Made by President of France

Ottawa, April 5 — (CP) — President Vincent Auriol of France arrived here today at 11:30 a.m. EST on the start of a five-day official visit to Canada.

The smiling 68-year-old president stepped from the special train that carried him from New York where he concluded yesterday a seven-day visit to United States.

Amid the flashing of photograph bulbs and the whirring of newsreel cameras, Mr. Auriol stepped along the red-carpeted platform to shake hands with the governor-general, Viscount Alexander, Prime Minister St. Laurent and members of his cabinet, diplomatic and civic officials and representatives of the armed forces.

The president was followed by Mrs. Auriol and members of his party, including Rene Mayer, Robert Scheman, France's Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Public Barred From Station

The general public was barred from the station and a heavy police guard surrounded the president as he was accompanied to the street.

As soon as he appeared to public view, a rousing cheer went up from a crowd of several thousand, swelled by civil servants and school children released early to welcome Mr. Auriol on the first official visit of a French president to Canada.

A snappy R.C.A.F. guard of honor presented arms while a band struck up the French national anthem—Le Marseillaise. In the background, an artillery salute boomed out over the Ottawa River.

Accompanied by Viscount Alexander and Mr. St. Laurent, President Auriol inspected the guard of honor. Not far in the distance stood the flag staff on the parliament buildings where the flag of France flew alongside the Canadian Ensign and the Union Jack.

The inspection over, the president climbed into an open car at the head of a 12-car motorcade for the drive to government house where he was the guest of Viscount Alexander at lunch.

Later, he was to address a joint meeting of the senate and the commons.

Wage Demands Likely to Follow Higher C-O-L

Ottawa, April 5—(CP)—The official announcement of a big jump in the cost of living has been quickly followed by renewed demands for price controls.

Shortly after the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announced yesterday that the February cost-of-living index went up a record-breaking 4.8 points to a new high of 179.7, two statements were issued, both containing demands for price control.

One was from M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, the other a joint statement from president Percy Bengough of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and president Aimé Marcelllaire of the Canadian Congress of Labor. Together the two head about 900,000 Canadian unionists.

The labor heads, in an interview, also predicted that the surge upward will inevitably cause labor to demand higher wages.

President Mosher predicted "strikes, turmoil and trouble if the government does not take action."

Mr. Coldwell called for federal subsidies, particularly for dairy farm products, and a roll-back of prices.

May be Facing Inflation

He said that Canada now faces runaway inflation, and comprehensive controls over prices and rents must be undertaken at once. The situation was becoming worse "every day the government delays." Manufacturers and others, anticipating price control, were pushing prices up more rapidly than warranted by any cost increase. Profits were souring.

Mr. Bengough said no one could say that the last two living-cost jumps—2.7 for January and 4.8 for February—were caused by increased wages.

"It's a crime! The thing is how soon are they going to curtail the activities of the public enemy No. 1—the profiteer?"

The Bureau of Statistics reported that climbing food prices provided the main impetus for the soaring cost of living. Food prices for coal and coke, footwear, clothing, home furnishings, hardware, rents, as well as health costs and recreation also went up.

In all, the index—based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100—has advanced 78.3 per cent since August 1939.

Outside of the February jump, the biggest increases since then were 2.8 points in August and September, 1947, and 2.7 points January this year.

The labor leaders' joint statement said the latest increase "was made the case for price controls irresistible. The government should not hesitate a moment longer."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 5 (CP) Synopsis: Winter has finally loosened its grip on the Great Lakes area. Skies over the province cleared during the night and the prospect is for pretty warm weather in all regions today and Friday.

VETERANS GIVEN NEW COMMITTEE BY PARLIAMENT

Opposition Attacks Scope of Members

Ottawa, April 5. (CP)—The Commons yesterday established a 31-man veterans committee—to be chosen next week—and got from Veterans Minister Lapointe a review of the legislation to come before it.

Opposition members promptly attacked the committee's terms of reference, suggesting it should be given more scope, and introduced two amendments to widen its authority. Both were ruled out of order.

Mr. Lapointe said he could not agree that the committee's terms of reference were more limited than in previous years when it would have authority to deal with all of the veterans' legislation that the government expects to introduce at this session.

To opposition members who expressed fear that the government plans to apply a means test to the Pensions Act, he gave assurances that the administration has no such intention.

The legislation he forecist will do these things:

1. Give members of the Army's Special Force, as an interim measure, pensions but not all of the discharge benefits accorded veterans of the Second World War. This will be in addition to their "clearer picture" is obtained.

2. Provide up to $40 a month for unemployable married pensioners and up to $20 a month for unemployable single pensioners to help them meet rising living costs. This will be in addition to regular pensions, which can go as high as $125 a month for married men and $80 for single.

3. Increase benefits for children of pensioned widows. A widow now gets $75 a month for herself, plus the usual pensioner's children's allowance of $10 for the last child, $15 for the second and $12 for others. Orphans get twice these allowances.

4. Legislation did not detail the new proposals.

Encourage Higher Education

4. Encourage higher education for pensioned children, which might be done by extending to 21 the age to which children's allowances can be continued while they are studying. At present, they end at 18 for boys and 17 for girls.

The opposition members received a call for a permanent committee to determine the rates of pensions, but the government always formed a committee when it had major pensions legislation coming up for consideration.

'France Not Giving Herself Up to Any Naive Neutralism' Auriol Tells Parliament

Ottawa, April 5 (CP)—France although her sole aim is peace in justice and freedom, is "not giving herself up to any naive neutralism," President Vincent Auriol said today.

In a speech prepared for delivery to a joint meeting of the Senate and the Commons, Mr. Auriol said that "France, being the first country on the road of invasions and battles, knows perhaps better than anyone that security is indivisible."

He spoke in French from the clerk's table in the Commons Chamber, a few feet away from the speaker's dias.

Mr. Auriol, first president of France to visit Canada in an official capacity, paid tribute to Canada's efforts in the world wars. He paid homage to the late Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, former prime minister, describing him as "one of the principal artisans of the common victory of the allies."

"Every nation," said Mr. Auriol "has the duty to preserve the liberty of man, against all those who would or could attempt, from their own autocratic will, to impose their fanatical ideology and thus unleash the most fatal of wars.

"Canada has understood this, for twice she has already given men, material and resources, an enormous and sacrificial contribution, to the victory of right and liberty. . . you know that liberty has no frontiers; that if anywhere in the world the light is extinguished, then the rest of the world is darker."

Democracies Smothered Claim

France regretted that the spirit of intolerance and the will to dominate had prevented United Nations from realizing the hope of world peace.

"Once again, one after another before the last war, the free democracies have been smothered," said Mr. Auriol. "Vast countries are closed and hostile to the rest of the world. Violence has conquered, is searching, and even strikes. And so the great preparations for civil liberties had to organize into regional defence pacts."

France had welcomed the North Atlantic Pact. The pact had established a powerful bond be-

Danger of Third World War Just as Great as Ever -- Truman

Washington, April 5 — (AP)— President Truman said today the danger of a third world war is just as great as it ever was.

The president told a press conference, however, that there need never will be a third world war and he is doing all he can to prevent it.

The president would not comment on a speech yesterday by Speaker Sam Rayburn that large numbers of troops are massing in Manchuria and that they are not all Chinese communists. He d-d say the Speaker is a truthful man.

As to the remark by Rayburn there is "terrible danger" of another world war, Truman said he had no further comment.

Then, pressed as to whether he thought there is still danger today or a third world war, Truman declared there is just as much danger today, as there has ever been.

He recalled there was danger at the time the United States had to institute the Berlin airlift, danger at the time the Greek-Turkish aid program was started, and danger since the time the communist-led invaded South Korea.

"We are still faced with that situation," he said. Truman then went on, but he said that situation is being constantly worked on.

Rayburn's bases for saying Gen. MacArthur has been authorized to bomb communist bases in Manchuria.

That, he replied, is a question that can be answered only because it is a military strategy question which involves military leaders here have left no doubt that if reds enter the air war in Korea in numbers, bases will be subjected to bombing.

Rayburn made his remarks about the danger of world war during House debate yesterday on the universal military training bill.

W.E. Sandercock Named Member Rent Committee

Toronto, April 5—(CP)—Membership of a seven-man committee to study federal rent controls as they will be assumed by the Ontario government, has been announced to the legislature today by Attorney-General Porter.

L. P. Cecil, minister of travel and publicity, was named as chairman of the committee, which will meet following the session and have full powers of inquiry—into the rent question.

The other members: Campbell Calder, Conservative, Simcoe East (PC—Lambton West); J. L. Dowling (CCF—Hamilton East); Thomas Park (CCF — Toronto Dovercourt); Attorney-General Porter and W. E. Sandercock (PC —Hastings West).

A. A. MacLeod (Lab.Prog—Toronto Bellwoods) objected to the membership of the committee and said the two opposition members should be represented.

Premier Frost said that as long as the government committee continued to sit in "splendid isolation," he would have to take what goes with it.

SEVEN ISRAELI POLICE KILLED

Tel Aviv, Israel, April 5—(AP) Seven Israeli police were killed last night in a bloody clash with Syrian troops near the frontier, and 21 Israeli and Syrian observers expressed fear today that broadscale fighting might erupt.

Frost Govt. Criticized for Failure To Give More Help to Pensioners

Toronto, April 5. (CP)—Farquahar Oliver, Liberal House leader, in the Ontario legislature, today criticized Premier Frost's administration for failing to provide additional help to old-age pensioners and disabled persons.

There was "no reason" for the government's policy of waiting for completion of the proposed September, 1947, and 27 points January this year.

The labor leaders' joint statement said the latest increase "has made the case for price controls irresistible. The government should not hesitate a moment longer."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 5 (CP) Synopsis: Winter has finally loosened its grip on the Great Lakes area. Skies over the province cleared during the night and the prospect is for pretty warm weather in all regions today and Friday.

government in Canada.

Mr. Oliver said the government's surplus of $150,000,000 in supplementary pension payment for the aged was "indefensible." The government should use the surplus revenue to help both the aged and those who were unable to work for themselves.

The former member from Grey County made the government to task for not implementing "many progressive and fundamental things" recommended by the legislative committee on conservation.

A great increase was needed in the research work of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and more help with the immediate problems of farmers.

The farm tax structure, in which half of farm taxes were for education, also needed revision.

He urged a single authority in the Planning and Development Department to pass legislation on conservation projects, which now had to pass through senior government departments and described as "colorless and useless legislation."

PAY INCREASE FOR LEGISLATURE TO BE CONSIDERED

Indemnity, Expense Total Would be $1,100

Toronto, April 5—(CP)— The Ontario legislature recommended today that the house consider at the start of the 1952 session the question of more money for members.

The legislature adopted the report of a committee which recommended sharp increases in indemnities. W. H. Grummett (CCF —Cochrane South), a member of the committee, did not sign the report.

Mr. Grummett said he is not opposed to the increase but objects to the recommendation the increases be considered at the next session.

The C.C.F. member outlined delays which the committee faced in meeting after it was appointed at last year's session. It had met only once last December and then did not meet until March 27.—"The dying hours of the legislature."

American Task Force 8 Miles North of Parallel

Tokyo, April 5.—(AP)—An American task force thrust nearly eight miles inside north Korea today at the spearhead of an allied line along 45 miles of the western and central fronts.

The deepest penetration into communist Korea of the current drive was recorded.

A United States Eighth Army communique reported the force met only light resistance in its patrol to the vicinity of Chail, nearly eight miles north of Parallel 38 in the Uijongbu-Kumhwa road.

The communique said the force dispersed an estimated enemy company near Cail at mid-day Thursday.

The United Nations ground command, a.m.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, joined his border-crossing troops.

Allied artillery blazed a path for the United Nations forces driving relentlessly against communist troop mass of the war. Planes rocketed and bombed the thirsty-resisting reds.

The communists fought back with artillery, mortar and machine arms. On the western front they were defending a densely-fortified area.

Race Track Tout Could Not Pick Loser but Bets Put him in Jail

London, April 5—(AP)—The jail-house door clanged shut today on "Little Arthur" Clinton, a race track tout who couldn't pick a loser.

He stated in the London Sessions Court, the troubles of Little Arthur began last Dec. 6. On that day, a sports and apple-checked 71, gave young Michael Green of Grimsby three envelopes to place bets at the Doncaster track.

Green's mother, enthusiastic, on Dec. 7 wired $.35 to Little Arthur with instructions to bet on any horse at 10 to one.

He wired back that he was putting it all on a thing called Pinkie Boy. Green's mother told Little Arthur's best belief was strictly out for the birds.

Budore won at 9 to 4.

Theoretically, Little Arthur now was holding $.35 for Mrs. Green.

Mildly annoyed, he composed another telegram, advising her that the roll was going back on a steel called Whispering Steel. This one was a morbid clinch to be something like dead last.

Whispering Steel trailed in the early running, moved up boldly at the turn for home and won at 10 to 1.

The horse wasn't even sweating at the finish, which was more than could be said, by now, for Little Arthur.

On paper, Mrs. Green's original stake had grown spectacularly to £1,254.

Little Arthur feverishly scanned the entries and fixed on Hislet. "The only way this one could do is to win," he said. "If they do qualify all the other horses."

He sent off another telegram to Mrs. Green telling her the whole wad was going on Hislet.

Hislet finished 4th in 2 at 2 post time, took the lead at the break and scored in a common canter.

Horrified, Little Arthur was now the owner of a string of disposed £4,399 belonging to Mrs. Green.

When he failed to come up with the money during the next three days, Mrs. Green complained to the police.

Yesterday Little Arthur pleaded guilty to a charge of "fraudulently converting" to his own use his client's £.35.

The judge gave the little tout six months to study his form charts in peace.

Rosenberg, Wife Will be Executed Week of May 21

Judge Kaufman Says 'Crime Worse Than Murder'

New York, April 5 — (AP) — Convicted atom bomb spies Julius Rosenberg and his wife, Ethel, were sentenced to death today in federal court.

Their co-defendant, Morton Sobell, who never testified in his own behalf, was sentenced to 30 years imprisonment.

In sentencing the Rosenbergs, Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman ordered them executed some time in the week beginning May 21.

The court did not specify the method of execution but stated the executions should be carried out "according to the law."

In a lengthy preliminary dis-cussion before imposing sentence the judge told the Rosenbergs:

Scathing Comment

"I consider your crime worse than murder."

U.S. Attorney Irving R. Saypol said that the Federal law, under the judge's sentence, would require the Rosenbergs be executed in the electric chair.

Judge Kaufman told the Rosenbergs:

"Your deliberate murder is dwarfed by your acts."

The court added that he had "searched the records and my conscience for some reason for mercy but I am convinced that I would violate the trust placed in me if I showed any leniency to the Rosenbergs."

The Rosenbergs and Morton Sobell were convicted last week of obtaining atomic spy secrets and passing them to Russia.

David Greenglass, brother of Mrs. Rosenberg, who confessed to obtaining atomic secrets while working at the Los Alamos, N.M., atomic bomb base and passing them to the Rosenbergs, was the chief prosecuting witness against his brother-in-law and sister.

He awaits sentencing.

Judge Kaufman asserted that the Rosenbergs had committed their acts of espionage in 1944, while the country was at war.

He generally under the Espionage Act, the judge said, provided a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment for a conviction of peace time espionage and maximum of death or imprisonment for not more than 30 years for wartime espionage.

Stating that the law when enacted, took no cognizance of vital facts as to atom bomb secrets Judge Kaufman declared "it is time for Congress to examine the penal provisions of this act."

Betrayal "Dirty Business"

Judge Kaufman said that should any persons be convicted in peace time of transmitting secrets "concerning the new type of A-bomb or the hydrogen bomb, the maximum penalty that can be imposed is 30 years."

$250,000 Damage In Big Guelph Business Block

Guelph, April 5 (CP) —Fire, spread by a stiff wind, raced through the downtown business block early today gutting five retail establishment and damaging others.

It was estimated that damage might be as high as $250,000 in the blaze which wiped the Great Feed Store, Pete's Restaurant, both on Macdonell St., Bennett's and the Babyion Rug Company, Guelph Ticket Agency and Gillespie Photo Studio on Carden Street.

The fire started shortly before midnight and firemen fought for hours to bring it under control while preventing nearby buildings which included the daily newspaper plant of the Guelph Mercury and the Royal Theatre. The newspaper plant was damaged by water but planned to publish normally today.

The gutted stores were in a four-storey brick and stone structure. Wooden beams in the building helped fuel the intensity of the fire.

Guests in the nearby Royal Hotel were evacuated when the fire was at its height. There were no reports of anyone being injured.

Residents of the Balmoral apartments on Carden St. left when it was feared that the northwest wind would send the flames toward them. Sparks from the fire landed on the roof of the Canadian National Railways Station across the road but no fire was started there.

The blaze was watched by thousands of curious onlookers who were kept well up to hold them back. Dense smoke covered the downtown area and reflection of the flames could be seen for miles.

Dr. H. S. Hillyer Graphically Portrays Work in Bolivia

The members and friends of the Victoria Street Baptist Church enjoyed a rare privilege during the recent weekend visit of Dr. H. S. Hillyer, associate secretary of the Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

On Saturday evening, Dr. Hillyer told the fascinating story of the events leading up to the purchase of the Southern Cross Radio Broadcasting Station in La Paz, Bolivia. The power of prayer in this accomplishment, and the development of the station by means of long and short waves were also graphically related.

Dr. Hillyer spent 28 years in missionary work in Bolivia and had many interesting experiences to share with his congregation. At the Sunday services, he told of the power of the Gospel in changing the lives of the pagan Indians.

The work among the agricultural class was described and the Christian means of raising the standard of living from virtual slavery to the free holding of land, made a thrilling story.

The kind of information acquired by Dr. Hillyer and his descriptive powers made the weekend of services a high spot in missionary interest.

Nursing Home Owner Purchases Old Hospital

Operator of the Belcrest Nursing Home on Marshall Road since 1943, Mrs. Ethel Smith has purchased the Bowmanville General Hospital and will operate it as a nursing home following the completion of the new general hospital in that centre.

The new $600,000 hospital at Bowmanville is not yet completed but it is expected the building will be ready for occupancy by July 1st. Mrs. Smith will operate the present hospital and following renovations will operate it as a nursing home.

The success achieved by Mrs. Smith at the Belcrest Nursing Home at Belleville during the past years has urged on to a great measure her interest in the purchase of the Bowmanville property. Acceptance of Mrs. Smith's tender for the purchase of the building was approved by the hospital board when they learned the use for which it was intended.

Would be of Benefit

Hospital board members felt that the operation of the building as a nursing home would be of benefit to their new hospital and accepted Mrs Smith's tender over that of others whose plan included apartments and other uses. Mrs. Smith was highly recommended as a nursing home supervisor by Dr. P. Gardner chief medical examiner for Ontario.

The premises to get under way as soon as the building is vacated by hospital authorities, will provide accommodation for 50 beds, exclusive of living quarters for Mrs. Smith and her husband.

Mrs. Smith has lived in this city for 30 years, having done special duty work as a nurse before taking over the Belcrest Nursing Home here. She came to Belleville as a war bride following the First World War.

Driving Car Full Time Job

That the business of driving a car is a full time job without allowing other outside factors to disturb the attention was learned yesterday by a woman motorist living on the East Hill.

The woman was driving east on Bridge Street when she leaned over to give some attention to the wheel and when she looked up her vehicle was heading directly for a car parked at the curbside. Quickly applied brakes were not enough and the car crashed into the rear of the standing vehicle.

Fenders and headlights on her own car suffered approximately $165 damage while it will be about $50 to take the dents out of the fender of the parked car.

As many grouse as possible will be captured by means of the newly-designed mortar nets, for later release in this district.

Many will lower flags over their buildings to half-mast.

So far as known, no Canadian newspaper plans to make Friday a day of mourning. A cross-country canvass showed a uniformly "no" answer.

Toronto, April 5 (CP)—Dr. F. S. Rutherford, Ontario Deputy Minister of Education, will retire because of ill-health on June 28, Education Minister Porter announced today. He will be succeeded by C. P. Cannon, superintendent of elementary education.

Dr. Rutherford joined the Education Department in 1920 as organizer of vocational education and became deputy minister in January, 1946.

TWEED

Fire Prevention Discussed At Tweed Forum

How to prevent forest fires on summer operations and taking effective action if and when they start, were main subjects for discussion at a well attended meeting at Tweed, Tuesday night.

Timber operators and representatives of the Hydro Electric Power Commission met with Department of Lands and Forests officials in the Quinte District for a joint discussion of fire protection problems and precautions to be taken.

In opening the meeting, the chairman, District Forester A. W. Leman referred to the increased effort needed to reduce fire losses by proper prevention measures, something that vitally concerned both operators and the Department. Among the points discussed were the amount and kind of fire fighting equipment to be provided on each summer operation, restrictions on smoking and lunch fires in the woods, educating workmen in prevention measures and the duties of honorary fire wardens.

Organizing workmen in advance so that each man knows what his job will be in the event of fire, was stressed as essential in using equipment and personnel to best advantage. Again this spring operators will be sending their foremen to equipment demonstrations and fire fighting training days at the Dacre and Bancroft headquarters.

Following the discussion two color films were shown featuring fire guard construction, handling men and the tools used.

Companies represented included the Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company, Gillies Bros., at Braeside and Dewart Forest, officials included A. W. Leman, W. W. Tweed, M. Wilson, O. Goodman, M. Mulvihill and A. Bronson.

Read and Melrose Jr. Farmers Amalgamate

Shannonville—The Read and Melrose Junior Farmers met in the township hall at Melrose on Monday, where the two clubs amalgamated to form the Tyendinaga Junior Farmers.

All offices were declared vacant and Frank Stone, assistant agricultural representative, took the chair for the election of officers which were as follows:

President, Charles Baiser; vice president, Gerald Walsh, secretary, Harold Walsh; directors—George Blatherwick, Earl Badgley, Malcolm Lasier, Don McKenny and Joe Pitt; club reporter, Earl Badgley.

The new president took over the meeting and a short business period was held during which Bob Brennan and Joe Pitt were chosen as delegates for the Guelph conference.

An executive meeting was arranged for next Monday at the home of Chas. Bates, for the planning of future meetings and club projects.

Mr. Stone showed some slides on judging and placing of dairy cattle.

Junior Farmers Choir Combines Songs, Sweets

The Hastings County Junior Farmers' Choir tried mixing sweets with song on Monday night, and the result was a complete success.

Twenty-five members of the Sidney, Thurlow, Rawdon, Hungerford and Madoc junior farmers, and junior institutes held a practice at the home of Mr. W. Aylesworth, Madoc, which was followed by a "refreshment" party.

Snow was available and fresh maple toffee was served with coffee and cookies.

The choir was directed under the direction of Mrs. A. E. Baker, Stirling for upwards of two hours. It is planning to sing at a county church service and recital in June, when Hastings county junior farmers will be hosts to four young Scottish visitors. The choir plans to hold practices every Wednesday evening during April at St. Paul's Church, Stirling.

Cobourg Man Given 20 Years On Rape Charge

Cobourg, April 5 —(CP)— For raping a 34-year-old housewife, Ralph Carey, 26, today was given a penitentiary term of 20 years.

The woman, attractive mother of a 19-month-old child, lived near the Fort Hope home of Carey, an embalmer. She said that early Feb. 10, when her husband was working as a night telegrapher and Carey's wife was away on a visit, Carey broke into her home and beat and attacked her.

A jury yesterday deliberated three hours and 10 minutes before finding Carey guilty.

The verdict ended a two-day trial which Chief Justice McRuer described as "a dreadful case."

The chief justice commended the predominantly farmer jury on its verdict, and in sentencing the remand for sentence, stated he wished to consider carefully his decision.

"When one considers what a dreadful case this is, one wonders whether Dr. Tennant (Ontario government psychiatrist) may not have something to contribute," Chief Justice McRuer said. He added that he always felt such cases came within Dr. Tennant's field, and with consent of counsel stated he would consult with the psychiatrist by telephone in the hope that he might explain "what would bring a man to do what he did."

The jury considered its verdict for three hours and 10 minutes while a packed courtroom awaited the decision.

Mass of Bruises

The attack, which left her a mass of bruises, scratches and welts almost from head to foot, and her bed-clothing covered with blood, was described by the attractive young mother in detail during the trial. She identified her assailant as Ralph Carey immediately after he pulled the bed-sheets off her during the early hours of Feb. 10, even though he was wearing a white mask. Later the mask came off and the lights were turned on, and she told the court again that she saw it was the accused. Her husband, a night telegraph operator, was working at the time.

Carey testified in his own behalf that he had been drinking considerably the preceding night with friends, but was not intoxicated.

SPELLING BY SOUND

Coincident with the information that recruits for the Canadian Army have revealed themselves to be sadly lacking in the art of spelling comes the news that one of Canada's pioneers in education advocates phonetic use of the alphabet. It may look silly, but the sentence now reads the way it sounds.

What advantage would there be in such a change? Dr. Dearness claims that the new system, once it was understood and learned, could almost wipe out spelling from the school curriculum. Pronunciation would be the only way now taught and has already been done away with, if the graduates of the schools of today are any indication.

Part of Dr. Dearness's reason lies in the fact he believes that teachers are now hesitating to teach spelling rules that have no rhyme or reason. Typical changes suggested by the educationist include nite, bot, trof, fonetics and we might add rime, sum, dun, skool, sistem and others.

Objections will be raised that the new system might be confusing in words sounding the same, thus spelled the same, might have different meanings. Certainly, in words as some and done, which would appear as "sum" and "dun", there would be double meanings.

Even so, the brain exercise involved in interpreting the true meaning of the word would be for the best. Too little emphasis is being placed in today's education on the elementary parts of language, and what is learned by students is done in the rote manner — repetition.

In newspaper columns, "honour" is reduced to "honor", and other similar words — labor, color, for example, have the the same treatment. There might be merit in extending the system to other useless letters in spelling.

THE RAILROADERS HAVE A CODE

Piles and piles of mail come to an editorial desk. The better part of it is consigned to the wastepaper basket, but an odd circular catches the eye. One that caught this week was a small pamphlet explaining the meaning of railroad signs, and to anyone who has ever ridden a train and seen the signs flashing by in complete ignorance, the information is rather interesting.

For instance, the sign along the track with a large "W" on it means that there is a grade crossing within a quarter of a mile. The "W" stands for the whistle that the engineer must blow to warn traffic of his approach. Thus is exploded the myth that all those "W's" stood for water supplied.

The posts with numbers affixed were not always too hard to understand. They mean that the train at that moment is that number of miles inside a subdivision. The triangular sign with the letter "C" on it caused some puzzlement. It turns out that they are speed limit posts, telling the engineer just how fast he can travel over that particular stretch of road. The upper row of figures is for passenger trains and the lower for freight.

A post bearing a sign with two large dots warns the snow plow that there is an obstruction ahead, such as a station platform. We once heard of a man who missed one of those signals in Western Ontario and shaved more than a foot off a wooden platform as slick as the proverbial whistle.

Perhaps the most enigmatic signal of all, the one that says "60 cars" or "65 cars," or some other number, is explained, too. It is used at sidings, to indicate to the engineer when the rear of his train is clear of the switch, and the numeral represents the car lengths.

All this only goes to prove that two things. One, a train trip can be interesting, if you read the signals, and two, you can still learn something every day.

PAINTED CHINA

My dear old aunt was gifted.
I remember her today
Painting pretty cups and saucers
for the family to display.

The gaudy, who came to dinner would compare as they ate
A lovely bed of pansies, blue and yellow, on the plate.

Every bowl became a garden,
Who had emptied one of soup
Found daffodils and tulips in a gayly colored group.
Water lilies, most exquisite, came to bloom on the dish.
"Appropriate," said father, "for the days we're serving fish."

I have never seen such blossoms,
and I'm sure I never will,
As those my aunt created with such artistry and skill.
When I'd finished with the pudding, was it chocolate, bread or rice,
To discover sweet peas blooming
I considered rather nice.

Has the plate rail gone forever from the family dining room,
With the chinaware exhibit on which poppies came to bloom?
Are forget-me-knots forgotten?
Did that painting art decline
And vanish with the passing of that gifted aunt of mine?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A young dress salesman who travels widely across Canada, covers his territory thoroughly and sees eight months. From his work, he earns a very good income, all that he requires to live comfortably and as and his wife desire.

He could spend the other four months around the factory and warehouse. But what better he do? Instead, he hunted and got a job as a mechanic in a garage. He went there to start with; but at the end of the four months, the garage proprietor offered him a partnership in the business.

Two years ago, in his layoff, he attended the university on a special extension course in French and archaeology. A queer combination: but he says what he needed was something different, to sharpen up his wits.

Last year, he got employment helping the interior decorating department of a big department store. For four months, he worked along with the painters and paperhangers. He had a whale of a good time. This year, he is studying economics and sociology. Next year, he has lined up a job in a foundry.

"You," he says, "I don't intend to be anything but a dress salesman. Maybe when I'm older, I may settle down at some kind of sales executive in a dreary office. Apart from satisfying my natural curiosity about people and other jobs, this off-season employment is work at the removed from selling as I can get, is the best kind of holiday imaginable. It brings me back to selling dresses as a fresh as a daisy. You can become awfully tired of the kind of people interested in buying and selling dresses, too. But above all, it acquaints you with new kinds of people, and in the selling business, you never can know enough about all the different kinds of people there are in the world."

VARIETIES OF WEAPONS

One of the most glorious facts of history is the growth of the Christian Church during the first three Christian centuries. During this time, the Church conquered the Roman world and did it all without drawing the sword.

This demonstrates what we could do by Christian faith if we only would. During these generations the Christians were a group of blameless people. "Children of God without fault in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation . . . among whom they were seen as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life." As generation followed generation and persecutions mounted in an almost indescribable intensity, the followers of Jesus Christ throughout the Mediterranean world grew closer and closer to one another, and their devotion to their Lord and to one another deepened. Even the Roman emperor was at last so impressed by them that he capitulated and proudly put the cross of Christ on his banners.

This historic situation is full of suggestions for us today as we confront a world of hostile enemies trying to encircle us. Atonement has its place and a very important place but there are many ways to fight this riffraff and bombs. The sword of the spirit has its place along side the sword of steel.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

TO THE ACTORS

Clyde Gilmour, critic of motion pictures and singer of Newfoundland folk ballads, had a column the other day to recall some of the biting lines from the movie "All About Eve" and I am hoping for the chance it gives me to write about actors.

The lines in question, by Joseph Mankiewicz out of George Sauter, go this way:

"Every now and then, some older actress of the theatre or cinema assures the public that actors and actresses are just plain folks. This ignores the fact that their greatest attraction to the public is their complete lack of resemblance to normal human beings. It is senseless to insist that theatrical folk are no different from the good people of Des Moines, Zanesville or Keokuk. By and large we are concentrated gatherings of neurotics, egomaniacs, emotional misfits and precocious children. . . We are a breed apart, we actors. We are the original displaced personalities."

The description seems something like the truth when you consider the leading member of the profession, for instance, John Drainie, Mayor Moore and Jane Mallett, three I happen to have encountered recently as radio leaders in their craft, are disarmingly normal and quietly intelligent folk and ego well under control. I have it on good authority that Fridolin, himself a lack of unassuming man, apart from Fridolinish flourishes, is not certain New York theatre critics.

Still, looking back on actors I've met, there is the fact that most of them very good, too. Many a night during that stretch I had the eerie feeling that I was sitting next a friend of actors, as a kind of portable audience.

Looking back now, on those days I like to think of them as My Friends the Actors. Not personally conversationally, is like following the act on set. Mr. Shakespeare put it, "As in a theatre, the eyes of men, after a well-graced actor leaves the stage, are idly bent on him that enters next, thinking his prattle to be tedious."

I learned then that actors, unlike, say, plumbers, do not hang their work at the end of the day. They are always at work. The actor, by the very nature of his talent, is easily and naturally given to self-dramatization and often acts not merely his assigned roles but his entire life. I know one actor who is so intent on the part he has had such a long run of being other people that he has got to be some aware of himself.

It is easy to put this down to an over-inflated ego, to say that the actor is a stupid poseur, and because it is easy a great many writers have said it. H. L. Mencken, for example, defined the actor as a "pretty ordinary human being, but otherwise unchanged, and opined that "the most needful of them matches the conceit of the solitary pretty girl on a slow ship."

Maybe so, but often times this conceit expresses itself in an admirable poise, in an ability to be naturally natural and, even, by his sense of drama, to give a new feeling to yet ordinary living. I have detested actors for their insufferable vanity, but I have detested them willingly for the joy of the performance and always with the secret acknowledgment to all who only sit and watch.

I'm with any form of vanity the actor's conceit is a cruel master. Well, I suppose he is the idol idol struggling to keep on top. I am still haunted by the sight of the once-great Jolson standing dejectedly with a group of extras at a Hollywood bit.

Little Inside

They heal trouble with actors, as it is with all extroverts, it that the facade is everything and what goes on inside is nothing. Well-known actors whose conversation whose very personality is dull, even stupid until they played a return engagement and I discovered that they were not stupid but merely a well-rehearsed repertoire.

It stands to reason that the man who plays upon people's reflexes, his own and those of others, is either, is not liable to indulge in too much introspection. "The animule it never more than the imitator, very rarely the creator, and so you get actors, and all sizes from the flahwires and superstitious ones, no one knows why certain qualities occur—in any family regardless.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

IT SOUNDS ALMOST AS BAD AS ULCER

In a talk about "indigestion" and ulcer in this column early in February (date missing from only copy I have) I said:

"The classical picture of a candidate for or possessor of ulcer (stomach, gastric, peptic, duodenal) "is that of a driving, energetic, worried, frustrated, undernourished person. But there are thousands of slow-moving, debilitated, calm- unhurried, contented persons some of them greatly overweight, who either get or have an ulcer."

The scientific investigators and psychologists have found considerable evidence that emotional stress causes excessive gastric acidity—or of gastric juice of too strongly acid character—and the pathologists agree that this is a factor in the production of ulcer.

Having thus accounted for the ulcer, why didn't I let it lie? That was not enough. I had to ask rhetorically what is the secret of the majority of people who are subject to prolonged emotional stress and tension yet never get an ulcer or even "acid stomach"?

Well, I asker for it. Now reader J. E. Z. comes up with an answer:

Dear Dr. Brady:

Although I may not agree with everything you write, nevertheless I make it point to read it every day and I enjoy it.

In your article on indigestion and Ulcer you asked why so many persons subjected to emotional stress never develop ulcer, while others under such strain do get ulcers.

I think I have the answer for you—Congenital insensitivity.

Sincerely,
(Signed) J. E. Z.

Congenital means just that—born birth, existing at birth, acquired during prenatal development and growth, such as things like: handedness, birthmarks and moles; congenital conditions are not hereditary; they are merely faults or arrests or delays in development, and could arise from the flahwires and superstitious ones, no one knows why certain qualities occur—in any family regardless.

Diathesis is Greek or Scandinavian, for all I know, means bodily condition or constitution which predisposes to a disease or class of diseases (Webster).

So there you have it explained in words big enough to hold you for a while—but however I take it, don't you let J. E. Z. or anyone else kid you with such imposing language.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Bad Breath

Even as a child I was taken to many physicians but no one — a health lecturer advised four lemons a day and lots of buttermilk —this seemed to correct it for a few days, but no longer. I am now 26 and engaged, but he has grown cool towards me, and of course I know why. (C. M.)

Answer—First let your dentist give whatever treatment and have whatever restorations may be necessary to put your teeth in the best possible condition. Next let your physician examine the tonsils and express any material that contains a chapter on the long in the crypts or openings. Finally, your physician also examines nasal cavity for ozena (chronic dry catarrh) or for signs of chronic sinusitis. Then to the most frequent sources of persistent bad breath. Write yourself letter, put in envelope and inclose 25c for booklet How to Breathe, in your article on indigestion and Ulcer you asked why so many persons subjected to emotional stress never develop ulcer, while others under such strain do get ulcers.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHAT TO READ?

Of all the many pleasures, for fun, relaxation, or intellectual profit, reading is quite compare to that of reading. But you ask me frequently to read this or that thing that gives you pleasure and delight. Your book friends should be selected in the same manner as you select your living friends. There is this advantage, however, —they remain alive for you so long as you live—and far beyond.

Said Hugh Walpole: "Libraries should be penetrated by the love of books, so that when you enter a room where the books are the air is full of them, and in that delicious humanity, and the books have been arranged affectionately so that, like the right kind of dog, they know no fear and yet have their fitting dignity"

Read the books that have stood the test of time, and which have accumulated in themselves precious patina of literary excellence. The longer books have lived, the more they have to tell. I like to learn of the books that great writers themselves have loved. You then have an accurate key to their own literary processes of thought. Every writer has his own special loves in books.

I often am reading four or five books at once, selecting them as the varied items in a menu in a restaurant. I therefore get a balanced intellectual feast. I am now reading a book about H. L. Mencken, one on the prose of Edward Thomas, an English poet and nature writer, a book of Thoreau's, and a book about Walt, a "Breath of Air" by Rumer Godden, "Alone" by Norman Douglas, "Moulin in Love" by Richard Vaughan, and "The Decline and Fall of Practically Everybody" by Will Cuppy.

Someone has said that the book is the one that you read at the same time as the one that you should buy and read—and delight in re-reading. There are many books today, on every topic under the sun that one should forget how without his own favorite kind. The most blessed knowledge is that which is its public library —and next to that is a well-stocked book shelf of books of real sterling, however, as to browse in a second-hand book-shop!

Reuther Given Fourth Term As President

Cleveland, O., April 5 (AP) — Walter Reuther gets his fourth term as president of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

And the U. A. W. convention also was ready to re-elect the other three top officers with him.

Though only token opposition to Reuther came against the four, an hours-long roll-call vote was required.

On the same slate with Reuther were Secretary - Treasurer Emil Mazey and vice - presidents Richard T. Gosser and John W. Livingston.

Election of 19 regional directors was scheduled for later in the day. There was no other business on the day's program.

The Resolutions Section has been able to muster only about 10 per cent of the votes on most controversial issues it has. It was doubtful that it could do any better on the rest.

Reuther's opponent was James Carey, secretary - treasurer of Cleveland, secretary - treasurer of the CIO and president of Electrical Workers.

The convention has allocated 10 cents of the new membership dues rates — boosted from $1.50 monthly to $2.50 — to help elect Democrats to Congress in the U. S. Leaders said the U.A.W. contributed only $1,200 last year to the C. I. O. political action committee in voluntary giving.

The constitution also provides that 30 cents of each dues dollar go into a fund for organizing. That will provide a $15,000,000 fund by 1955 when most auto industry contracts run out.

In Canada, the higher dues are expected to finance a major organizing drive centred on Quebec.

HISTORIC MARINE

The Indian navy traces its history from formation of the East India Company's marine in 1612.

Britons Cannot Be Beaten For Hospitality

Vandalia, Mo., April 5—(AP)— Take it from Abraham Lincoln Kilby, Britons can't be beaten for hospitality.

That's what the 58-year-old rural mail carrier told the home folks after his 21,308 mile trip to go the United Kingdom and get a first-hand report on Britain.

The Business and Professional Men's Club, organized about the British system, They picked Kilby, a 20-year club provincial, townsman, reported last night to a meeting of the club's members.

"Greater hospitality than that shown me while I was there I don't believe could be found.

"The social gains that have been made in Britain are good to a certain extent but the economic problem, if practised or continued long enough, will lead to utter economic collapse because incentive and private initiative will have been destroyed."

Many Phases of W.M.S. Work Reviewed At Second Session of Biennial Meeting

By M. AUSTIN

The second day's session of the 10th biennial meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church opened its morning's service of worship under the direction of Mrs. F. F. Gardiner, president of Cobourg Presbyterial, and her theme was "The Stewardship of Property— the stewardship of organizing and administering" based upon the Parable of the Talents.

The morning sessions from then until noon covered a great many phases of W.M.S. work— reports of nominating committee, appointment of various committees etc., and the important reports of the Branch Secretary, Mrs. F. R. Denyes and the Branch Treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Fraser.

The secretary reported receiving reports covering activities of 248 afternoon auxiliaries, with memberships of 8,298 annual 2,158 life members; 73 evening auxiliaries, with 2,222 annual and 238 life members. Total increase of membership over year of 41. There are 74 affiliated societies, with 2,000 members and adds. There were three new afternoon auxiliaries reported during the year and five new evening auxiliaries, and one new affiliated society. The attendance at monthly meetings was good.

Need Interesting Programs

Renfrew Presbyterial reported four, afternoon auxiliaries with 100 per cent attendance. "If we make our programs interesting and worthwhile a good attendance is assured. Invitation and visitation were considered the most powerful and successful means of securing new members. Some other methods used were special membership drives by committee, membership teas, passing on Missionary Monthly and other literature after reading, through efforts of community friendship secretaries.

Kingston Presbyterial have taken for their slogan this year "An Auxiliary of Affiliated Group in every preaching place in Presbyterial. We report today in the increased interest in our work this year. The Study Book was used by almost every group with various ways of explaining and dramatizing the chapters.

Much assistance was given by the older groups to younger groups, and Mission Band life membership provided for each auxiliary. In connection with the 25th Anniversary a great many special meetings were held throughout the branch. Lantern slides and films provided interest to many meetings. All these programs served to create a broader and deeper spread knowledge of our work. The secretary summed up her report with the words—"God reveals Himself to us when we listen to His guidance. God reveals Himself through us when we share our guidance with others. May we go on to serve Him more faithfully in service in the Church thus helping to establish His Kingdom on earth."

Excellent Financial Report

Mrs. E. I. Fraser, the branch treasurer presented a very excellent financial report for the year—with an amount of $99,- 936.39 sent to the Dominion Board and a balance on hand of $339.56. Our allocation was exceeded by $7,936.39, and an increase in givings of $5,351.35. The receipts from Presbyterials were as follows: Belleville, $20,175.00; Cobourg $11,713.00; Kingston, $13,560.00; Lindsay, $11,063.39; Oshawa, $16,485.00; Peterborough $11,180.00; Renfrew, $16,050.00.

Bequests received during 1950: Mrs. Emma Laver through WMS of St. Paul's United Church, Wyrkworth, $500; Miss Emily Gertrude Lake, through WMS of Simcoe St. Church, Oshawa, $500; Rev. Albert H. Hoare, Deseronto, to establish Mrs. Albert H. Hoare Memorial Fund, $1,000; Mrs. Ida Gillies Robertson, Amherst, $1,000; Mrs. Jane Emerson through WMS of United Church, Valentia, $2,391.67; Miss Elsie Irene Robinson through WMS of United Church Brooklin, $100 — a total of $5,491.67.

Gifts for Building Advance during the year were made to Bellefville Presbyterial One bed for nurse's residence at Chisamba, Angola, and one half for overseas scholarships, $1,175.00. Cobourg Presbyterial: Missionary residence at Abouzat, B.C., and Chisamba, Angola, $433.

Kingston Presbyterial, $1,400 as follows: residence at Chisamba, Angola $500; residence at Abouzat, B.C., $500; hospital at Indore, Central India, $200; scholarships $200.

Lindsay Presbyterial decided to leave it to the Dominion Board for whatever purpose they thought best as they were in a better position to know the needs. Among Oshawa Presbyterial $2,000 for residence and $1,035 for cars; $250 sent direct had already been taken care of $3,285.

Renfrew Presbyterial, one half to go to the scholarship fund and the remainder for a nurses' residence at Chisamba, Angola, total of $1,900.

Auxiliary Problems Discussed

A discussion period followed at which many problems of Presbyterial officers and local auxiliary problems were ironed out. The mimeographed reports were then handed out and each one briefly presented by the respective secretaries. It was helpful for the new future branch meetings more publicity should be given to the sessions, and further plans made that larger numbers might enjoy and profit from the excellent speakers that we have here. The complete report of Mission Bands was to be sent if possible to every Mission Band leader that they might have material for their year's work.

At twelve o'clock, Mrs. F. R. Harbeck conducted an impressive quiet hour, her theme was "The Challenge of Service", Mrs. Harbeck said, "The gasoline service stations and garages fill our tanks and eyesight with the slogan, let us service your car—let us make it safe for travel' etc. The church of Christ stands forth today and says to us 'Let us service your spirit'—we answer by word of mouth, we come—we follow the recorded word and become inspired souls. The Church of Christ is the only institution in the world to service the spirit. They give services lovingly and generously. Every Christian discovers that to give is helping ourselves. "Whosoever loseth his life for my sake shall find it, said our Lord".

It must be intelligent service directed by God. We can only be directed by Him if we keep close to Him. We must wait for and seek His guidance, which is given by prayer. Jesus said, "I and My Father are one". There was of a closeness there which we need. 'He who would find Me let him go forth to seek Me in faith.' The challenge of the Lord is this 'Let love in the Lord Thy God with all thy heart and soul and thy neighbor as thyself. Henry Ward Beecher said, "Religion, apart from work in a dirty world, peril and blows given and taken. The world is to be cleaned by someone and you should not call upon God if you are not willing to scour and scrape your part yourself.

Afternoon Session

At 2 o'clock the Branch met again and the worship was under the direction of Mrs. T. J. Pritchard of Kingston Presbyterial—the theme "The Steward in Society."

The school of instruction at 2.15 p.m. was under the direction of the various secretaries, and here the various leaders and their groups were able to tackle problems of their particular interest. When the conference branch convenes and it is understood that they gather from a very large territory and have problems often hard to solve by correspondence, such a school of instruction is indeed a boon to all the branch officers and the Presbyterial officers who gather here.

At 3.15 a Mission Band demonstration was presented in the church. These children sang and marched and formed a cross singing the words of "The Old Rugged Cross". Mrs. Harris handled Mrs. Harris said, "Who can tell some day in the not too many years ahead these children will be taking our place in the world in which we live as Christian citizens. May they do something to prove their love for Christ which weekly and daily now their leaders are passing on to them.

The special speaker of Wednesday afternoon was then introduced, Miss Harriet Christie, Dean of United Church Training School in Toronto. The privilege of introducing her was given to Mrs. A. G. MacLachlon candidate secretary for the branch.

Tells of Training School

Miss Christie started in to tell of the exciting things that are happening at the Training School these days. First because it is nearing examination time, and all students are busy together for the final plugging for final honors.

Another exciting feature, the fact that 16 of the graduating women who have completed one year of their two year course will be receiving their appointments where and what they will be doing for the summer of 1951. The visitors to the Training School last evening were the Home Mission superintendent for Newfoundland and the Home Mission superintendent of the British Columbia, and one of the graduates of a year ago—who has been a director of Christian Education in a large congregation in Toronto.

The ten who graduate this year will be getting their appointments. Of these ten, two will go overseas, one to India for study of language and as an evangelistic worker and one as dean of women to Trinidad to teach science to a girls' school. Eight of these graduates will work in Canada in a great variety of work, three or four in W.M.S. work in the Western provinces, and one in a new hospital area where no church has been established. Three others have been placed in self-supporting congregations as directors of Christian education, one to a large church in Montreal as the first woman worker of this congregation, one to Brampton as a worker for a church adjacent to a new housing area and one to Western Canada to Portage la Prairie as director of Christian Education.

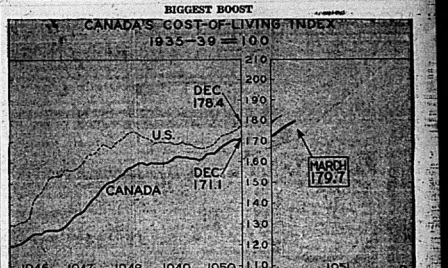
The above covers the scope of work being done by women in the church. These join with 22 who graduated last year, and eight of these graduates are doing an entirely different work than that represented by the year's class. Two for Indian work in B.C. There they represent church, school and hospital to these people. Three are in mission hospitals - in Saskatchewan and Manitoba and others to India and language study.

Thirteen As Teachers

Thirteen of the pupils this year are teachers — and they are well trained people. We could have placed 80 graduates. We cannot to have need for 100 trained workers next year. These workers have an opportunity to bring people to the certainty, love and hope within the Church. First they are ministering to people whom they teach. Second they help to make the church itself a strong warm fellowship.

There are also the school three overseas students — two Japanese Y.W.C.A. workers, one from Korea and one from Trinidad. Having these women with us is tremendously significant. We realize our own failures. The Korean student, Miss Kim, has been with us all through the three years of devastation in her own country. Three or four times her home city of Seoul has been bombed, evacuated destroyed and entered, but we have found that only recently we have heard of the safety of her family. They saved, first, the sewing machine, their means of livelihood, and a box of books, belonging to our student. One day when we were discussing the use of the atom bomb, Miss Kim said to me, "Where are the Christians of the world, why don't we hear protests being made?" True, money has been given for their relief, and supplies have been sent in, but we must still provide the answer "Where are we as Christians?—what are we doing to try to interpret to our young people what should be done for Korea?

Two-Year Term



The course at the training school is a two-year one for all except graduate nurses whose course is one year. The classes are taken at Emmanuel College, or some of them, because their course in Christian faith is similar to that taught there. Women who are going to work in Christian education must have a strong understanding of the Bible. They also study with women of the Anglican and Presbyterian schools on how to teach children of all ages, both on Sunday and midweek. Sociology is taught — so that social work may be done in the community, also public speaking and things which they are active in, such as handicraft and drama. Residence life is also part of the course. They are all eager for the training in their personality shall hinder them from being a Christian.

Miss Christie ran all of you will be hearing of a plan for a new school. There is now a school on St. George Street, the other building on Bedford Road. The dining room is in the St. George Street home and is headquarters. We are thus divided by a building on St. Clair was taken over by the R.C.A.F. during the war. Later it was given up by them and was sold to the Blue Cross. It was planned that we could eventually build a school on Bedford Road, Now we find it restricted and no school can be built there. We may at any time be asked to move. Our total accommodation now is 38.

Last year we had to rent a room down the street. We have now offered land at a nominal rental next to Burwash Hall and beside Victoria College. We have on hand approximately $200,000. A presentation was made to General Council last September and in April, May and June of 1952 a campaign is to be launched for funds for this purpose. It was endorsed by the Dominion Board at the W.M.S., in February last. The plan of the campaign is that this shall be undertaken within the church by the women of the church.

A national committee has been formed in Toronto with committees right down to each congregation, one member from W.M.S., one from W.A., and one representative of other church women. The National Board will meet this week to plan the committee, In the meantime interest your members in the work of the Christian church, tell them of it —because our students tell us it is the voice of one person who usually interests them in our school.

The beautiful flowers on the altar were placed by the Afternoon Auxiliary of Bridge Street United Church in loving memory of Miss Lazelle Brown, at one time a treasurer of Bay of Quinte Conference branch and an inspiration to all in missionary work.

Canada's cost-of-living index took the biggest jump in its history during February, rising 4.5 points to a record 179.7 as of March 1. Higher food costs were the main factor in the boost, although every sub-index showed an increase. The solid line represents the Canadian index, while the dotted line shows the U.S. Consumers' Price Index which stood at 181.5 on Jan. 15. WEDDINGS

THRASHER—SANDERCOCK

St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Wednesday, April 4, at 2:00 p.m., when Verna Grace Sandercock, of Trenton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Floyd Sandercock, became the bride of Edward Allen Thrasher, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thrasher. The Reverend A. S. McConnell, rector of the church, officiated before a background of ferns and white lilies.

The soloist was Mr. Ronald Elmy, of Belleville, who sang before the ceremony, "Because" and during the signing of the register, "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charmingly gowned in white Chantilly lace, featuring a fitted bodice buttoned to the waistline with Marie Antoinette collar, and long, tight-fitting sleeves ending in lily points over the wrists. The skirt was fairly full and fell gracefully into a train. Her fingertip veil of silk, tulle illusion was held by a matching Juliette cap, and she carried a white prayer book with mauve orchid and white streamers.

Miss Pearl Fox was maid of honor, becomingly attired in lime green taffeta with matching hat in poke-bonnet style and matching gloves. She carried a nosegay of yellow daffodils.

Miss Margaret Sandercock, sister bridesmaid, wore an orchid taffeta, with matching poke-bonnet hat and gloves. She carried a nosegay of variegated sweet-peas.

Little Barbara Ann Sandercock and Helen Gail Sandercock, sister of the bride, were attired alike in yellow taffeta, with matching pokebonnets and gloves, and carrying variegated nosegays of sweet-peas.

Mr. Eugene Carswell, of Trenton, was groomsman, and the ushers were: Mr. Bill Sandercock, of Trenton, brother of the bride, and Mr. Bruce Sword, of Belleville.

The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred of Wilson, Trent Road, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with daffodils, tulips and other spring flowers.

In the receiving line were the bride's mother, gowned in navy sheer, with navy and white accessories, and corsage of pink roses; the bridegroom's mother was gowned in black taffeta with navy accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride's table was daintily appointed with an Italian linen cutwork cloth, centred by a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a bride's basket filled with daffodils, white centre for the base of the cake was a fluff of white tulle, with scattered sweetpeas, flanked by tall, white, cathedral candles in silver holders.

The bride's table was placed west, the bride chose a deep copenhagen blue suit, with navy accessories, and salmon colored shortie coat with corsage of white gardenias. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher will reside at 97 Elmhurst Street, Trenton.

Out-of-town guests included, Mrs. S. Pender, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sandercock, also of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. J. Villeneuve Dekar, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of Picton, and Miss Greta Wray of Belleville.

Women's Activities

CHRIST CHURCH PARISH GUILD

The monthly meeting of the Christ Church Parish Guild was held on Tuesday in the Church hall.

After the usual business was attended to reports were submitted by Mrs. C. Bishop and members of committees.

The Scripture reading following, read by Mrs. Dinnett. Music and song by Mrs. Jordan was much aggreciated. President, Mrs. E. Hickey, then introduced Mrs. C. Colling, who gave an interesting explanation of suggested plans for the new interior of the hall. The kitchen plan on blackboard drawing, with illustrations of utilities greatly interested the members. Then followed discussion of the plan and a social tea.

Canon Creegan gave the blessing at the close of the meeting.

ANCIENT SYRUP

Kitchener, Ont. (CP)—Mrs. D. W. Ward is serving her family with clear, thin maple syrup made 17 years ago. The syrup is a clear amber with no sediment and its lasting high quality is attributed to the fact it was cleaned with milk after it was made.

Slim Silhouette at London Salon of Paris Designer

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—Paquin of Paris, showing his second London collection since the war, brought French haute couture to the doorstep of London's Mayfair.

Models shown in dressy gown and gilt vest and salon are drawn from the Paris display and make it possible for women to buy in Britain current models from the collection of a top Paris designer.

Typically French, the spring styles drew inspiration from the letter X. This is seen particularly in pencil-slim dresses with neat waistlines and wide skirt panels on both sides. Fitted bodices carry out the line by means of wide revers necklines filled by straight little vests.

Paquin also believes skirt fullness, however, the silhouette is essentially slim. Tailored suits are pencil-slim with neat jackets clinging to a narrow waist and buttoned on a half-hidden waistcoat of contrast color. Basques stand out sharply from the hips and the button-interest is given at the waist and on the pockets.

Many waistlines are in white pique sporting pretty jewelled buttons that match the tint but contrasting at the cuff pockets. Suit colors follow the London preference for stone, grey, rust, beige, black and navy.

Gowns Are Stately

In evening dresses, Paquin could challenge the finery and originality of Hartnell and Worth —two of London's foremost designers of exquisite embroidered ball gowns.

A full-skirted pink gown with strapless apron top is embroidered completely in silver beading, so minute it conveys every pattern in material. The dress is completed by the addition of two huge puff sleeves of white fox comprising a double strand of fur fastned by bands of pink.

A full, rustling dress of pink grosgrain, with wide shoulder straps and straight neckline, has embroidery running from waist to hips in pointed spears. This is repeated at the neckline.

An interesting evening coat is a red-tiered grosgrain lined with white and having short cap sleeves topped by huge winged white cuffs. It is worn over a square-necked dress of white chiffon intricately gathered and tucked.

The huge winged cuffs on short cap sleeves are a new fashion interest this year and are shown also on dresses and other ensembles. Mostly they are accentuated by white pique or embroidery.

Queen and Princess View Private Show Export Styles

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP)—Against a background of silver-grey panelled walls and magnificent crystal chandeliers, the Queen and Princess Margaret saw styles parallel London's finest export fashions.

A special preview, arranged at the Queen's request, showed 60 best-selling models from the recent collections of London's big ten of fashion.

Forty mannequins, four from the house of each designer, curtsyed gracefully in glowing ball gowns flashing with jewelled embroidery or bobbed stiltedly in pencil skirts that would scarcely allow a 6-inch knee.

Valuable Collection

The collection, valued at £6,000 ($18,000), and supported by jewellery costing £60,000, was shown in the old-fashioned Adams drawing-room of Warwick House, home of Lady Rotherwere, president of the Incorporated Society of London Dress Designers.

In turn, each of the leading designers sat with the Queen and Princess Margaret, explaining the technical details in the make-up of their own designs.

Ball gowns, suited to any royal occasion, formed the centre of the show, but a tailored Ascot ensemble so enchanted Princess Margaret she had the mannequin recalled. A design by Lachasse in cream lace over black taffeta, the lace overlaid with black chiffon, drew this comment from the Princess: "The effect is fascinating."

Latest in Crinoline

The Queen, with her love of crinolines, showed much interest in a camelia-red lace crinoline trimmed with bellflower bulbs, the work of Michael Sherard. The crinoline is built on nylon fishnet and is completely manoeuvreable. You can sit down in it, push it through a narrow doorway and even pack it into a suitcase.

Another dress that drew royal attention was a model in blue taffeta topped by a glittering jacket embroidered in paisley design. The embroidery alone cost £200 and incorporates the use of beneaths, a semi-precious stone mined in Cumberland, which much interested the Queen.

A startling change from the wide crinoline was a fish-tail model by Norman Hartnell in white Nottingham lace encrusted in silver, crystal and diamond embroidery. From a plain, softly-draped tulle bodice it falls in a figure-hugging sheath of embroidery like iridescent fish scales.

Also of fashion interest were the ensembles worn by the two royal visitors. The Queen wore an orchid-mauve two-piece ensemble with matching floral-trimmed hat in the new wide shelf-curved brim style.

Princess Margaret wore an ankle-length cocktail coat in royal blue velvet with a rippling skirt full enough for a Galashborough dancing.

MELROSE W.I.

The March meeting of the Melrose W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Sherry Demlin, with 20 members in attendance, and the president, Mrs. Jack McLaren, presiding.

During the business period, the secretary, Mrs. Clare Wesse, read several letters, one announcing Achievement Day for the Club Girls to be held in Stirling on April 21. All interested persons are welcome to attend. A letter regarding the scholarship fund for Club Girls was laid over till the next meeting.

Mrs. Badgley, secretary for the Blue Cross, explained the raising of the rates and asked all interested to attend to this before May 24th. Mrs. Hines and Mrs. Ken McMechan expressed their thanks for cards received. The purchasing of chairs for use in the community was also discussed.

Mrs. G. Hagerman, convener of Agriculture and Canadian Industry, took charge and an interesting program followed the business. She had chosen, "The Process of Time", was given by Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. Leslie McLaren gave a paper on "Let There be Light", in which she told of the different ways of lighting homes down through the centuries from the use of a piece of cloth dipped in a saucer of oil, to the modern electric lighting system.

Report Libraries in the United States, are still working on ways of improving the libraries use. Mrs. Leslie also gave a few hints on the sewing of nylon.

Community singing was enjoyed by all after which Mrs. Hagerman conducted a contest with Mrs. Milligan being the winner.

At the close of the meeting, the hostess and her assistants served refreshments.

Maritime Nurse Favorable of North

Moose Factory, (CP)—Irene (Fran) Mann nips sickness in the bud in the Indian settlements near this Hudson Bay post and the Indians love her.

This tall girl's job is to trek to lonely settlements on James Bay on missions of preventive health education.

She herself treats cases which aren't sufficiently serious to be removed to the big new Indian hospital here. A native of Campbellton, N.B., she also wages a continuous campaign to improve sanitary conditions.

Fran is a field nurse for the Indian Health Service of the Department of National Health and Welfare. She has been doing her job since the service was started 18 months ago.

Three times a week she is taken to the north end of the settlement by snowmobile. She works the rest of the way and back on foot; house by house. Another three days spent in calls to patients requiring regular treatment.

There is one call that she makes every day—to the Indian Residential school, where she keeps an eye on the welfare of more than 300 pupils. Temperatures frequently are taken, as are X-ray examinations for tuberculosis, the disease to which the Indian is most subject.

Fran moves through the village to the accompaniment of howling sleigh dogs, staked and chained before each home. Many are vicious, but they, too, have got to know her. She's never been bitten.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's "At the end of her rope"

When a person is driven to desperation by a problem he cannot solve; finds himself, as he's likely to put it, "at the end of his rope", what he means is that he has tried everything he can possibly think of to get out of his dilemma by himself, but without success.

It's then that he begins to ride frantically off in all directions, as the saying goes, searching for something that might be, or some one who might have, a new suggestion, an idea he hasn't tried, that might enable him once again to find his lost happiness.

Here is a wife who is still hunting for that new way out of an old marital tangle; who has not yet realized that if she has actually tried all the known remedies for a sick marriage, and found them long enough, she will have to re-arrange her life on the basis that the marriage is incurable.

She writes:

"I have been married to an army officer for fifteen years. We were married very young, so that both of us have many good years still ahead of us. Perhaps if this were not so, I might be able to realize some sort of acceptance, or at least endurance, of what has happened.

"But not too long ago, I discovered that my husband has been running around with other women, and it just about killed me. I loved him so very much.

"I suppose it makes me even more heartbroken and bitter now, because of how hard I worked for him during the last war, when he was overseas. Of course I was true to him. It would never have occurred to me to be anything else. Everything I did, or even thought, was with him in mind, and it made me happier right then and for the future. Worked to Supplement Income

"I got a job in a defense plant in order to supplement our income so that it would be possible for me to [illegible] mother as well as [illegible]. I never went anywhere that I could save money. I have a little extra fix up to spend when he came back. Except for a few clothes I bought so I could look pretty to welcome him home, I never spent anything on myself. I might add that after all the years since his return, those clothes are still the best I have to go anywhere in. Sitting up late night after night, after doing housework and taking care of our three children all day, I've remodelled them year after year to make them do another season. Why? Because he spends the money we have on other women.

"I love my children—yes, and my husband still, in spite of everything, though how long that will last, I don't know. Sometimes I think my love is slowly turning to hate. I've begged him and pleaded with him to give up the way he is living and be the kind of husband and father he ought to be, and once was, but he just laughs at me.

"Now, I'm at the end of the rope, and so confused I don't know what to do or where to turn. I thought perhaps you could give me a new angle on how to cope with the situation."

So there it is,—that plea for "a new angle". And what new angle can be suggested?

She has "begged and pleaded" with as a matter of cold and cruel fact, begging and pleading not only accomplish nothing in such situations but usually make things worse. For nearly always, shadow of excuse for spending his time away from home. Unless and until she is prepared to utter an ultimatum, she should take a vow of silence in regard to the subject at issue. That, in itself, has sometimes been known to make an erring husband stop and think; to wonder what she may be turning over in her mind that she isn't talking about.

And that, indeed, is exactly what she should be doing — turning over in her mind the alternatives open to her and trying to come to a decision as to which of them she will decide upon,—and not talking about any of it until she has her mind definitely made up.

As for those alternatives, all I can see are two. One is for her to accept the situation as it is, sticking it out for the sake of financial support, her child, a desperate hope that her husband may finally see the light, or whatever. The other is for her to pack up the children and leave; go to another city, get herself a job and start out to make a new life for the four of them.

What her choice actually narrows down to is whether she would rather stay forever dangling "at the end of her rope", or cut herself down, get on her feet and go places again.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Today's word. . . Telephone

The correct word is telephone (n.), the telephone (noun) or to telephone (v.). Do not gas phone, either as a noun or a verb.

Form of name woman uses when telephoning an acquaintance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have recently been married and I am trying to "get the hang of" using my new name correctly. Will you answer one question, please, that has bothered me several times lately? When I telephone to an acquaintance, what form of name should I use in introducing myself — "I am Mrs. Robinson" or "I am Mary Robinson?"

Reader

To an acquaintance, introduce yourself on the telephone as "I am Mary Robinson". It is not correct to say "I am Mrs Robinson" to an acquaintance on the telephone, whether the acquaintance's elder or younger, woman or man. (The only exceptions to this rule are when you are introducing yourself on the telephone to an unknown person, or when you are speaking to a child or to an employee or to a tradesman. Then it is natural, correct, to use the title, "I am Mrs. Robinson" or "This is Mrs. Robinson.")

She's excited . . . her fiance is to be a wedding usher

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance has been asked to usher at a friend's wedding. We are both excited about this, I more than he! (1) Just what are the financial obligations of an usher? I realize, of course, that we must buy a wedding gift, and that he must pay for the rental of a tuxedo, But outside of these two expenses, are we completely uninformed. For instance, should the usher buy the bouquet of the girl he is to walk with in the recessional? My cousin says 'yes' to this. (2) Who pays for the bachelor dinner given for the groom? (3) When the wedding party poses in the studio for the wedding photographs, would it be permissible for my fiance to have his photograph taken of himself alone, of course at his own expense?

Excited

(1) You have mentioned the only two expenses that are the "financial obligations" of an usher. . . (a) a wedding present to the bride-to-be, and (b) the expense of the attire he is to wear at the wedding. (You and he may send the wedding present together, if you wish.) An usher should not pay for the flowers. (He does not have to pay) for any of the flowers. The flowers for the bridal attendants should be provided by the bride's family.

(2) The bachelor dinner is given by the groom and paid for by him. It is given for the groom's attendants, best man and ushers, and often other friends are also invited.

(3) No; such a procedure would not be proper. And it wouldn't be sensible either, for your fiance would be taking valuable time and attention of the photographer, whereas he could have his photograph taken at some other time, even if this would mean that he had to pay for the rental of a tuxedo (if that's the idea for photograph-attire) for an hour or so.

How to. . . and how not to. . . eat an olive

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Just how should an olive be eaten (the usual green olive, not the stuffed olive)? One sees so many people who put the olive into the mouth and nibble the flesh off. How about this?

R. and T.

Definitely the green olive should not be put whole into the mouth. It should be held in the fingers, and the flesh bitten away until only the stone remains. Then the stone is put on the side of the bread-and-butter plate, or whatever plate or place is obviously suitable.

BEAUTY

Tall girls must be stately

The tall girl can make the best of her height.

"Don't tell me," said a five-feet-seven girl, "that it is grand to be tall and stately, like a lily, as the poet raved. I go to college. All the guys are seeking girls who look cute'. I am sick and tired of that expression. You hear it all the time. No fellow shorter than I am wants to take me to parties. Makes him appear ridiculous, as I can understand, especially when we are dancing. I am on a still search for a six-footer. No other type will qualify."

Nothing can be done about those extra inches. The elongated one has to make the best of her height, and she can. She must take extra care to keep to normal weight and measurements. Excessive thinness seems to make her look taller, and she certainly must not get into the heavyweight class. She must mind her diet, cutting down on sweets, fats and starches if she finds that she is starting to gain. If she maintains fine lines, slender walks and sits properly, and has grace of movement, she will be a more attractive picture than the cute little trick who has acquired the cream-puff shape and doesn't know how to carry herself.

Her special danger is the habit of stooping, hoping that that will make her look shorter. The youthful figure can be ruined by that practice. The shoulders will become rounded, the back will lack grace. The effect upon her health will be deplorable, as deep, normal breathing will be restricted.

More than any other type, she must give careful consideration to the kind of clothes she wears. There are little tricks that will make her appear shorter. The flat-top hair-do, of course, is her coiffure choice. The side parting, if becoming, will help. The size of her head should be in proportion to her body, and the arrangement of the hair has much to do with that.

The diagonally small hat seldom suits her. The almost-flat crown with the stylish brim is a happy choice.

The length of the skirt is important. At the present rule, fourteen inches from the ground, usually suits her. She need not have to be floor-length any more. She looked pretty terrible when the silk-thin, knee-length skirt was in vogue, but she had to go along with the style trends, as do we all.

Shoes can be found that are smart and have heels of medium height. The rounded neckline and the belt of a contrasting color contribute favorably to the picture because they offer cross lines. Plain fabrics make for tallness; figured ones seem to delete the inches.

PRINCE FLEW ALONE

General Improvement in Belleville Hospital Services Noted at Annual Meeting of Bd.

Editor's Note: A condensed report of Hospital Board of Governors' annual meeting was given in last Saturday's edition. Because of public interest in hospital affairs a more detailed report has been prepared giving more information on the institution's operations for the past year.

The annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital was held in the board room on Thursday last. Following a brief general monthly meeting the Chairman of the Board, Mr. W. B. Laithier, requested Mr. P. C. McGuire, Chairman of the Board for 1950, to address the meeting.

Mr. McGuire gave a brief address on the accomplishments saying that they would all be referred to in the ensuing reports of various committee chairmen and officers of the hospital. He expressed his confidence and appreciation in the officers and staff and recalled his weekly visits to the hospital as chairman in addition to the various meetings. He advised board members, should they have any misgivings as to the work being done in the hospital, to visit the children's ward and spend a little time as he had done, learning what benefits were offered the children, not only in the treatment of acute illness but the many other phases of feeding, health, teaching children to walk, eat, and methods of handling problems. Sometimes, in many instances, from homes unable to provide the necessary food and clothing.

Mr. McGuire made special references to the valuable contribution of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, emphasizing the variety of work and not only in the donating of oxygen tents and expensive equipment but also the personal efforts involved in remembering the friendless and needy by visits with presents both on Christmas Day and Easter Day. He recalled the pleasure expressed by the children's faces on Christmas morning upon receiving from the ladies a record player and appropriate children's records.

General Improvement

Mr. McGuire recorded his appreciation of the general improvement in the cleanliness of the hospital and said that he had made it his business during the year to visit particularly all parts of the institution including visits to patients to ascertain their comments upon their treatment, meals, etc. Generally speaking, he had received favourable comments. All complaints had been investigated and corrected where wherever possible. For example, the complaints of the plastic cups had been rectified by the acquisition of new china cups to match the other plastic dishes. In conclusion, Mr. McGuire extended his best wishes to the new chairman, Mr. Laithier, and also spoke with optimism toward the economic receivable committee of which he is chairman for 1951.

The Superintendent, Mr. H. W. Wakefield, presented his report, enlarging it to cover the changes since his appointment in September, 1946. He made reference to culmination of the efforts of the boards of 1948 and 1949 in the provision of a new power plant which had resulted in a much more efficient manner of keeping the building warm. The completion of the laundry, for which the hospital and community may well be proud, had not only effected a marked improvement in the linen services to patients, but had made space available for the centralized stores department, which the board of 1950 had planned and approved and which is now complete.

New X-Ray Equipment

Other departments so often forgotten, commented the superintendent, were well worthy of mention. For example, in June the X-ray department was removed after the installation of equipment costing the hospital $60,000.00. While this was quite a lot of money, when it is realized that over six thousand patients are depended each year upon this equipment for their diagnosis, the importance of proper facilities cannot be overlooked, Mr. Wakefield said. He referred to the splendid work of Mr. George Williams in the X-ray department and then went on to describe the installation of a department of physical therapy in June, under the supervision of a graduate physiotherapist, Miss Edith Aston of McGill University.

The superintendent ventured that anyone who had received massage or electrical treatment after injury would vouch for the value of this new department. Reference was made to the increasing volume of work in other departments such as the pharmacy, the medical records department, the urgent need for more space to accommodate the mentally ill adults and the limitations in the kitchens with regard to space and equipment. Little or nothing further can be done for the food service to patients, and the superintendent, until the kitchen is provided with adequate space and equipment for the serving of over eleven hundred meals daily.

9,000 In-Patients

He touched on the fact that some nine thousand in-patients had been admitted during 1950, the highest in the history of the hospital and with the overcrowding and rapid turnover of patients, changes in the food service equipment were essential to keep up the pace not only for routine feeding of patients and staff but for the increasing number of specially prepared diets now-a-days required by the doctors for their patients.

The maintenance and housekeeping also were subject to comment. When it is realized the superintendent said, that the hospital owns some $25,000 worth of high pressure sterilizing equipment, and in addition, electrically operated oxygen tents, suction equipment, gas, machines and many other pieces of intricate apparatus necessary for providing proper service to patients, adequate maintenance, oiling and repair were essential. Reference was also made to the older parts of the hospital of wooden lath construction requiring far more maintenance and fire precautions than a modern structure. "However," said Mr. Wakefield, "it will be found that what I have said before, that marble halls and stainless steel do not make a hospital and that a hospital is only as good as its medical treatment, its nursing care, its staff and the facilities it offers the doctors to enable their treatment of the sick."

Mr. Wakefield also drew attention to the urgent need for accommodation for the chronically ill not requiring acute hospitalization in a general hospital. He stressed the fact that adequate accommodation was provided for these patients the taxpayer was being saddled with unnecessary expense in having hospital beds used for the aged, infirm, and chronically ill who could be cared for in less expensive quarters.

Predicts Increased Costs

In concluding his report, the superintendent predicted increased costs in hospitals, but believed that saturation point had been reached in the ability of the public to pay and hoped that some further assistance was forthcoming from a governmental source. He expressed his appreciation to the board for the help and understanding he had been accorded in the numerous daily problems in managing the hospital.

Miss A. D. Potts, director of nursing, gave a report touching on the many aspects of the world wide shortage of nurses and defined also the functions of the nursing service not only in respect to nursing care at the bedside, and in the operating room and nurseries, but of the responsibility in the prevention of illness. Pointing out the rapid turnover of patients and the inability of people to afford convalescence, "it means that the great majority of patients are actually ill, requiring constant nursing care," said Miss Potts. Commenting on the value of non-professional help in her report, Miss Potts drew attention to the dangers of giving responsibility to non-graduates. To attract more nurses to our hospital Miss Potts made recommendations which included a 44-hour week, one month's vacation, a bonus for sick time allowance not used and improvement in living conditions.

Says Deposits Necessary

Mr. R. O. Benson, the hospital's new comptroller, presented a report on the accounting division commenting on the new measures instituted to ensure prompt and effective control of accounts. He stressed the need for ready money and the fact that a deposit from patients was necessary. If the hospital is expected to pay its indebtedness. The hospital, he served Mr. Benson, can only pay its accounts as promptly as it is paid by its guarantee insurance companies, Workmen's Compensation Board and other prepaid hospital insurance schemes.

Reporting to the board on the School of Nurses, the principal, Miss Margaret Allemang, outlined the number of graduates in the school, namely 57. Miss Allemang pointed out that it is not always clearly understood that the purpose of the school is not only that of preparing the student for the proper attitudes, nursing skills and the knowledge required for intelligent nursing care but also to prepare them for the examinations set by the provincial government's Department of Health. This cannot be fulfilled in a day, one year or three years, said Miss Allemang, and our training in all the branches of technical skill and our attempts to produce an awareness of responsibility towards the sick, can only be a groundwork for the years ahead. The recommendations of the school principal included an analysis of costs of the present system, the feasibility of instigating a shorter improved nursing course with payment to the student between the short course and graduation, and a settled budget for the operation of the school.

$60,000 Written Off

After receiving the reports of the executive officers of the hospital, the chairman called upon the chairman of the finance committee, Mr. R. C. Bailey, for his report. Mr. Bailey first tabled the annual audit report and read the auditor's comments, stating that the bank accounts had been verified and that the books of accounts were as at December 31, 1950, in order. The certified inventory was stated by the auditor both as to clerical accuracy and prices and found to be in order. Some $41,000 were written off as bad debts and charged to the statement of surplus and the operational statement shows a net expenditure of $19,160.00.

Commenting on the reorganization of the accounting department, Mr. Bailey stressed the need for centralization of the offices and spoke of plans for this which the property committee had at present considering. Although granted to the provincial government for the financial assistance received, the chairman of finance hoped that the new formula would be considered by the minister of health would be in view of the new by-laws some changes in staff organization will be instituted to bring the hospital into the new standardization of hospital medical staffs recommended recently by the Ontario Medical Association.

Much Assistance by Auxiliary

A review of the work of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary was presented by Mrs. W. C. Mikel showing that since its inception in 1938 some $30,000.00 had been raised and used for the purchase of X-ray equipment, oxygen tents, furnishings, electric food conveyors, invalid chairs, infant incubators and many other items. The Auxiliary is also giving financial assistance to certain student nurses who are experiencing financial difficulties in their training. Mrs. Mikel drew attention to their annual projects for raising money, mentioning the Opportunity Shop, fashion show, the Christmas dance and garden party.

In accepting all the reports, the chairman, Mr. Laithier, extended his appreciation of the work done by the committees and upon the motion of Mr. A. McLean Haig it was unanimously resolved that the superintendent have copies made of the reports and embody them in one complete report to be made available to members of the City Council, County Council and other interested parties, and that all recommendations be summarized for circulation by the board.

Under new business a letter was read from Mrs. Margaret Rous, Public Relations Administrator of the Ontario Women's Hospital Auxiliaries Association congratulating the board on the appointment of Mrs. W. C. Mikel as a governor of the hospital. She referred to the valuable work of Mrs. Mikel in the hospital field.

Decision Deferred

A discussion occurred upon the recommendation by the medical staff through Doctor Kennedy, of limiting the hours and number of visitors to the hospital. Doctor Kennedy said that the majority of the doctors felt that their patients were much less fatigued, had less fear in temperature and recovered more quickly when allowed to be quiet and that it had been noticed that since the recent ban on visitors in the influenza epidemic. The recommendation of the doctors was that visitors be allowed on two days during the week and on weekends and that only two visitors be allowed at one time. After considerable discussion it was decided that the matter, after further study, be brought back at the next regular meeting of the board.

Following the reading of the minutes, correspondence and the reading of accounts Mr. R. E. Maybee presented his report on the trip to the O.R.A.

Mr. Maybee gave a fine account of the various meetings he attended at the big convention and advised the Board of the results of a number of interviews he had with prospective teachers for the high school.

A large part of the meeting was taken up with a discussion of the High School area question which now appears to be coming to a head. The Board plans to attend the meeting at Bible Hall in Belleville, on April 9 at 7 p.m.

Miss Rose Neale was present to review the Board's report on the subject and to ascertain the feeling of the Board.

The Board wishes to make every effort to retain the High School in Deseronto.

CAMPBELLFORD

Town Council May Change Date of Election

Campbellford — The regular meeting of the Campbellford Town Council was held in the council chambers on Monday night. The question of changing the date of the municipal elections from New Years' Day to a more suitable date was discussed, and a report on this will be made at the next meeting.

Tax Collector J. C. Birmingham reported collections down about $2,000 compared to last year at the same period, but that collections were still good.

Mrs. Euphemia Hollings addressed council again demanding the town move a portion of sidewalk off her property. There has been much discussion regarding this between Mrs. Hollings and the council, and the matter was left up to the road and bridge committee for a report at the next meeting.

Sam Dalyard addressed council regarding installation of a sewer on a piece of property he purchased recently on Centre St. This year also left the road and bridge committee

$8,000 Still Needed

A request from the chairman of the Children's Aid Society for a grant to help furnish the new office building in Ford Hope was heard. He said the money would be used for the sole purpose of equipping the new office and beautifying the grounds. Dr. McKechnie of the Society also spoke to council, and told of the necessity of building a new office. He said $8,000 was still needed to complete the building.

Reeve R. J. Locke made a motion that this grant be taken into consideration along with other grants that are pending, when the new tax rate is struck.

On a motion by Councillor W. A. Kingston, the property committee will investigate all insurance carried on town property, and make a report and recommendation at the next meeting.

It is felt that insurance coverage on some property is not sufficient.

Will Lock Chambers

A motion by Reeve Locke to have the council chambers locked at all times when it is not in use was carried. The key to the chambers will be given to the town clerk, and parties using the chambers must get the key from him and return it to him. Small keys have been missed from the council for some time, and it is believed children playing in and out of the room during noon hour when it is unattended may have been the cause.

A motion was passed to have a by-law drawn up rescinding former by-laws placing a time limit on the construction of buildings on lots purchased from the town. It was felt that this in many cases was a hindrance to the property owner, and had forced much hardship on some, especially when men and materials were scarce.

A special meeting of council will be held on Saturday afternoon, April 14th, at 2 p.m., at which time the tax rate will be struck for the coming term.

MELROSE

Melrose — The Melrose W. I. held their March meeting at the home of Mrs. Sherry Demille on Thursday last.

Quite a number from here attended the Drama Festival at Gilead on Thursday evening. Although the local group did not carry off the cup, they deserve much credit for their efforts and the interest they have shown in this form of entertainment which brings enjoyment to so many.

Mrs. Alex McLaren is spending a few days with her niece, Mrs. Stirton Badgley(who is convalescing at a home following an operation in Belleville General Hospital.

The Embury families were in Toronto on Saturday attending the wedding of Mr. Lloyd Embury.

Rev. Mr. Scott spent the Sunday dinner hour with Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Sullivan.

The Y. P. U. meets this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McLean.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken McMechan entertained the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. John Kimmett, on Sunday.

Friends will be sorry to learn Mrs. John Blatherwick is again a patient in Belleville Hospital.

STUDENTS HAZED

Hempstead, N. Y., April 5 (AP) — Hofstra College authorities have cracked down on a student fraternity's right to pledge new members, as a result of the "rites and feathering" of initiates. The fraternity, Crown and Lance, is accused of smearing 15 pledges with molasses and cotton Tuesday night, then taking them to far-away places and leaving them to make their way back to the Long Island campus on foot.

Tractor Moved Out of Way To Steal Truck

Campbellford — "After moving a heavy farm tractor out of the way, a thief or thieves made off with a 1945 model Chevrolet half-ton pick-up truck from the rear of the mill and implement shop operated by Walter Jones on Queen Street.

The truck was not missed until the proprietor arrived at the mill about nine a. m. on Tuesday. A neighbor, Mrs. John Smith, heard the truck motor start up and the truck being driven away about 1:30 a. m., but had thought nothing was amiss.

Mr. Jones said the tank was almost full of gasoline, and with their seven and a half hour start, the thieves could be quite a distance away. The truck had been recently taken in on a deal and still had the name "M. Ray, Belleville" painted on the door. The keys had been left in the vehicle.

Police in neighboring municipalities have been asked to watch for the truck, a dark blue 1945 model, bearing licence C-58860.

Mrs. Ayrhart Dies

Mrs. J. E. Ayrhart and her infant son William and his nurse have returned from Clearwater Beach, Florida, after spending a month at the famous resort. All are sporting a healthy coat of tan, and Mrs. Ayrhart brought back as a souvenir, a large lemon weighing one pound, fourteen ounces, which she picked in one of the citrus groves. Mrs. Ayrhart is the wife of Campbellford's mayor.

Wanted for Forgery

Campbellford police are on the lookout for a man wanted for forgery, after receiving a call from the local branch of the Bank of Montreal Tuesday morning. A man walked into the bank and attempted to cash a cheque drawn on W. F. Scott, local cattle dealer, for $300.00.

The teller became suspicious of the signature on the cheque and left the room to telephone Mr. Scott. In the meantime, the man fled on foot. Chief Constable George H. Hardy and Provincial Constable Donald W. Erskine traced the man's movements to the outskirts of town, but there they lost track of him. He is still missing.

No one could remember ever having seen the man in Campbellford before, and bank officials said the signature was a poor imitation.

FILM COOLLY RECEIVED

Cannes, France, April 5. (Reuters)—A Canadian movie shown on the opening day of the Cannes film festival Wednesday was frigidly received by the critics. The Canadian effort, "Les Anciens Canadiens" a documentary dealing with French pioneers in Canada, raised barely a handclap.

Rev. A.E. Baker Gives Talk on 'Propaganda, Good and Bad'

The annual convention of the Ontario Temperance Federation for South Hastings was held in Tabernacle United Church on Tuesday afternoon and evening. Mr. Edgar Ray, vice chairman presided in the absence of the chairman, Rev. W. H. Barker, who some months ago moved from the area. Rev. C. W. Neelands, of Sidney, conducted devotions in the afternoon and Rev. W. R. Merrick, of Carrollton, in the evening.

A round table conference was conducted by Rev. D. C. McLeland, field secretary of the federation in the afternoon. This proved to be instructive and interesting as it gave the delegates the opportunity of asking and discussing any questions they saw fit to raise. This was followed by a stimulating and thought provoking address given by Rev. A. E. Baker, of Stirling, who emphasized the place of propaganda and the use of leaven.

Offset Bad With Good

Mr. Baker stated that, in his opinion, the way to meet bad propaganda—was with good propaganda. He said, "When the forces of evil and especially the liquor traffic use every conceivable means of advertising their wares and of keeping their products before the public, including special emphasis upon means that would attract the attention of children and youth, the thing for the Christian and the church to do was to meet such effort, with equivalent propaganda that would be equally attractive to children and youth, and that would eventually offset the evil effects of such presentations. Mr. Baker said, "If such a course is diligently and intelligently followed and if Christians are alert and responsive, great good can be accomplished."

Mr. Baker urged special attention be given to children by parents and church and public school teachers in the home. He emphasized the value of visual aids such as films. He also stressed the value of individual contracts.

He said, "Abstainers should be potential leaven in their respective communities, ever remembering that the liquor traffic can be made to appear respectable as the result of propaganda."

In his address in the evening Rev. D. C. McLeland counselled total abstinence in a practical way and from a common sense point of view. He said as his basis of reasoning the text, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

In Jesus—Righteous Living

Mr. McLeland said, "When men get the roots of their lives in Jesus the result will be righteous living. Them they will not want to drink." The speaker emphasized faith, but said "faith is not enough" "virtue" said "is not enough". Knowledge is essential. The Christian is always a step ahead of other people. He urged his listeners to choose from life what Jesus would choose and stated, "when I commit to drinking, what would Jesus do?"

A film, "The Street of Lost Hope" brought the convention to a close.

Leiland, Rev. A. E. Baker, the Courtesies to Rev. P. C. Mcglurch board, the minister, the organist and the ladies were read by Rev. J. F. Everson, who also submitted the following resolutions which were unanimously passed by the convention.

Temperance Resolution

1. "In view of the fact that it is necessary to keep the public informed as to the work of the Temperance Federation we wish to congratulate the editor and promoters of the Temperance Advocate and would strongly urge our people to subscribe for it.

2. "In view of the constant temptation to drink to which our young people are continually exposed, we recommend that ministers parents and Sunday School teachers constantly teach the value of total abstinence.

3. "In view of the continual effort of the liquor traffic to open new outlets almost everywhere we urge all voters to consider seriously the signing of petitions supporting liquor sales"

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

President, Mr. Edgar Ray, Sidney; 1st vice, Rev. C. A. Pulten, Trenton; 2nd vice, Rev. J. Fred Lane, Madoc; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Harry E. Bowen, R.R. 3, Stirling.

NO TRACE OF WOMAN

North Bay, April 5. (CP)— Police said today that no trace has been found of Mrs. Edward (Lilian) Pilon, 22-year-old North Bay mother of twins, who disappeared last Saturday.

They said that pictures and description of the blonde, comely Kirkland Lake native will be circulated to police departments throughout Ontario.

Chinese Leader Recently Made Trip to Moscow

Paris, April 5. (AP)—Confirmation has been received in Paris that the Chinese communist leader, Mao Tze-Tung, has recently been in Moscow, a French foreign ministry spokesman said today.

"We do not know just what Mao asked for," said the official, "but our reports are that he was in the Soviet capital for some days to talk about the Korean war."

The official said that despite the reports of Mao's Moscow trip, active Russian participation in the Korean war at this time is being discounted here.

He added, however, that credit is being given to reports that the Chinese communists have asked for more Soviet aid in the Korean conflict.

TINY TOTS ARE LIFE-SAVERS

Two small citizens of Atlanta, Ga., ages three and four, are credited with two remarkable rescue feats. Lewis Talmadge Glosson, age three, took charge like a veteran when his mother fainted in their home. He pulled his baby chair up to the kitchen sink, filled a cup with water, then climbed down, as shown left, washed his mother's face before calling in neighbors. Right, Alton Lyon, aged four, was alone with his 230-pound father, who decided to take a hot bath to relax when he was stricken with a heart attack in the tub. Alton happened to look into the bathroom just as his dad slipped under the water. Without hesitation, the boy pulled the plug and drained the tub. When his mother returned, she found her husband recovering from the attack. He couldn't remember what happened, but Alton did. — Central Press Canadian.

Book on Standard of Living 130 Years Ago Stirs up Lively Controversy

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 5 — (CP) — A new twist on an old party linghas resulted in some breathless research on what things were like in Britain 130 years ago.

Prime Minister Attlee started it last Saturday night. He said in a political broadcast he had just been reading a new book by Arthur Bryant, "The Age of Elegance." It dealt with the period before and after Waterloo.

Attlee quoted the book as referring to distress and unemployment in Britain after 1815. The author said that because of its blind acceptance of false economic doctrines the Conservative government of that time allowed this misery to exist.

One of the arguments of post-war Britain is whether the country is better off than it used to be.

By now, the subject has been pretty well explored. But nobody before has gone back to the Napoleonic era, and unfriendly newspapers raced to the library to reveal up some counter-claims.

The Daily Mail, always a lusty critic of the government, came out with a front-page editorial. In it the Mail admitted things were pretty bad in the early days of the industrial revolution, but said "Mr. Bryant himself acknowledged in his book that the manufacturing men who caused so much suffering mostly came from the ranks of the workers.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, equally hostile to the Attlee administration, chided the prime minister for saying the general level of well-being is higher in Britain today than ever.

It turned to page 154 of "The Age of Elegance" and quoted from the budget of a Leicester wool comber in 1795. The wool comber earned enough to buy every week 10 pounds of meat, 2 pounds of butter, 3½ pounds of cheese, about 19 pints of milk, and so on.

The wool combers diet sounds convincing enough in this age of austerity, but the argument was not over. The Liberal Manchester Guardian rapped both the Express and the Mail, saying Bryant's statistics came from a book published in 1797. Turn to page 228 of THAT book, the Guardian said, and it would be seen that the wool comber actually earned about nine shillings a week; his oldest boy, a bricklayer's helper, drew about £8 a year. The family spent more than it earned and, the Guardian editorial added probably made up the difference from parish relief.

Lastly, the Liberal newspaper refused to draw any political conclusions.

"Not that this proves anything either for or against the Labor government; but we might as well keep the record straight."

Build Up Your System With Syntona Compound

Be Able to Eat Heartily; To Sleep Soundly; End Dizzy Feeling, Headaches, Poor Digestion, Nervous, Tired, Rundown Feeling.

If you feel tired, wornout and nervous; if bowels are constipated and you suffer from indigestion, gas, sour, upset stomach and rheumatic pains if you have dizzy spells, headaches and nerves are on edge so you cannot get sound, restful sleep — take a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound, the medicine which has helped thousands of men and women suffering this same way. You, too, may find this medicine to be just what you need to make you feel like yourself again.

Here, for example, is the recent experience of Mrs. Mary Oliver, 346 King Street, Ingersoll, Ontario, who said:

"For a long time I suffered with stomach disease and my entire system was run-down. Although I had a very poor appetite, what little I ate would cause gas to form in my stomach and sour and cause other upsets. I was subject to sick headaches and other spells with dark specks floating before my eyes. Very bad rheumatic pains usually settled in my hands, joints and muscles and my fatigued and wornout.

"A friend's favorable letter setting of the good results Syntona gave that friend with the same troubles prompted me to tell my friends about it also. It has cleared up all the gas distress and sour acid-ity so that I can eat heartily and enjoy every meal. I am not troubled with headaches at all now, the rheumatic pains are practically all gone, my fatigue has left me and I sleep through the night. Even my complexion is wonderfully improved and I can do my work without bothering tired, with the least effort as I did before.

"Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at I. M. Asselstine Drug Store, 257 Front Street."

FRANCE NOT

tween Europe and America, a bond among the peoples united by the same civilization and by the same desire and anxiety, to protect that civilization.

"If the aggressors of 1914 and 1939 had known that France was not alone, that Europe was not alone, they would have retreated from the criminal folly of their enterprise," said Mr. Auriol. "History is the witness: solidarity in defence is a token of peace.

"France wants neither war nor servitude. Her sole aim is peace in justice and freedom. It is for common defence, but also for common prosperity that France strives to create a United Europe, to build a young and cohered federation.

Army First Link

"In the military field, a European army that will be integrated into the Atlantic bloc is the first link of collective security. In the economic and social field, the free association of productive forces, of which the Schuman plan is the first step — one has to organize collective prosperity . . .

France wants a democratic Europe, not created through the subordination of some nations to another, but through fruitful harmony. This free Europe would associate itself with the new world so that upon international economic and political co-operation enduring peace might be built.

"Let us not cease to proclaim the right and the principles or an enduring peace, but let us judge the sincerity of our partners by their acts and by their actual contribution to the easing of the international tension.

"France is not giving herself up to any passive neutralism, and whatever sacrifices our rearmament efforts add to our already crushing burdens for rehabilitation and re-equipment, we know that no sacrifice is as heavy as that of liberty."

ROSENBURG

Court characterized the espionage activities of the Rosenbergs as "a dirty business—betrayal of one's own country."

Judge Kaufman set sentencing of Greenglass for 2 p. m. tomorrow.

As the Judge told the Rosenbergs they "made a mockery of the denial of God and the denial of the sanctity of the individual," the bells of a nearby church tolled the noon hour.

No Sign of Emotion

Neither Rosenberg nor his wife betrayed any outward sign of emotion when the extreme penalty was announced.

The court said the trial "indicates quite clearly" that an enemy nation is employing "secret as well as outspoken forces among our own people."

Judge Kaufman told Sobell there was "no doubt about your guilt" but added it was of a "lesser degree."

"While it may be gratuitous on my part at this point, I note my recommendation against 'parole,' he said.

PAY INCREASE

"I felt it was held back so that no responsibility would be placed on the government," said Mr. Grumbell.

Will Receive $4,100

The committee recommended an $1,100 boost from $3,000 to $3,000 in the members sessional indemnity and a boost from $1,000 to $1,500 in expenses. It also said they should be paid for four trips a year to Toronto, instead of one. Also recommended was a return to the voluntary $2,000 reduction in salary accepted by cabinet ministers during Premier Hepburn's administration and continued since then. The report said the sum should be returned to $10,000 from $8,000.

It also recommended that the Speaker's indemnity and expenses be increased. He now receives $5,500 above his pay as a member. The committee recommended that he be paid a $3,000 salary and expenses of $2,000 above his pay as a member.

Full Time Job

The committee report noted that expansion of government duties made membership in the legislature "practically a full-time occupation."

It also noted "the desirability of making it possible for citizens to become candidates for election, even though they may not possess sufficient private means to enable them to devote full time to their duties of the legislature."

WAS NOT BEE STING

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, APRIL 5, 1951

Liberal Starts Lively Debate By Demand Attorney-General Withdraw From Crime Probe

Toronto, April 5 — (CP) Campbell Calder, soft-spoken Liberal member for London, stirred up a tempest in the Ontario Legislature last night and it didn't subside until another member rescinded participants that the whole argument was out of order.

Mr. Calder suggested it was improper that Attorney - General Porter should lead the legislative committee which is to investigate administration of criminal justice in Ontario.

"Having regard for his almost-judicial office, the Attorney-General should not be a member, let alone chairman, of the committee," said Mr. Calder. He would be in the unusual position of investigating his own department.

The suggestion that Mr. Porter withdraw from the position brought immediate sharply-worded replies from the Attorney-General and Premier Frost.

"As head of the Attorney-General, I am to be the man to be chairman of the committee to investigate the administration of justice," said Mr. Porter.

He objected to Mr. Calder to "stop these veiled insinuations" and say so if he thought the Attorney-General was "not fit" for the job.

Premier Frost accused Mr. Calder of making "a lot of slimy insinuations." He described the speech as a "cowardly exhibition" and said Mr. Calder was "getting down in the gutter."

Should Be Witness Claim

Mr. Calder said that rather than being chairman of the committee, Mr. Porter might more properly be called as a witness. He contended that the selection of the Attorney-General as its head had been done "so blandly and quietly" that opposition members had not realized the significance.

Justice Minister Garson would not make himself chairman of a committee to investigate administration of federal justice.

Mr. Calder said, "I can see Mr. Duplessis as Attorney-General of Quebec doing that sort of thing."

The debate ended abruptly when G. I. Harvey (CCF-Sault Ste. Marie) reminded members that they were out of order since membership of the committee had been decided by the legislature and nothing could change it.

The sharp exchange livened the budget debate as the House held another night sitting in the drive for prorogation.

A morning sitting was scheduled for today at which A. W. Downer (PC—Dufferin-Simcoe) and Farquhar Oliver, Liberal House leader, were expected to deliver budget debate addresses.

E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. and official opposition leader, and Premier Frost wind up the debate, clearing the way for vote on a C.C.F. non-confidence motion.

Then after passing remaining legislation the House will prorogue.

Five Bills Passed

In a rush to clear the order paper for prorogation today, the legislature was given final second reading to five bills and hustled 14 bills through committee stage to prepare them for final reading today.

Among bills given reading were the government's rent control legislation and a bill to launch controversial changes in the province's rural telephone systems under direction of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

An amendment to the farm products marketing act permitting establishment of pooled or average prices for regulated farm products was put through committee stage without debate, as were two bills revamping election procedures.

Two private members' bills dealing with traffic laws — both directed to increasing safety for school children — were defeated on recorded votes of 42 to 33.

Election Forecast

A provincial general election this year was suggested by two members during debate on a government bill to establish a nine-member advisory board to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The bill was approved in principle.

Farquhar Oliver, Liberal house leader, and A. A. MacLeod (Lab.-Prog.—Toronto Bellwoods), termed the bill "window dressing."

The bill was the first measure paralleled legislation passed in 1947 under the then premier, George Drew, which had never been put into effect. That act provided for appointment of five new members to the Hydro Commission.

Mr. Oliver said the bill was "brought from among the mothballs to serve a particular purpose at a particular time on the eve of an impending general election."

Premier Frost said the government fully intended to put the bill into effect.

Given Final Reading

The government's bill to ensure against employment discrimination was given final reading earlier yesterday in a parliamentary dispute that cut across the labor-minded CCF opposition in the position of voting against it.

The dispute arose following a recorded vote on a motion by Mr. Calder that the bill shouldn't be given third reading. He wanted it referred back to committee and amended to provide for equality in all employment terms between men and women.

The motion was defeated 43 to 23, with the CCF voting with the Liberal group. Mr. Jolliffe immediately asked that a recorded vote be taken on the bill itself.

"Members must be allowed to make their position clear," he said. "Some may want to vote for the bill, as well as for the amendment."

The speaker ruled, however, that defeat of the motion meant that the bill was carried. He said he would review his decision and explain it further today. Premier Frost said he would decide then on Mr. Jolliffe's request that the House give its unanimous consent to having a recorded vote on the measure.

Mr. Frost said it was "positively unthinkable" to extend the bill to cover jobs completed relationships of men and women in employment. He would mean that an employer could not give job preference to a family man if a single woman applied for the job first.

A government bill to ensure women equal wages as men doing the same work in any establishment had already been passed and the government could go no further.

MacArthur Feels Politicians Are Stopping Progess

London, April 5. (Reuters)—The Daily Telegraph said today that Gen. MacArthur feels politicians are hampering allied progress in Korea.

Lt.-Gen. H. G. Martin, the Telegraph military correspondent, reported that MacArthur, in an informal talk in Tokyo, told them the United Nations could defend the Chinese communists easily enough—if the politicians would "take the wraps off".

Meanwhile, the supreme commander was quoted as saying, his forces were "circumscribed by a web of artificial conditions".

Apparently referring to recent pronouncements about the advisability of changing the battle parallel, MacArthur said it was not the soldier who was exceeding on the politician's field. Martin reported from Hong Kong. It was the politician who was encroaching on the soldier.

For the first time in his military career, MacArthur was quoted as saying, he found himself in a war without a definite objective. The true objective of a military commander was to destroy the enemy forces—but in Korea this was not so.

Allies Expect Reds to Launch Major Offensive

An allied headquarters, Korea, April 5.—(AP)—Allied commanders expect the communists to launch a major offensive in Korea any day now.

All signs point to it.

But allied commanders aren't waiting for the communists to strike. Strong forces have crashed across the border into north Korea at several points along a 40-mile stretch of the front. They are driving straight for the rugged central Korean terrain where the communists are massing their armies.

The evidence of a massing red army:

1. Sixteen red army corps—46 divisions with 350,000 men—are concentrated behind the western and central Korean fronts.

2. Gen. MacArthur has reported the reds have a total of 63 divisions—441,000 men—which they can throw into action at once.

3. The Chinese obviously know the sprawling rainy season will bog down the eighth army's machine-based warfare. The spring rains will cut the striking power of allied planes and give the swarming communist infantry its best break of the war.

4. Persistent reports say the reds will throw large numbers of planes into action. Air observers have spotted widespread airstrip building in north Korea.

5. The allies' approach to the sensitive communist army supply areas around Kaesong, northwest of Seoul, and near Kumhwa, north of Chunchon, is certain to arouse the reds.

6. The reds have new, shorter and less-vulnerable supply lines from Manchuria. This is the penalty the allies pay for confining the war to north Korea and treating the Yalu River as an invioable boundary. The reds become stronger every time they are forced to retreat toward their supply bases.

FREIGHTER SINKS

Tokyo, April 5 (AP) — Kyodo news agency reported today that one Japanese crew member was killed, four are missing and 41 were rescued last night when the 2,218-ton freighter Hachiro Maru sank after being rammed by the American freighter Tulane Victory. The Tulane Victory suffered damage to her bow but none of the crew was injured.

Thief on Bicycle Stole Priceless Pearl Necklace

Rome, April 5—(Reuters)—A thief on a bicycle stole a priceless pearl necklace and other jewelry last night from Princess Elisabetta Colonna, of one of Italy's oldest families.

Eye-witnesses said they saw a well-dressed middle-aged man snatch a bag containing the jewelry from the princess' car. Then he jumped on a bicycle and escaped.

The princess told police that the necklace was given to the family by King Louis XIV of France in the 18th century.

The princess had left the bag in her car in the centre of Rome while she called for help to change a flat tire.

In another event in Italy's crime "cycle," police on bicycles gave chase last night to a truck travelling without lights on a lonely road near Milan.

They did not catch it—but got a roadside haul of illegal arms.

They heard the truck stop in the darkness ahead of them. They pedalled furiously, but could not catch up before it moved off.

On the roadside they found cases containing automatic rifles, pistols and several hundred rounds of ammunition.

This was the latest of a series of discoveries of arms all over the country. They are said by the government to have been hidden by the communists.

PICKED UP AGAIN

Oshawa, April 5. (CP)—Two men arrested and later released "for lack of evidence" were picked up again by police Wednesday in connection with an attempted robbery early Sunday of an Oshawa foundry.

Harry Swain, 25, and Joseph Levy, 27, both of Toronto were charged with assault with intent to rob.

Provincial police said they are still hunting for other men connected with the unsuccessful attempt to steal $10,000 worth of slicked ingots from the foundry.

KILLED BY FLOATING MINES

Tokyo, April 5 (AP) — Floating mines, presumed from North Korea, killed 63 persons, injured 500 and damaged 2,000 homes along Japan's coast in the last four months, the Japanese Maritime Board announced today. Forty-three mines washed onto Japan's shores between December and March, Many exploded.

The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Ruit

Edd Frey's eyes searched Jeff Frey's face. He wanted both to sympathize with his uncomfortable position and to punish him. Suddenly sympathy got the upper hand. Jeff was weak, but he was her brother. Against a strong dominant personality like Northcott, he would have little chance. "Listen, Jeff," she said slowly, "you aren't the family head. You have just been worked into a corner. You say you can't make up your mind. Well, I'll make it up for you. You're not Jeff Frey, going to sell one single share of your stock to Lewis Northcott—or to anyone else."

He blinked at her. Then, as if to save face, he took refuge in futile bluster. "That's for me to say, isn't it? After all, I've got a perfect legal right to—"

"It isn't," cut in Edd, "a question of legal rights. It's a case of whether you're going to be a man and Father—down. And you're not going to do it, Jeff. I'll fight you every inch of the way. I don't know what Northcott's potential you in this proposed new order in the agency. But, whatever it is, it will never come off. There isn't going to be any new order. If worse comes to the worst, I'll throw Northcott and his account out altogether. I mean it, Jeff."

"Don't get you, Jeff," Myron said. "And she's right, you know. He gave in then, slinging up both arms in a helpless gesture. "What can I do? You're both set against me. All right. You win. They'll raise the dickens, but I guess I can take it."

"They?" Edd said suddenly. "You've been referring to 'They' and 'Them' a lot lately. Who's this with Northcott, Jeff?"

Jeff looked at Myron and Myron nodded. He turned back to Edd, a reluctant expression on his face.

"All right," he said. "Remember, you asked for it! The plan was that if I sold my shares, they would be bought by Gil Summerfield."

It had come like a terrific blinding blow, stunning her, rendering her practically powerless to think. Even as she rode down to the agency the next morning, Edd still felt numbed and shocked. Gil Summerfield? Herself smiling, rather indolent Gil, whom she had come to look upon as perhaps her best friend, conniving behind her back?

And yet knowing how her father had felt and how she felt, Gil had entered into collusion with Lewis Northcott. And for what purpose? Surely not to make money. Gil Summerfield was almost fabulously rich. There were people who could never get enough of money, and power. But Gil Summerfield? She shook her head.

Feeling suddenly she thought again of the weekend just passed, and of Lewis Northcott. It was now crystal clear that Northcott did not do things without reason. Definitely he had invited her on the cruise with an ulterior motive in mind. Way had Dan Regan been invited as well?

The thought seemed to clear Edd's brain, set it to working again, swiftly, normally. She arose, went down the corridor to Reagan's office.

He was sitting at his desk, his head shoulders bent over it.

"Dan," she said abruptly, "where were you in Lewis Northcott's plans?"

Reagan started. "I don't know that I follow," he said.

And then he stopped. It was useless to try to pretend, or evade under the hard bright searchlights of Edd's eyes.

"I see," Edd said coldly, "that you knew he had—plans."

He nodded slowly. "Yes, I knew that."

"I suppose," said Edd, "when Northcott took over Frey and Company you were to have the same job, but at a higher salary?"

Reagan's eyes dropped to the desk pad. "You seem to know everything. How did you find out about all this?"

"From Northcott himself. But that's neither here nor there. The point is that you and Jeff—Jeff and Myron all knew that Northcott was trying to get this agency. You all knew how my father would have felt about a thing like that and how I feel about it. But not one of you—not even Myron who turned Northcott down cold—had the decency or the—the loyalty to come to me about it." She laughed, a short hard laugh.

Reagan drew a breath. "There isn't much I can say for myself," he said, in a low voice. "Except that, well I guess it isn't worth saying."

"Whatever it is," Edd said recklessly, "I'd like to hear it. It might, just possibly, make me feel better."

Reagan braced himself. "I see you've been over and you're absolutely wrong. The way I feel about—about business and things like that hasn't a single thing to do with the way I feel about you. God knows I've made that clear enough. But I thought of something else, too. You—this is kind of hard to say—but you aren't sure how long you want to go on in this business, that's all. And if what I hope is going to happen does happen, we—we'd be all set. At least, I'd be in a better position to—to—"

Edd said gently, "I understand a good deal more than you think I do, Dan. And I don't blame you very much. You'd naturally have a different outlook."

Reagan raised troubled blue eyes, said rather awkwardly, "well, where do we go from here?"

"I know exactly where I'm going from here," Edd said evenly.

He managed a smile. "I don't know that I get you, now."

"I don't either, Dan," said Edd and left him to figure it out.

Edd went out of the office to the street below. She hailed a taxi. She had purposely postponed this expedition until the middle of the morning when she'd had more time to think; when she felt quieter; when that queer red anger was dying out of her brain to be replaced slowly by cold resentment. She thought now that she could do what she had to do with dignity, without losing self-control.

The taxi driver drew up before an apartment house in the East Sixties, grinned broadly at the size of his tip. Edd got out and spoke briefly to the uniformed doorman.

"You don't need to phone up," she said. "I'm expected."

The doorman hesitated, but she cowed him with a look and marched straight into the elevator. She wanted to give no warning of this visit. The elevator whisked her aloft.

Before the door of an apartment Edd stopped, rang the bell, and waited, tapping her foot impatiently. The door was opened by a manservant.

"Is Mr. Summerfield at home?" Edd asked peremptorily.

"Why—er—" began the manservant.

"I see he is," said Edd. "Tell him Miss Frey is calling please."

Gil didn't keep her waiting. He came hurrying into the living room, a look of astonishment on his face. He was dressed in a black velvet house coat and the eternal cigaret was between the fingers of his right hand.

"Edd," he said, crossing to her swiftly. "This is a surprise. But a very pleasant one. What's up? Nothing wrong, I hope."

"Yes, Gil," She heard her voice very low. "Something is wrong. But about as wrong as it possibly could be."

"If there's anything I can do—" Gil began, but she checked him with a movement of her hand.

"I think you've done all you could do, Gil. Of course"— in spite of herself sarcasm edged her tone—"I may underestimate you. I certainly did in the past. You're really quite astute. You demonstrated that when you became Lewis Northcott's silent partner."

"Oh!" said Gil. "So that's it." "Yes, that's it," she said furiously. "And its enough I should hope. I must say that you were very smooth about it, Gil. You knew I'd always considered you a friend, so it was easy for you to trade on that when you came back to New York, wasn't it? Easy for you to pay a lot of attention to me and get me to—to confide in you about things to do with the agency. And you succeeded, you were working with Northcott to get the agency away from me."

"For Heaven's sake, Edd—" Gil lamost shouted, his mouth twisted queerly.

But he had no chance. Words were cascading like a torrent from between her tight lips. "Yes I see it all now. You knew that Jeff was the weak spot and the two of you, you and Northcott hammered at him. You both saw, I suppose, a beautiful opportunity to make a lot of money when my father died and left me, an inexperienced woman, in charge of the business. Why you were willing to pay so much for it, I'll never know. But that's immaterial. The point is you tried to take advantage of my friendship. And I'll never forgive you, Gil Summerfield. Never."

Gil was looking at her steadily But she was too angry to see the crushed, taken expression in his dark eyes.

"You're right about one thing, at least," he said. "I did see a chance to make some money."

She flared out at him again. "You've even got the—the audacity to admit it. And you haven't got the decency to say you're sorry. I don't suppose you are, though. You're a playboy, Gil, just as you once said you were. And a playboy is always too rich and selfish to consider anyone but himself."

"You're not thinking straight," he said. "Aren't you?" Her voice sank dangerously. "I'm thinking very straight about one thing, anyhow Gil. That's that I've blocked you, you and Lewis Northcott. You won't get what you wanted. You will never get it. The tricky underhanded deal you tried to make with Jeff isn't coming off. And another thing! You left Northcott's boat pretty suddenly last Sunday, didn't you? Well, I know why you left it. You were afraid certain things would come out and you couldn't face me. You couldn't—couldn't take it. So you sneaked away and left Northcott to try and put the—the dirty work across." She laughed bitterly. "Oh, you're a precious pair all right. But of the two of you, I prefer Northcott."

Gil Summerfield simply stared at her. His shoulders seemed to sag. Then, all at once, he turned, walked to a desk and extracted an envelope from a pigeonhole.

"This," he said, in a barely audible voice, "belongs to you."

But the last vestige of Edd's self control was gone. She snatched the envelope, tore it in two, and threw the pieces in Gil's face.

"I don't know what it is," she cried, "and I don't want to know. All I know is that I'm glad, very glad, that I gave myself the luxury of telling you exactly what I think of you. And that's all I have to say. Except that"— her eyes, green slits seemed to rake him—"that I hope I never see you again, Gil Summerfield. As long as I live."

Summerfield, his face a kind of confused blank put out a hand toward her. His lips moved, but no words seemed to come from them. For a second Edd looked at him contemptuously. Then she swung on her heel, walked out of the apartment.

"Look," said Dan Reagan, his big jaw thrust out, "I know when I'm licked. It was three days after Edd's first interview about the Northcott deal.

"Go on, then. Edd's face was a little grim, reflecting perfectly her mood of the last three days.

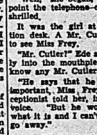
"Well," Reagan spoke with an effort, "I've been thinking things over and I was wrong, that's all. I let myself get carried away. And it was rotten of me even to consider that offer, after everything your father did for me."

Edd said nothing.

"And so I'm asking you to forget it," Reagan went on. "As much as you can. I want you to go on here, doing just what I've always done, as if all this hadn't happened. I know it's a lot to expect but . . . well, that's the way I want it."

Edd tapped her knuckles with a pencil. She was thinking of something her father had said about Reagan, something to the effect that Reagan was the best man in the agency, valuable. It seemed, in the light of what had happened, a cold calculating reason for granting Reagan's request. Then, suddenly, she shrugged. Business, no matter how you looked at it was a cold proposition. Heaven knew she had learned that much in the last few days. Perhaps it was better to reason coldly to shake the last vestiges of stardust out of one's eyes.

"Well," she began, and at that point the telephone—on her desk shrilled.



It was the girl at the reception desk. A Mr. Cutler desired to see Miss Frey.

"Mr. Cutler?" Edd said curiously into the mouthpiece. "I don't know any Mr. Cutler."

"He says that he thinks it's important, Miss Frey," the receptionist told her, in a muffled voice. "But he won't tell me what it is and I can't get him to go away."

The Canadian Family owes much to . . . Holland

A Tribute from Calvert to Canadians of Dutch Descent

SETTLERS from almost every country in the world have come to Canada, the land of opportunity, during the last two centuries. Much of our strength and vitality comes from this blending of racial and cultural heritages.

Canadians are justifiably proud that so many races, without sacrificing their national characteristics, have united themselves into one great citizenship — the Canadian Family.

Dutch settlers and their descendants have left an indelible mark on the pages of Canada's history. The name Van Horne is synonymous with railroads while Kreighoff, Panabaker and Lampman are known and respected in Canadian art and literature.

The Dutch are a devout, thrifty and industrious people and, among other things, their model dairy and cattle-breeding farms have contributed much to Canada's progress.

Joe Louis Only Logical Contender For Charles' Title

Washington, April 5 (AP) — The United States National Boxing Association said Wednesday that former champion Joe Louis is the only logical contender for Ezzard Charles' heavyweight title.

In releasing its quarterly ratings, the 47-state body gave Detroit's Brown Bomber the nod over Lee Savold, Jersey Joe Walcott and Rex Layne, the sensational young heavyweight from Utah.

The ratings extended recognition to Joe Maxim as light-heavyweight king and to Ike Williams as lightweight champion but made it clear these were "conditional."

The N.B.A. said its executive committee will announce shortly, probably next week, whether the two-time champ will be given their crowns for failure to defend them within the time specified by the group, which exercises control over professional boxing in all states except New York.

Maxim, reported to sign today for a heavyweight title go against Charles in Chicago May 30, and Williams, who agreed to defend his title May 11 in New York's Madison Square Garden against Jimmy Carter of New York, were awarded last February 15 to defend their titles by March 31, 1951, or face possible dethronement.

The NBA dropped Jake La-Motta to the outstanding boxer classification and said there is no logical contender for Robinson's middleweight crown.

Cuba's Kid Gavilan, who goes after Johnny Bratton's NBA version welterweight crown May 18 was ranked top contender for the title, with England's Tommy Best. Also ranked were Billy Graham, Chuck Davey who lost to Bratton, Vic Nastoli and Vitale Pryden, a Canadian newcomer from St. Catharines, Ont., who made a good showing in New York not so long ago.

The Ratings

Heavyweight: Champion — Ezzard Charles. Logical contender —Joe Louis.

Light-heavyweight: Champion —Joe Maxim. Logical contenders —Archie Moore, Harry Matthews, Bob Murphy, Bob Satterfield.

Middleweight: Champion—Ray Robinson. Logical contenders— none. Outstandings boxers—Jake LaMotta, Dave Sands of Australia, Laurient Dauthille of France.

Welterweight: Champion — Johnny Bratton. Logical contenders—Kid Gavilan of Cuba, Eddie Thomas of England. Outstanding boxers include Fluid Pruden of St. Catharines.

Lightweight Champion — Ike Williams. Logical contenders — Freddie Dawson, John L. Davis (retired).

Featherweight: Champion — Sandy Saddler. Logical contenders—Willie Pep.

Bantamweight: Champion—Vic Toweel of South Africa. Logical contenders—Luis Romero, Spain; Manuel Ortiz; Peter Keenan, England.

Flyweight: Champion — Dado Marino, Hawaii. Logical contenders— Jean Sneyers, Belgium; Terry Allen, England.

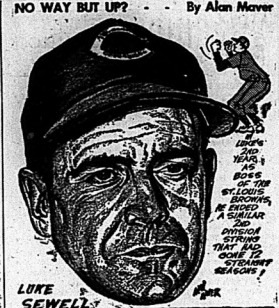
Mike Gaven, the Journal's Dodger correspondent said that the Brooklyn vice-president, Buzzy Bavasi, had instructed Dodger players not to sign leases for apartments in Brooklyn.

Bavasi said, "in view of our trade negotiations I would guess that at least 12 of the 32 players that we have left are not sure of their jobs.



The cast of Red Sox slugger Walt Dropo's fractured right wrist was removed Wednesday and Dropo made plans to rejoin the team Friday at Augusta, Ga.

Dr. Irving McCarthy, team physician, instructed the big first baseman not to swing a bat or do any heavy work with the wrist "for at least a week or 10 days." The baseball season opens at Boston April 17.

Detroit, Leafs Still Rate As Favorites to Reach Finals With Wings Favored For Cu

Toronto, April 5—(CP)—Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, who left no doubt during the regular schedule that they're the best in the National Hockey League, rate as favorites today to reach the Stanley Cup finals.

But hockey observers give Leafs little chance of winning the cup unless they play a lot better against Detroit than they have so far in the best-of-seven series with Boston Bruins.

Leafs have a 2-1 lead in games, but their performance in Tuesday night's 3-1 win at Boston was hardly an indication of the mastery Toronto has wielded over Bruins all season.

Bruins, who just squeezed into the fourth playoff spot, looked the better team for more than the first half of the game, and a couple of questionable goals provided Leafs with their victory margin.

Toronto came home yesterday, spent the night here, and today headed for Mr. Catherines, Ont., to hide out before the Saturday night game. Leafs won't appear in Toronto until about an hour before game time, then will head for Boston immediately after for what may be the last game of the series. If a seventh game is necessary, it will be here next Tuesday.

Goals Shooting Class

While Leafs haven't shone as a team thus far in the playoffs, there have been some individual performances that rate praise. Veterans Turk Broda, who has had a remarkable average of 2.04 goals in a game in 101 N. H. L. playoff games, is probably the chief factor in Toronto's edge.

A magnificent pay-off goaltender, Turk, at 36 the league's oldest player, is all but making Toronto fans temporarily forget about injured Al Rollins, the rookie who shared regular-season duties and won the Vezina Trophy.

Another bright performer has been Howie Meeker, 26-year-old right-winger from Kitchener, Ont. General manager Conn Smythe said he was "very happy" about Meeker's play.

Max Bentley, 31-year-old centre from Delisle, Sask., also rates mention. A money player from way back, Bentley has scored two goals and assisted on three—taking part in five of Toronto's seven goals to date.

Bruins will arrive here Friday and work out at Maple Leaf Gardens in the afternoon. The layoff between games is expected to improve the condition of Milt Schmidt and his banged-up knees.

The 5-foot-10, 170-pound veteran centre from Kitchener hasn't been as effective as usual because of his injuries, but his insistence on playing despite the pain attests to his greatness.

FAMOUS RIVER

The Peace river, principal tributary of the Mackenzie, itself is 1,054 miles in length to the headwaters of the Finlay river.

BOB TAYLOR

Home from the hockey wars, Bob Taylor, 190 pound defenceman of the St. Catharines Tee Pees, junior "A" team, plans to spend the summer here before returning to St. Kitts for his final year in junior circles. Bob scored four goals and was credited with ten assists during the season. He missed the last four games of the playoffs due to injuries.

Barrie Flyers Win Argument But Lose Game

Toronto, April 5—(CP)—Barrie Flyers won an argument but lost a hockey game yesterday.

The Ontario Hockey Association upheld Barrie's refusal to play a Sunday game with their best-of-seven final junior 'A' series with Toronto Marlboros in committee rooms but lost to Marlboros 7-4 the same night.

The Marlies, whose insistence on the Sunday game drew from Barrie coach Hap Emms the statement his team would withdraw from the league next season, hommered home five goals in a sizzling third period to draw even, a game each, in the series.

Emms intimated several other league teams would not take the Barrie withdrawal without action. He suggested Windsor and Guelph as examples.

Emms added during the discussion regarding the Sunday game —which now will be played next Saturday instead—that the decision probably would cost Barrie its sponsorship by Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

He blamed Conn Smythe, general manager of Toronto Maple Leafs, who sponsor Marlboros under N. H. L. rules, a team is entitled to sponsorship of any amateur team within a 50-mile radius of its home city. Boston has been permitted by Toronto to sponsor Flyers but this permission can be withdrawn at any time and apparently Smythe has done that. May Shift Sponsorship

Reports here indicated that Boston might shift sponsorship to Kitchener, expected to enter a club next year.

Parker Macdonald and Wally Maxwell put Marlboros in an early lead in last night's game with goals in the first five minutes. Earl Chevrefils made it 3-0 with his marker to end the period.

Flyers controlled play in the middle stanza. Cubick Wood tied the score 3-3 and Doug Trevers put them in the lead near the close of the frame.

In the third period Marlies came roaring back. They rifled three quick goals. Earl Balfour, Dan Poland and Ron Stewart pulled the triggers.

Leo Labine whittled the lead a trifle before Marlies whistled back with two more.

Maxwell scored from Stewart for the first and then Stewart sniped one on a pass from Max well. Later a cross check from Labine sent Maxwell to hospital with a bruised eye.

Twice in the dying stages of the game Marlboros were penalized for holding up the game.

A crowd of 7,612 alternately cheered and booed as the teams battered their way through 30 penalties.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

HOME FROM THE WARS!

Towering Bob Taylor, 195 pound defenceman of the St. Catharines Tee Pees junior "A" hockey squad is home from the front wars. Rousing Egbert looking as fit as a fiddle despite a recent injury that tore leg ligaments and caused painful pelvis bruises, is home for the summer and will return for his last year as a Junior hockey star next September.

Bob, who scaled 207 pounds during his playing days, grinned when we asked him his scoring record. "Fourteen points" he said, "four goals and ten assists. The most I ever made."

The only native born son of Belleville in junior "A" circles, Taylor found the going rather rugged at the beginning of the season, but gradually worked himself into the schems of things. He got his first taste of junior "A" experience with the Barrie Flyers, then was traded to the Oshawa Generals, then to the Tee Pees (Thompson Products).

Team-mate of Taylor, was Wayne "Wiener" Brown, former Stadac juvenile star who, during the playoffs was the toast of St. Kitt's fandom. He scored the overtime winning goal against Toronto Marlboros and ripped through the Guelph Biltmores in a third game playoff to score the only goal of the game that eliminated the Bilts.

Brown, according to Taylor, will turn pro and probably join a United States Hockey League squad.

Taylor hopes to get a job here for the summer and keep in shape before reporting to the Tee Pees next fall for training.

A SPLENDID FELLOW!

On another sports page is a picture of one of the finest sportsmen that ever took part in athletics in this village. He is Ralph "Mac" Nelison, starry player of Ottawa Mormon Elders who cut a brilliant swath this season in Ottawa basketball circles. The Mormons won the Eastern Ontario senior loop title but bowed to the superior ability of the Toronto Tri - Bells.

Elder Nellson is a splendid type of athlete. A quiet of the mainstays of the Belleville Cubs baseball squad. A second baseman, his scintillating play on the keystone sack was nothing short of sensational, while his long distance clouting was the answer to a coach's prayer.

Elder Nellson is a splendid type of athlete. A quiet fellow, the Elder endeared himself to his team-mates and to the fans with his friendly attitude and fine personality. He puts into sport all he has, and that is plenty and he was and is a splendid example of young sportsmen whose high standard of living and exemplary behavior on the field earned the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact.

* * *

His fielding was par excellence. He had an arm that could whip a bullet - like throw. His mighty bat blasted out many home runs and other extra base clouts for the Cubs. His disposition left nothing to be desired. He was the most popular man on the Cubs team. He respected his coaches and never for a moment did his ability as a baseball player to use sports parlance, "to to his head." He played the game for the game's sake, and nothing else. Belleville sportdom could well do with many like Elder Reid Nellson. It is this city's loss that he has to return to his Ogden, Utah, home this year.

TRY 'EM THIS WAY!

The smelt is on the way, and it won't be long now before the silvery silvers will be frying a golden brown in the kitchens of many city homes.

If you want to try a different method of cooking the finny delicacy, here's a recipe offered by Bob (Globe and Mail) Turnbull. It's well worth trying—

BROILED SMELT

Clean (3 to 5 per person) and wipe dry. Salt thoroughly on both sides and let stand five minutes. Place in hot, well-greased broiler and cook under flame at moderate heat (375 degrees F) 10 to 15 minutes. Skin surface should be covered with brown bubbles when done. Turn and cook other side. Slip broiled fish carefully onto hot platter, pour on drippings, garnish with parsley and sliced lemon and serve at once.

Detroit Wings Now Favored To Win Series

Detroit, April 5 (AP) —Back in the favorite's role, Detroit Red Wings will be going all out tonight to put a quick finish to their semi-final Stanley Cup playoff series with Montreal Canadiens.

The Canadiens pulled a couple of overtime victories out of the fire to start off the crucial series last week.

But the Wings travelled to hockey-mad Montreal and calmly took over, winning game No. 3 by a 2-0 score Saturday night and coming through with a 4-1 victory Tuesday.

In both games the Wings' steady assist—a wealth of experience and plenty of strength behind the front line—showed up strongly.

So the experts were quick to reinstall Tom Ivan's well-balanced crew in the role of the most likely to succeed in the current best-of-seven series. The winner will go on to the finals meeting the victor of the Toronto-Boston series.

However, the Canadiens are remembering the Wings' impotency on Olympia ice in the first two games and their big hope is to keep that charm working.

Waiting for tonight's big one, both teams are hitting out in Toledo, O., to catch a bit of rest. They arrived in Detroit yesterday from Montreal and promptly headed south for the Ohio city.

Simmons' Resignation Then Denial, Has Cleveland Indians' Camp in Turmoil

Boston, Tex., April 5 (AP)—The announced resignation of coach Al Simmons—and then his denial—had the Cleveland Indians' camp in somewhat of a turmoil today.

The big question seemed to be: "Is he through or isn't he?"

Simmons said he hadn't written a letter of resignation and didn't intend to. But he summed up his status with the club with three words:

"As far as I'm concerned I'm through and that's that."

Tribe manager Al Lopez said he was completely surprised by Simmons' statement. He had reported earlier that the third-base coach quit because of ill health.

Lopez didn't say, however, whether he now might consider keeping Simmons on his staff. It appeared possible that Simmons and general manager Hank Greenberg might meet in Dallas tomorrow and thresh the matter out.

Just before the Indians left Tucson yesterday, Simmons told reporters that he had "just asked permission to leave for a while so I could go see my personal physician."

"I'm a sick man and I want to find out what the trouble is. I thought maybe if I felt better later on I could come back. I thought maybe I could rejoin the club in Cleveland."

But Lopez shook his head and said he just couldn't understand it.

"He came to me the other night and he was terribly upset," the pilot declared. "He said, 'Al, I'm quitting. I just can't go on like this any longer.'

"We sat and talked for a long time. He was ready to leave. I tried to tell him that he should find out what the trouble is and then decide whether or not to quit the club."

Lopez said Simmons thanked him but replied he didn't want it this way. "He said he had definitely decided to quit and have a complete physical check-up."

The husky hitter came to the Tribe at the first of last season after serving as a coach with the Philadelphia Athletics. He was one of baseball's greatest hitters during his playing career with four American League and two National League clubs.

Boston Bruins Hoping to Get Some of Breaks

Boston, April 5 (CP)— With the odds definitely against them, Boston Bruins today prepared to leave for Toronto, where they will play the Maple Leafs Saturday night in the continuing semi-finals of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup series.

Leafs have a 3-1 edge in victories and two of the next three (if necessary) games in the best-of-seven series are carded for Toronto ice.

Bruins, however, stormily reject any suggestion that they should be counted out.

"We haven't been outplayed yet," challenged Coach Lynn Patrick, "and if we can get the breaks instead of having them go the other way we can win."

The players had a complete day off yesterday and will take it easy today until they board a train which will get them to Toronto about 8.30 a.m. tomorrow.

A light loosening-up practice is scheduled for Friday at Maple Leaf Gardens. The layoff will help Captain Milt Schmidt, who has two badly-injured knees, and winger Vic Lynn, who has a bad charlie horse. Hal Laycoe also has an injured leg.

To bolster their squad, the Bruins, recalled centre Barton Bradley and defenceman Bill Davidson from Tulsa of the United States League. Tulsa, a Bruin farm, lost out in the final playoffs to Omaha. Both boys will be ready if needed Saturday.

Massachusetts Governor Paul Dever came to the rescue of the Bruins yesterday by decreeing that a recently-enacted law prohibiting hockey to be played after 11 p.m. should be operative at once.

Last Sunday it was announced before the game (which Leafs won 3-1) that it could not continue after 11 p.m. in event of a tie.

Last Saturday in Toronto Leafs and Bruins played the first unresolved Stanley Cup tie in 24 years, Ontario law forbids sports after 11:30 p.m. Saturday night. The same thing could occur again in Toronto this Saturday.

AUTHOR'S FATHER DIES

Toronto, April 4, (CP)—Adrian Van Passen, 85, died yesterday, lawyer man. Mr. Van Passen, a native of The Netherlands, came to Toronto 37 years ago. Another son, Thomas, lives in Toronto. He was the father of Pierre Van Passen of New York, Unitarian

The handsome smiling young gent wielding the towel is none other than Elder Reid Nellson, of the Mormon Elders, sensational basketball team which battled the Toronto Tri-Bells in the Ontario senior basketball championship series. "Elder" is better known in Belleville and district baseball circles as being one of the starriest second basemen to show his wares here in many years. He played for the Belleville Cubs last year in the district league and his starry fielding and long-distance hitting earned for him the most valuable player award. Belleville baseball could use Nellson again this year, but his duties carry him back to his home in Ogden, Utah, U.S.A.

Soo Greyhounds Out in Front By One Game

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 5. —(CP)—Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds Wednesday night went one game up in their best-of-five Ontario senior A hockey playoffs defeating Owen Sound 8-4 in the opening game.

More than 5,000 watched Greyhounds take a 4-2 lead in the opening period and add four in the final stanza. The second period was scoreless.

The two Ontario finalists meet here Friday night. The scene then shifts to Owen Sound for the balance of the set.

Right winger Ronnie Lay led the winner's attack hitting for three goals, all in the final period.

Billy Vlasiuki had two goals for the Hounds and Terry Blocchi, Walter Zoks and Jimmy Mosdell added singles.

Jack Ingoldsby had two goals for Mercury's while Gillespie and Tommy Burlington rounded out the scoring.

Referees Farrell and Nummela handed out six penalties, five going to Owen Sound.

SERIES SQUARED

Toledo, O., April 5 (AP) — Johnny Kovich scored two goals Wednesday night to lead Toledo Mercury's to a 7-4 victory over Atlantic City Sea Gulls and square the best-of-seven American Hockey Association semi-final playoff series at three games apiece.

The deciding game will be played here Saturday.

Toledo won the International Hockey League championship, while Atlantic City are champions of the Eastern Hockey League.

Doug Kilburn fired a pair of goals for the Gulls.

Everything New About Athletics Except Players

Birmingham, Ala., April 5 — (CP)—Everything is new with the Philadelphia A's except the ball players. For the first time since Connie Mack is not the baseball manager. At 88, the grand old man has turned over the job to Jimmy Dykes, one of "my boys."

Dykes has the back-breaking task of prying the A's loose from the cellar. It will take more than a crowbar, but crushing the defeatism of other years is one of Dykes' main objects.

"Nobody is going to quit on this ball club," says Dykes. "We may get beat but we're not quitting. I think the guys are going to play ball for me."

If Joe Coleman and Dick Fowler come around, the pitching will be pretty good. But we don't have the power to win those close games when you don't get the good pitching."

Dykes tried to do something about the club during the winter. First-baseman Ferris Fain was on the market for a slugging outfielder and catching help. Nobody would give up a front-line man, so the A's kept him.

Pitching Key to Hopes

Pitching is the key to the A's hopes of escaping last place. When Coleman and Fowler came up with arm trouble last summer, the A's were strapped.

Coleman (0-5) rates himself 100-per-cent improved over last spring. Fowler (1-5) has been throwing easily in exhibition games showing promise that the burrills may be working out of his shoulder.

Lou Brissie (7-19), Alex Kellner (8-20) and Bobby Shantz (8-14) form a solid front line of southpaw pitching. Kellner, a 20-game winner in '49, should do much better than last year.

Hank Wyse, (9-14), Bob Hooper (15-10) and Carl Scheib (5-10), impressive with a new sidearm delivery, also will take regular turns.

The rest of the club is set with Joe Astroth, (.227) and Joe Tipton (.266) the only catchers.

Fain (.323) at first, Billy Hitchcock (.273) at second, Eddie Joost (.233) at short and Kermit Wahl (.257) at third form a capable but elderly infield.

The outfield is the club's strength, although the boys are moving up in the age bracket. Paul Lehner (.269) is left, Sam Chapman (.251) is centre and Elmer Valo (.260) is right are the regulars with 40-year-old Wally Moses (.264), oldest player in the majors, one of those available to fill in.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 5 —(AP)— How does the United States look through the eyes of a nine-year-old Italian boy? It's a wonderland of slot machines, television and Gene Kelly.

The boy is Guido Martufi, a lad with a dark, expressive face. He arrived from Italy a few days ago with his father, Amerigo Martufi. Amerigo, so named because he was nearly born in Brooklyn (his parents moved back to Italy shortly before his birth), is barber for the movie crowd in Rome. "I cut the hair of all the actors and directors," he said, "all except Roberto Rossellini; he has no hair." Because of his connections, he has been able to get movie jobs for his sons, Guido and Roberto.

Seeing Mouthpiece

Guido landed a good role in the recent "Teresa" and has been brought to Hollywood for a part in "Westward the Women." He speaks no English, so his interpreter is Johnny Indrisano, who told me that Guido's chief passion since his arrval is slot machines.

"When he got off the plane, he saw a cigaret machine and asked what it was," Indrisano related. "I showed him how it worked and he was fascinated. Now he wants to put money in every one he finds, just to see what comes out.

"I took him up to see a television set in a store in Hollywood and he was amazed. When I turned on a baseball game, he started looking around the store to see where the players were."

No Kelly

On a studio tour Guido had one disappointment: "I met Clark Gable, I met Esther Williams, I met Fred Astaire, but where is Gene Kelly? He is wild about Kelly."

What does he like about Kelly? The translation is roughly: "He's so simple, so plain, so down-to-earth."

STRANGLES SELF

Millbrae, Calif., April 5 (AP)— Peter Loftus, editor and publisher of his weekly Millbrae Sun, was killed last night when his necktie caught in a press. He was strangled.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Even if millions of bridge players play bad bridge it is still bad bridge. And the worst of it is in their defensive bidding.

A defensive bid, called an overcall, is by an opponent of the opening bidder. There are four types: Here is their order of choice: Overcall in opponent suit, jump overcall, double, simple overcall.

An overcall in opponent suit is a bid by defender in the same suit that his opponent has bid. For instance, if opponent bids one heart and you bid two hearts. You have overcalled in opponent suit.

A jump overcall is a bid by defender of one more than needed in a new suit. For instance, if opponent bids one heart and your bid is two spades instead of one spade. You have jumped your overcall.

Double for takeout is the word double when used to signal your partner to take out to his suit. For instance, opponent bids a heart and you say double. Your double is for takeout.

A simple overcall is a bid by defender of one more than needed in a new suit. For instance, opponent bids one heart and your bid is one spade. You gave a simple overcall.

A bid in a lower bracket of this order of choice denies having what it takes in a higher bracket. This is not obvious to be denied.

Too many players fail to figure so accurately with their bids in defence. With any overcall of any kind, they usually come in with a bid in some suit they prefer to show.

This puts their partners up against a guess. Partners have no way of knowing how strong a hand they have. Why this does not seem to such defenders will always remain a mystery to me.

You can see how it is if partner had the hand shown here:

♠A K 9 4 3
♥9 6 2
♦K 8 4 3
♣A

Opponent opened with a heart and your partner overcalled with one spade. Would you know how strong he was? Not much.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Friday, April 9

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Should be benefic day for starting new undertakings, making strides in familiar matters, handling sound business. Extra care needed in buying, rental work and artistic things.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Gentleness (taboo Taurus trait) and common sense stressed for home matters, dealing with opposite sex and managing children. Day in general shows benefits for work, necessary duties.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Should be a truly big day for you. Routine matters equally favored with new activities. A day to push sound business, add to income or other assets. Fine for brain work.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—If midnight of disposition and if you don't give in to moods, you can leave a profitable, pleasant Friday. Artistry, finesse, accuracy will add greatly to value of your endeavors.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Things may seem confusing at times. Some periods very friendly, others may require a check of emotions. Subtle effort. Beware of petulant moods. New, unusual undertakings favored.

August 24 to September 23—(Virgo)—A peak day with mercury, Jupiter, Uranus aspects all favorable. Writers, journalists, teachers, students, all brain work highly sponsored. Be original, try things beyond the ordinary.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Venus and Moon aspects not auspicious, stress calm reasoning, pleasant frame of mind for best returns from efforts. Taboo worry, doubt and self blame. You better you'll feel and do.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Mars and Saturn both indicate care in attitude; avoid temptation to hampering aggressiveness, pointless argument. Be serene, conscientious; no matter what your work is, you can gain something.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Favorable if you don't go haywire and indulge extremes in anything or be reckless with assets, time, income. Wise judgment! Advancement possible in your occupation.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Similar influences to Scorpio now. Heed due authority. Can be profitable day if you are sensibly careful at work; in all deals, at home. Have patience, good influences will help.

January 22 to February 19—(Aquarius)—Excellent influences from your Uranus. Can be a peak day in all honest endeavors. Work earnestly in accord with routine and urgent affairs, thus earn time for rest later.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Really up to you and Neptune are the demands of your position, daily duties. Neither by fit agreeable nor too restricting aspects now. Brain work, originality greatly favored.

YOU BORN TODAY have noble characteristics, are courageous, intelligent, generous, have leadership qualities. Can be tactful, capable in business, but may be too domineering at times, want your own way to unwise exclusion, of tendencies, and give other folks encouragement. Your talents too promising to allow outside failings to thwart success, cause you to lose fine friendships. Study, aim to improve constantly; you can go way up the success ladder. Pray daily for guidance.

Birthdate of Jean Baptiste Rousseau, French poet.

PICTON

Nomination Day For Mayor On Monday

Picton—A nomination meeting will be held in the Council Chambers on Monday night, April 9th, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the office of Mayor, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mayor C. C. Cooper. Election day will be April 16 if a poll is necessary.

This action was taken at the April meeting of Town Council Tuesday night.

A by-law was passed providing for obsering Daylight Saving Time from then, commencing at 12:01 a.m., Sunday, April 29, and continuing until Sunday Sept. 30th.

Final reading was given a by-law to raise $25,000 by way of a debenture issue for the purpose of raising funds for installation of additional sewers and other matters.

A letter from Ralph Geddes referred to the taxation of the solicitor and client bill of costs of R. E. Nourse, town solicitor, in connection with the settlement of the McFarland Construction claim. Costs were taxed at $4,-621.80. Mr. Nourse's statement pointed out that this was four per cent of the saving involved, less disbursements.

Objected to Fees

"There was not a great deal that I could do in this matter," Mr. Geddes wrote. "While I objected to the fees of the bill as not being sufficiently detailed as to the fees charged at the various steps in the action, which would have given the taxing officer a better means of arriving at a decision for the exact amount to be allowed, I did not regard the total amount charged as being out of the way in view of the amounts involved and the efficient manner in which the whole matter was conducted. A real estate agent's commission is 3 1-2 percent, and an executor in the Surrogate Court is allowed 3 1-2 to 5 percent on the assets, with a solicitor's fee on top of that."

A petition signed by ratepayers residing on Maple Avenue called attention to the need of a sidewalk on the south side of the street, so pedestrians would not have to wade through mud to cross the street.

Ready for Ball Season

Prince Edward County Baseball Club has completed reorganization in preparation for an active season. Some details are yet to be worked out, but plans call for participation in the COBL and possibly in the ONA playdowns as well. A strong executive was named Tuesday night to promote the sport here.

C. F. Evans was named President with Harvey J. McFarland as Honorary President. Dr. C. S. Slack is first vice-president and Ralph Gibson, second vice-president. Jack Goodwin is secretary and Gay Welsh, treasurer.

Members of the executive include Lt. Cok R. J. Fisher, MBE; Lt. James Honey, A. R. Hill, George Hellegg, Murney Jarvis, Charles Hepburn, Payton Ward, J. K. Welsh, Ronald Gilvel, Elmer Gerow, Carson Scott, William McLean, Phil Dodds, Mike Finnegan, Clarence Walters, Lee Eames, Donald Thomas, Edward Shannon, Sherman McQuaid, Jesse Mason, Carmen Scott, L. J. Greer of Wellington, J. E. Martin and H. R. MacDonald, Bloomfield, Clifford Gerow.

Plans were made to hold a banquet, open to all ball fans, at the Globe Hotel on Wednesday, April 11th. Members of the 1950 ball team will be guests of the club on this occasion.

WELL ORDERED PLUGGED

Fort Erie, April 5—(CP)—Residents in the Derby Rd. area here will breathe more freely now that an abandoned sulphur well under their street has been ordered plugged. Fumes from the well frequently foul the area and it is believed the well contributed to a fire which gutted most of the block a few months ago.

Clashes Endanger Truce Between Jews and Arabs

Israeli War Planes Bomb Syrian Troops in Area

Tel Aviv, Israel, April 6—(AP) United Nations observers feared today that continuing clashes between Israeli and Syrian forces in the border area near the Sea of Galilee might completely shatter the Jewish-Arab Holy Land truce.

Israeli war planes bombed Syrian troops in the area and across the border in Syria last night in retaliation for the killing of seven Israeli policemen Wednesday.

Describing the bombing as "completely successful," an official Israeli spokesman said targets included the El Hamma police station in the border zone as well as "a number of fortified positions a few metres inside Syrian territory proper," from where the Israeli policemen were fired on and killed.

The Syrians, he said, did not return fire.

(A Syrian army spokesman in Damascus said the Arab forces did fire on the eight Israeli planes in the raid and possibly damaged two of them. The Arabs claim seven Syrian casualties from the bombing.)

At United States headquarters in New York, Abba S. Eban, permanent Israeli representative to the U.N. handed a letter to the secretary-general protesting the attention to the border clashes as a matter of urgency.

Actions Called Deliberate

He described the Syrian actions as "deliberate and flagrant violations of the armistice agreement" of 1949 which followed the Arab-Jewish Palestine war.

Earlier this week, Sharett, in a letter to Trygve Lie, accused Syria of having had violated the armistice by its artillery fire in the militarized border zone.

The 30-mile-long area was made a demilitarized zone between Syria and Israel in the cease-fire agreement of 1948, Jerusalem belonging to Israel, it is partolled jointly by Syrian and Israeli police, serving under U.N. supervision.

The clashes originated with Israeli tanks and troops in the Huleh swamps. The U.N. observers called the project "purely drainage," but urged it be postponed until settlement of disputes with Syrian land owners. Israeli agricultural representatives had continued the work over Syrian objections.

Mounties Probe Crash of Jet On Test Flight

Komoka, Ont., April 6 (CP) Mounties today investigated the crash of a CF-100 Avro Canuck jet plane which exploded during a test flight yesterday, killing its pilot and an engineering observer.

An official of A. V. Roe, which manufacturers what it describes as "the most powerful fighter in the world," said the company is working with the RCMP in the investigation.

The twin-jet, all-weather long range fighter turned out for the RCAF crashed into a swamp about 11 miles west of London, Ont., carrying to death Flt. Lt. Bruce Warren, 29, of New Toronto, the pilot, and Robert Attbrander of Brampton Ont., the observer.

Mrs. L.A. Warren native of Nanton, Alta., married and the father of two children, had been with Avro since last July when the air force released him on a two-year leave.

A spokesman for Avro said the families of the two men killed in the crash would be provided for. All flying personnel on test flights of the CF-100 were "heavily" insured, he said.

The spokesman also expressed doubt that the crash would hold up production of the CF-100 Canucks. The plane had sufficient tests to warrant confidence despite the crash.

The plane that exploded was the second experimental model produced. It had been flying since last July 13 and had travelled 638 miles an hour in a flight from Toronto to Montreal. Its designers said it could go faster than that, although its maximum speed was a top air secret.

The plane took off from Malton Airport, 18 miles northwest of Toronto, at 11 a.m. for an endurance test flight. It was due back three hours later. About 15 miles west of Komoka a huge black smoke, then plunged almost straight down into the swamp. An explosion rocked the countryside for miles around and left a deep crater.

Dairies Agree To Roll Back Some Prices

Toronto, April 6 (CP) —Toronto dairies have agreed to roll back last Monday's increases on products other than milk, Controller Mayor Hiram McCallum said Thursday night.

Dairy representatives conferred with the Milk Control Board Thursday following criticism of their action in the provincial legislature.

William Dennison (CCF-Toronto St. David) said in the legislature he believed the government's legislation to control retail milk prices had been broken and that since milk had gone up as much as two cents a quart. Premier Frost said he expected the legislation would be tested, although he felt it was wide enough to keep necessary control.

J. E. Houck, secretary manager of the Toronto Milk Distributors' Association said the milk board set a price on milk and that other grades of milk and other milk products were not frozen.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 6—(CP)—Synopsis: Skies are clear over Ontario this morning. A fine warm day is in prospect over the Great Lakes area.

However the weekend weather is threatened by a storm developing over Oklahoma. As this new disturbance advances northeastward toward Ontario its approach will be announced by increasing cloudiness over southwestern counties this evening. Rain advancing up the Mississippi valley will reach the Windsor area tonight and spread across southern and central Ontario on Saturday.

AURIOL PLEDGES FRANCE WILL AID IN KEEPING PEACE

President and Wife Receive at Embassy

Ottawa, April 6 (CP) —President Vincent Auriol of France, given an uproarious welcome yesterday on his arrival for a five-day official visit to Canada, pledged his country to co-operative action to preserve freedom.

The first chief of the French government to visit Canada in an official capacity, Mr. Auriol arrived here from New York where he was considered a seven-day visit to United States Wednesday.

He will visit Toronto today and return here briefly for a state dinner tendered by Prime Minister St. Laurent. He will leave by overnight train for Quebec to spend Saturday and part of Sunday in the capital where France lost Canada to Britain in the historic battle of the Plains of Abraham in 1759. He will also visit Montreal Sunday and will fly here from there Monday to fly back to Paris.

This staid, bilingual capital, at times accustomed to visits of foreign dignitaries, turned out en masse to welcome the 68-year-old president. With a wave of his silk top hat and a broad smile, he acknowledged the cheers as he drove through flag-bedecked streets in an open car, for a speech at a joint meeting of the Senate and the Commons he told how touched he was by the welcome.

It was in the speech, delivered in French that he pledged France to preserve Israel's territory as the inviolate rests of freedom.

"France is not giving herself up to any naive neutralism," said Mr. Auriol. "Whatever sacrifices are necessary, we accept to the our already crushing burdens for rehabilitation and re-equipment, we know that no sacrifice is so heavy as that of liberty."

While giving a pledge on behalf of France, Mr. Auriol received one from Prime Minister St. Laurent. Mr. Auriol to members of the two chambers of parliament assembled in the Commons, Prime Minister St. Laurent said:

"We shall never try to escape the duty of helping to defend those who, like yourselves, are more immediately exposed than we."

Close to 1,200 invited guests crowded the French room, the basey reception rooms last night tendered by the President and Mme. Auriol.

C.N.R. Engine Crew Narrowly Escapes Death

Sudbury, April 6 — (CP) — A Canadian National Railways' engineer and fireman narrowly escaped death Thursday when their engine crashed head-on into a loaded gasoline train. Both engines, gasoline and fuel oil on the main line near Sudbury Junction, four miles east of here.

Engineer C. Galeman and fireman Clyde Woods made the fatal ride, rode the cab of the careening locomotive as it was hurtled off the track and into the fiery debris. The freight car immediately burst into flames.

Neither man was injured. C. N. R. officials immediately clamped down a news blackout on the crash and train crews were instructed not to give out information.

MacArthur Proves He is Hot Potato By Endorsing Use of Chiang's Forces

Washington, April 6 (AP) — Gen. MacArthur has proved again that he is one of the Truman administration's hottest potatoes.

His latest challenge of administration policy and Washington authority was burning fingers today at the White House, State Department and the Pentagon, military headquarters.

MacArthur's letter to a Republican leader, representative Joe Martin of Massachusetts, warmly endorsing Martin's demand that the thousands of Chinese Nationalist troops on Formosa under command of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek be used in action against the Chinese and Soviet communists, has potentialities in at least three fields:

1. Domestic politics.
2. International politics, including the United Nations program for the Far East.
3. Military strategy.

While MacArthur's letter promptly raised speculation about possible disciplinary action against the general, there was nothing to indicate whether the White House would risk a bitter fight in Congress by removing him from command or promoting him out of it.

Britain and U.S. Reported To Have Split Sharply Over Korean War-Aims Statements

Washington, April 6—(AP)— Britain and the United States are reported to have split sharply over a proposed statement of war aims and peace hopes. It was to have been issued here by President Truman.

While responsible informants here today said the way is still open for talks to continue, the project has been virtually abandoned as far as a statement by Truman is concerned.

What now appears more likely is an early Washington speech by State Secretary Dean Acheson defining the political problems and purposes of the Korean conflict.

The difference between Washington and London is said to have come over how far to go in trying to induce the Chinese communists to open peace talks now.

Britain is said to favor an appeal for Chinese participation in peace talks, while the U. S. has insisted that many doors are already open to the Chinese and that the U. N. countries would not really advance by showing what Washington considers to be political weakness.

The whole affair, reflecting the considerable differences of attitude between London and Washington on far eastern policy, is involved with the widening rift between Gen. MacArthur and Washington over the conduct and broad political strategy of the Korean war.

Debate Wisdom

Several weeks ago as United Nations forces began approaching the 38th parallel, political representatives of the 14 countries whose troops are fighting in Korea began debating the wisdom of crossing or not crossing the Parallel.

The U.S. and Britain, after some hotly-discussed differences over tactical attempts by members of the group (Britain, France and others ing originally opposing any crossing of the Parallel) reached a compromise political-military agreement. It was to the effect that MacArthur's troops could cross the line for tactical reasons but not for the broad strategic purpose of trying to reconquer all north Korea.

About the time the policy discussions were coming to a climax it was suggested in the 14-country council that a public statement would be desirable for two broad reasons first, to try to use the fact that the war had returned to the north-south dividing line in Korea as a device for nudging Chinese communists into peace talks; second, to inform people all over the world of the aims and desires for peace of the United Nations coalition.

New Laws Affecting Job Discrimination, Women, Farm Life Keynote Ontario Session

Toronto, April 5—(CP)—New vincial legislation affecting employment discrimination, women and farm matters highlighted the session of the Ontario legislature which ended yesterday.

In the last-recorded vote of the nine-week session, the legislature gave unanimous aproval to its 125th bill, which makes it illegal for employers or employees to discriminate against men or women for race, color, creed or nationality.

The 90 members, who held a month's sitting for the only time since deliberations began Feb. 1, pushed through last-minute business in time for Lieutenant-Governor Ray Lawson to give royal assent to the legislation.

Final word in the budget speech debate, which ended in a 48-34 vote against a C. C. F. non-confidence motion, was for Premier Frost. He told the house that a general provincial election is not being considered for June, and that he will poll members back for a special session as soon as the federal government implements the proposed federal-provincial old-age pension agreement.

Several of the legislature's most important bills of the session will affect women.

One new fact provides that a woman doing the same work as a man in any establishment will receive the same pay. A second gives women the right to sit on juries.

A change in the mothers' allowances act extends the age limit for help to children from 16 to 18 years, provided the child is satisfactorily studied. An amendment to another act will bring runaway fathers back from anywhere in Canada to face court action for support of their families.

Interest to Farmers

Of chief interest to farmers are two new measures—one to permit establishment of pooled prices for regulated farm products the other to launch a study by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission into improving and co-ordinating rural telephone systems.

UNIFORM FREIGHT RATES ACROSS DOMINION AIM

Legislative Proposals Will Take Some Time

Ottawa, April 6. (CP)—The government's plans legislation for uniform freight rates across Canada, and may have it before parliament at this session.

Rate equalization has No. 1 priority among recommendations of the Royal Commission on Transportation, the Commons was informed last night by Transport Minister Chevrier. He said experts of that department are now drafting railway act amendments to put it into effect.

The commission's legislative proposals will take some time to draw up, Mr. Chevrier said, and it will not be known until later if they will be ready for action before parliament rises in early summer.

The royal commission's proposals on equalization of rates call for a series of measures, the eventual effect of which would be to level up the differences which now exist between different areas. Protests against existing differentials have been insistent from the west and the maritimes.

In the first debate on the royal commission findings since they were made public last January 31, Mr. Chevrier indicated in the house that the government is not yet ready to announce action on any other recommendations.

No Time for Revision

Specifically, he said it has not yet had time to consider proposals for a capital revision of the Canadian National Railways and for a national transportation policy of co-ordinating all forms of transport under public control.

However, he did say that, as far as he knows, the government is prepared to accede to a recommendation calling for no action —the intention for the present at least of the west's statutory, low Crow's Nest Pass freight rates on grain and grain products.

Mr. Chevrier's announcements in the commission's recommendations were made to a thinly-attended sitting, with many house members present at a reception for President Auriol of France.

Earlier, the House saw unsuccessful attempts by members of the Progressive Conservative and CCF to open up a cost-of-living debate. Finance Minister Abbott announcement of a new high of 178.7 in the government's living cost index.

55-Year-Old Man Shoots Mother At Rimouski

Rimouski, Que., April 6 (CP)— A 55-year-old man today was charged with murder after the 83-year-old mother. He entered no plea and a medical examination was ordered before the case was adjourned to April 14.

The elderly woman was given at Mrs. Cyrice Roux and her son's as Louis Philippe Roux. Police said the two were the sole occupants of a comfortably furnished home.

The shooting was discovered when two women of the village, 32 miles west of this city of St. Lawrence River centre, noticed Mrs. Roux's son not behaving "strangely" in the street.

They went to the Roux house. They found the elderly woman dead. Police said she had been shot twice in the head with a .32 calibre rifle.

Wondrous Meal for President Auriol Prepared by Famous Toronto Chef

By HAROLD MORRISON

Ottawa, April 6 (CP)—A beaming chef, digging deep into the mysteries of his art, yesterday served Canada and France on the most sumptuous meal of his career—the Vincent Auriol state dinner.

"Voila, it is almost finished," said the proud Claude Boujard, a brilliant, roly-poly master of the cook book, as he took this reporter on a guided tour of the famous French Embassy kitchen.

Silently scurrying cooks and their assistants, the room was an epicure's delight. Fifty different dishes, all of them pastry, were stacked in wooden shelves along the walls.

Rolls of Canadian veal were sizzling in iron ovens. To one side was a box of yellow roses that had been flown specially to be cut out of sugar. Outside in the embassy's backyard were fat little chickens, covered with tiny goose livers and jellied dressing, cooling in a truck.

"Not enough refrigerator space inside," said Claudine and laughed.

Every dish I prepare has the touch of France in it. I can cook dishes of any nation: I can cook a Chinese dish better than can the Chinese."

Lessons of Wars Not Lost Says President Auriol

French Visitor Addresses Luncheon Group at Toronto

Toronto, April 6 — (CP) — President Vincent Auriol of France said today that the lessons of the two world wars have "not been lost."

The 68-year-old president, who served with the Free French Forces in the Second World War, said that the free nations know now that they must unite for their own security.

Proposing a toast to the King at a luncheon tendered by the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Ray Lawson, M. Auriol said:

"Knowing how to unite and organize ourselves in proper time, instead of being destroyed separately; the free nations by their determination and cohesion, must discourage aggression and assure the peace and prosperity of the world. The arms that your factories forge are the arms for the common defence of liberty and peace . . .

"France will spare nothing to promote the organization of collective security, to set up a united front to all aggression, to build a united Europe which, in co-operation with the new world, will bring to each nation greater prosperity and well-being . . ."

Places Wreath

Toronto (CP) —This predominantly English-speaking city today was host to President Vincent Auriol of France.

In Canada on a five-day tour, M. Auriol arrived by train here from Ottawa where he was given a rousing welcome yesterday. His reception in the capital overshadowed his warm welcome.

Only a few hundred people turned out to welcome him at the station where he was met by Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. Ray Lawson, and Premier Frost. Large crowds greeted him at the legislature and at the cenotaph.

He placed a wreath at the city hall cenotaph and stood for a moment in silent tribute to Canadians who lost their lives in the First and Second World Wars.

Says Heart Grateful

On the city hall steps the 68-year-old stouth President said in an impromptu speech in French that in placing the wreath at the cenotaph he thought of "all the children of Canada" who had gone to France's aid in the two world wars.

"France," he said, "is duly grateful."

Then, pointing to Hon. Robert Schuman, France's Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is accompanying him on the tour, M. Auriol said that together they would work for a united future.

The president also spoke in French at the luncheon where Premier Frost introduced him in members of the Ontario cabinet. Mr. Frost said that the first time a president of France has ever visited Canada in an official capacity.

"Our association with your country is very great indeed," said Mr. Frost, speaking in English. As a result of the visit he looked forward to "even closer association with France."

Feels at Home

M. Auriol said he was touched by the hospitality of the welcome. Looking around the chamber, he said he felt at home in such a democratic setting.

In an unscheduled move, the Lieutenant-Governor presented M. Auriol with a fishing rod—a fly rod—which the visitor is an ardent fisherman.

A warm sun beat down as he drove through streets in an open car. Few buildings were decorated. Although the city reported the passage of French flags before the visit, some were in evidence on downtown buildings.

The president will return to Ottawa today for a dinner tendered by the Canadian government.

Stinging Slap Given Truman By U.S. Congress

Washington, April 6 — (AP)— The Senate Armed Services committee over troops for Europe with a defence of congressional powers that amounted to a stinging slap for President Truman.

For most of the republic's 150 years, Congress and the president have been disputing their respective prerogatives. Frequently over the same argument as to how much power the president has to deploy troops.

While Truman got approval of his decision to send four American divisions to the North Atlantic defence forces, it was accompanied by a rebuke or his claim that he has the right to station troops as he sees fit.

This came in an amendment by Senator L. McClellan (Dem. Ark.) calling for congressional approval of any U. S. contributions beyond the two divisions already assigned to Gen. Eisenhower's command in Europe unless four to be sent from the United States.

The senate committee was in the form of an advisory opinion which has no force in law.

Technically, then, the president could ignore it completely. Morally, he would find it hard to make more than a mere gesture to congress.

Short of a Russian attack, which would bring the North Atlantic Treaty into automatic operation, envisioning into action and free all restrictions on the movement of U.S. troops, the best bet is that Truman won't ignore congress on this, but decide to send additional ground forces.

SYRUP MAKING NEARLY COMPLETED FOR ANOTHER YEAR

The maple syrup making season is practically completed for another year with but a majority of farmers having already pulled their buckets from the trees and stored their equipment for next season.

Generally speaking farmers report the syrup season as being below the average. Cool weather with lack of frost at night resulted in very few good runs of sap as it was reported.

General price asked for syrup in the local market has been $5 per gallon, although farther north in the county it was obtainable for $4 per gallon.

C of C Protests Wording of Bill

In protest against the Ontario government's bill 110 which provides for employees to have two hours off work with pay for voting purposes on election days, the Chamber of Commerce at its luncheon yesterday moved to send a letter to the Ontario Attorney-General stating it would consider this an amendment to provide the same terms as the dominion government.

It was pointed out that in the case of industry it is difficult for employees to have ample time of their own in which they can vote.

"Some of them would take the time off, and not vote at all," one director said.

Another director was of the opinion that the Dominion Elections Act covers the point fully.

Car Sandwiched Between Trucks On Lower Bridge

Three Montreal residents suffered minor injury and the car in which they were riding was damaged to the extent of over $700, when the car was sandwiched between two heavy transports on Bridge Street near the lower bridge in Thurlow after noon.

Injured and taken to hospital were James Ranberry, 56, crackerjig ibs and a bruised back; Allan Ranberry, 13, lacerations to both knees and forehead, and Douglas Ranberry, 15, lacerations to both knees and forehead.

The accident took place just as the five o'clock rush traffic was about to commence. Louis Smith transport driven by Lewis Kline, 32, of Geddes Street, was westbound followed by the auto driven by Russell Ranberry of Montreal. The transport stopped in the line of traffic as did the Montreal car but a following Charleton transport driven by John McCay of Oshawa, failed to stop in time and crashed into the Ranberry auto shoving it into the rear of the transport ahead.

The three injured persons were taken to hospital in Bush's Ambulance. The accident was investigated by P.C. Charles Lockwood.

Owners Warned To Tie Dogs up For Three Months

The life that is traditionally lived by a dog had some additional woe heaped on it this morning with the warning by city dog catcher Charles Thorne that for the next three months all dogs must be tied up.

Since the disappearance of the frost and with householders commencing their annual spring yard cleaning programs there have been numerous complaints of dogs digging up lawns and flower beds much to the annoyance of the irate home owners.

And so it is that all the pet poodles and other canines will have to be tied up or kept on a leash while being taken for a stroll.

It's tough we know; but after all the home owners also have their rights. Some of dog owners to observe the city by - is still the their pets rounded up and placed in the pound with possible charges following.

Aims and Objects of Ontario Industrial Education Council Outlined to C of C, Guests

The aims and objects of the Ontario Industrial Education Council were outlined to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and a number of guests at the regular luncheon held in the Shrine Club yesterday.

While no definite decisions with regard to the establishment of a branch of the council in Belleville were made, addresses by three prominent speakers connected with the work, created a favorable impression and vice-president John Buchan, acting for president William Bowen, stated the matter would be placed on the agenda at the future date, and briefly discussed.

Special speakers were Mr. A. R. Newham, director of the industrial vocational education, Department of Education, Mr. Walter E. Newton, Western Technical and Commercial School, Toronto, representing the Technical Research Council, and Mr. B. Wesley Switzer, vocational director of the Kingsway Collegiate Institute, which has been operating a branch of the OIEC for some time.

Representatives Present

Representatives of city industry and educational institutions included Messrs. Arthur Young, Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corp.; Lorne Deacon Bros. Ltd.; R. E. Houston, Western Electric Co.; Mrs. Alvon Jewellers; Gilbert Scott, American Optical (Canada); Mrs. R. S. Hicks, Hicks Hardware; R. G. Lanting, Lanning Leather Goods, and district members represented by Principal George Currie, BCI; Lt. Col. Sills, administrator for Board of Education members Enos David and William Hargison.

Also present was J. T. Ransome Ontario Land Surveyor representative of a Chamber of Commerce special committee.

Mr. Newham, the first speaker said that Ontario had been building vocational schools for the past thirty years in co-operation with municipalities with the result that there is now one in every city in the province. This had been accomplished largely through boards and advisory committees working in close harmony with the department.

"Approximately one-half of the students enrolled in these schools," Mr. Moon said, "were taking vocational courses." Later he added that vocational students who reverted to academics proved to be more successful in examination than others.

Ontario Moving Faster

"Ontario is moving through different period," he said. "It is moving faster to a more efficient man-per necessary to hold the way of life." His department, he went on, has agreed to support this type of plan, vocational courses have developed to meet and expedite the new trend.

Business and industrial expansion is continuing, and more skilled labor is needed. The vocational education system, should, he felt, be organized to match this expansion. The plan would result in securing better and greater service from areas where vocational schools exist.

Mr. Newham outlined the origin of the Industrial Education Council. "Following the war," he said, " teachers and technical advisers were definitely let down. There was a need for more skilled industrial education. The whole country required more better trained help. A group of men organized the Technical Research Council under the sponsorship of the Department of Education."

Better Trained Help

"Later," Mr. Newham said, "this did not bring the required results. There were still enough men going into industry so the Industrial Education Council was formed, whose function has been giving better trained help from the schools to business and industry."

Mr. Newham said a local chapter of the IEC should be formed by the vocational school shop director. He should be backed by the principal, one of the school board and one or two teachers. Behind these should be representatives of industry, business and labor, the whole banding together to work out local problems. If special trades were needed, the Department of Education stood ready to supply them. If courses have been set up in the principal cities of Ontario, where men are trying to keep students in school in order to get proper training. "The council," he said "is working in three groups, namely apprenticeship training; semi-automatic promotions in schools and correspondence courses for those who have or desire to advance in their community.

Mr. Switzer outlined the work being done by the IEC chapter in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. He detailed the problems that faced it at the beginning and the subsequent organization of the chapter.

A question period followed the addresses after many pertinent questions were asked and answered. The speakers were introduced by Director Enos David with appreciation of the addresses expressed by Director Fraser Fulton.

Vice-president Buchan also voiced the appreciation of the informative talks and stated the intention of formation of a chapter here would be placed on the agenda in the immediate future.

Y's Men Hear Account of Trip To Lake Success

The Y's Men obtained a first hand account of the recent trip to New York and the United Nations made by the Collegiate students, under the direction of Leslie Reid and Miss Silvester. The club helped in the financing of the trip. Peter Sprague and Bob Reid were the spokesmen visiting the Y's Men last night. Miss Reid dealt the highlights of the places of interest visited by the group, while Bob Reid confined his remarks to particulars of the visit to the Manhattan building of headquarters of the United Nations and the trip to Lake Success.

He pointed out that in the briefing process they were appraised of the fact the United Nations through no fault of its own had not yet been able to perform its main function, keeping the peace, inasmuch as no peace had been established. He was convinced that it could and would be a success if given a chance.

Scott Denton expressed the thanks of the club to the students era. Bert Ililes acted as chairman. The following new members were inducted: Ross Fanner, Alex Brown, Bob Johnston, Harold Sackley and Reuse Bishop.

Announcement was made that the father and son banquet of the Y.M.C.A. sponsored by the club would tax the capacity of the auditorium with advance registration. The banquet is being held in the Y.M.C.A. tonight, when C. T. Sharpe of the department of Education will be the speaker.

All is in readiness for the annual president's night to be held on April 12, according to announcement made by chairman Gerald Hyde.

Better Trained Help

"Later," Mr. Newham said, "this did not bring the required results. There were still enough men going into industry so the Industrial Education Council was formed, whose function has been giving better trained help from the schools to business and industry."

Mr. Newham said a local chapter of the IEC should be formed by the vocational school shop director. He should be backed by the principal, one of the school board and one or two teachers. Behind these should be representatives of industry, business and labor, the whole banding together to work out local problems. If special trades were needed, the Department of Education stood ready to supply them. If courses have been set up in the principal cities of Ontario, where men are trying to keep students in school in order to get proper training. "The council," he said "is working in three groups, namely apprenticeship training; semi-automatic promotions in schools and correspondence courses for those who have or desire to advance in their community.

Mr. Switzer outlined the work being done by the IEC chapter in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. He detailed the problems that faced it at the beginning and the subsequent organization of the chapter.

A question period followed the addresses after many pertinent questions were asked and answered. The speakers were introduced by Director Enos David with appreciation of the addresses expressed by Director Fraser Fulton.

Vice-president Buchan also voiced the appreciation of the informative talks and stated the intention of formation of a chapter here would be placed on the agenda in the immediate future.

Funeral Money Hidden in Shoe Man Gasps Secret, Then Dies

"I guess I am done for," gasped 81-year-old Cleon Deschane of Marlbank, as he staggered home Wednesday afternoon after suffering a heart attack, while sitting at the village barbershop. He was barely able to reach his home on the outskirts of the village and ten minutes later he died as he stumped over the kitchen couch.

But before he died the elderly retired farmer was able to tell his wife about money, which unknown to her he had been carrying on his person. Almost with his last breath he told her where to look and it is reported over the $2,000 in one hundred dollar bills was found by Mrs. Deschane hidden in her husband's shoe.

"The money will pay for my funeral," he is reported to have told his wife just before he died. Mr. Deschane had farmed in the Marlbank district for the greater part of his life. He retired from the farm 23 years ago and with his wife went to live at Ainsworth. Two years ago they moved back to Marlbank where they purchased a home at the edge of the village.

He had been suffering from a minor heart condition for some time but appeared in his usual health as he visited in the village only a few minutes before his death.

There is one adopted daughter, Mrs. Cameron MacDonald, who lives in Belleville. The funeral is being held Saturday afternoon from Marlbank United Church.

16 Additional District Wardens For Pickerel Run

Game inspectors in the Bay of Quinte district will clamp down hard on the illegal taking of pickerel during the pickerel run which begins tomorrow just now.

Warning that every effort will be made to offset poaching practices was given today by game inspector Fred MacDonald of Point Anne, who said that 16 additional men would patrol the area to guard against illegal fishing during the pickerel run.

Eligible of the additional men will be temporary wardens, while the other eight are Lands and Forests department patrolmen who are being brought into the district from the northern areas.

Mr. MacDonald said patrolling would be concentrated in the Bay of Quinte area reaching from Trenton in Napanee.

Pickerel Starting

The pickerel are just now starting to run and with the arrival of the various rivers to go upstream for spawning.

Benelis fishermen are active in the Moira and Thursday evening dozens of men were seen on the river bank opposite the Corbin Lock plant. They reported that a fairly good run.

Game inspectors were also on hand and during the week crowds to see that all regulations were adhered to. Temporary game inspectors hired for the pickerel season will not wear uniforms but will be in civilian clothes, it was stated.

These are no empty boasts, for Claude comes from a long line of French cooks. He has served the cream of society in the best hotels in France, England, the United States and Canada.

He won't tell his age, but his hair is turning white and there are several wrinkles on his friendly face. He has been in the business of feeding his friends for 33 years.

He lives in Toronto with his wife, but at home, he says:

"My wife don't let me into the kitchen."

Claude was appointed for this special feast by the French ambassador, Hugret Guerin, who insted his food in the King Edward would and instructed Ed in how to with Claude's cooking. He brought six cooks to the kitchen to help him prepare the feast. Topping it off is a special cream for dessert, built into a circle and filled with fresh, jumbo-sized strawberries.

"There, I will leave you the room," said Claude. The room was the eminent chefs' every dining room, site of the state dinner.

The lay-out was princely. Gold and silver dishes, brought from France, were piled at a table to the left of the door. Also at a gigantic tapestry, 600 feet square, covered one wall.

At the main table were grey leather chairs and others of wicker, painted with gold. Here different kinds of crystal stemware, to take five different kinds of wine, were at each of the table places. Even the wines were brought from France for the occasion.

Besides the wines, 10 different brands of cognac were brought across the Atlantic. Some were 90 and 80 years old.

Hundreds of hors d'oeuvres were prepared for a reception for 1,200 to precede the state dinner. In the kitchen were large pots of ham and thick slices of salmon for 40 invited newspapermen.

"A GOOD PLACE TO DEAL"

Telegram Says Govt. May Reduce Some Rentals

Toronto, April 6 — (CP) — The Telegram says today that the Ontario government may reduce rentals on some residential properties when it enters the rent-control field May 1.

In a newspage story, the newspaper says the province will extend the scope of present federal regulations to cover some properties freed from controls when the Canadian government relaxed its regulations during the last few years.

On the other hand, the story forecast "a better deal" for landlords whose premises have been subject to controls since 1941, when the province takes over.

Travel Minister Cecile, appointed chairman of Ontario's newly - formed Rent Control Board yesterday, said it will be at least a week before the board holds its first meeting.

But Attorney - General Porter said today that "exhorbitant rents" charged by some landlords will receive serious attention from the government and the legislature's select committee on rental regulations and that "action will be forthcoming shortly."

New Union Jack Flying Over OPP Headquarters

A new nylon Union Jack is flying over the Ontario Provincial Police office today, the new flag rather putting to shame those seen atop other flag poles in the city.

A week ago this newspaper in a news story brought attention to the rather dilapidated condition of some of the flags seen flying daily in the city. Mentioned in the article was the one flown at the O.P.P. office.

But staff members of the local police headquarters were quick to point out that it was not the newspaper article which was responsible for the new flag. And to prove it they showed correspondence dating back in February when the order for the new flags that had been sent out. And the flags were actually received in March.

The reason claimed for the late appearance of the new flag was that guy wires on the flagpole needed to be changed to avoid damage to the Union Jack as it was being raised and lowered.

News of Trenton

Government Kills Factory Site, Considers Town Vital to Defence

Trenton—(Special)— That the dominion government considered Trenton a target for enemy bombers brought home to the annual business meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the town hall last night. Secretary-manager Ivor Smith told the meeting that the federal government had stopped the locating of a plant producing war essentials because they felt Trenton, with the important airtraining centre next door, was a point that hostile aircraft would hit at in the event of another major conflict.

In the next breath, Mr. Smith said that Trenton afforded the choicest sites for industries not dependent solely on war contracts. He pointed out many of the advantages the corporation had to offer.

Retiring president T. L. McNeill, addressing the gathering, noted that his term of office seemed to pass very quickly, and referring to the progress the Chamber of Commerce has made while he was in office, he extended a hearty vote of thanks to directors and staff "for their splendid efforts and effort so willingly."

He predicted greater success for the organization in the coming year and branded criticism directed at the Chamber as "proof of healthy sign.

The financial report was read by treasurer Lon Oliver.

President Tom McNeill, chairman of the meeting, called for nominations for new officers. Ballots were passed around and when counted made their decision. The following were nominated: F. J. Ash, Art Chesterfield, H. Jack Clark, Frank Pillon, Gord Flynn, S. O. Graham, Tom Jones, Wm. Mc-Clung, Lon Oliver, Fred Parker, Gerald Weever, Lloyd Weese, Ramsey Ferris.

On Monday night the member to preside over the meeting in 1951 will be decided at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce office.

Charter Granted

In his address, secretary-manager Smith said that over 50 laws had been approved and that a charter of incorporation had been granted the Trenton organization. The charter covers Trenton proper and outlying areas of Murray, Batawa and Frankford.

He pointed out that many tourists had been welcomed in Trenton and that steps were being taken to get more visitors. The visitors this year with a folder, but to show them to the town and to R.C.A.F. Station. "We are assured by the Travel and Publicity department of the Ontario government that Trenton, the Trent River and the Trent Canal will receive the publicity they deserve," he said.

He mentioned that arrangements were being made to have the locks on the Trent canal open for the entire season. The locks were open only over weekend last year.

Reporting for the insurance coverage of the local Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Smith explained that over 55 employer members and over 120 individuals are now protected by the plan. "The first claim for an operation," he said, "has been made and will be paid within the next few days.

The secretary-manager also said that the Chamber of Commerce was conscious of the advantages of attracting new industries to Trenton. "We are hopeful that in the near future that we will be able to now announcing that a new industry will be located here," he said.

Industry Benefits

Mr. Smith spent a great deal of effort investigating the benefits an industry employing 150 people would afford the town of Trenton. He noted that directly and indirectly that industry would support 400 additional teachers; 33 new retail stores; a half a million dollars in yearly retail sales; 320 extra cars and services per day; and $2.50 per day in taxable valuation. The figures he quoted he said gave the people in the country generally from the provision of raw materials to the marketing of the finished product.

Speaking about the Chamber of Commerce, the civic defence plan, Mr. Smith declared: "We must tell the public the truth about the atomic bomb and other weapons of destruction. We must prepare ourselves for it but not hesitate. Every community must do some planning and should have a planning committee, composed of representative citizens. We must help. There is much to be done and much to learn. There are many potential targets and we are in a vulnerable district. One hundred thousand people in the Windsor area had to be evacuated without organization in advance. We must support our own, local defence committee"

RESORT HOTEL BURNS

Trout Lake, Mich., April 6 — (CP) — A $30,000 fire today destroyed a large resort hotel and a six-cabin building and for a time threatened the rest of this upper peninsula town 50 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie. Faulty wiring was blamed for the outbreak.

State police said the blaze levelled the Getzander Hotel and the neighboring building, both owned by Gerald Ostrander. The flames ecompelled nine women in this small resort and communication centre in the heart of the deer-hunting forests of northern Michigan.

Trenton—(Special)—Trapped in a sewer ditch here yesterday afternoon when it fell in around him, Frank Valyear, 54, is in hospital this morning suffering from a dislocated left hip and a minor fracture of the pelvis. Valyear was buried in dirt to his chin in the cave-in.

He was rescued by fellow town employees Charlie Horsburgh, William Webb and George Benson, and was then rushed to Trenton Memorial Hospital. Hospital authorities said this morning that Valyear was under the care of Dr. J. V. Rogers and was resting "fairly comfortably."

The man was laying tile in a ditch to lay a new sewer to the extension of north Trenton school. The men working with him said that there was no cribbing in the excavation, and the earth fell in around one out in the warm day, causing the cave-in. The ditch was six feet deep.

MACARTHUR

After reading MacArthur's letter to the House yesterday, Martin made it clear that there was no difference of opinion as far as the issue, Fie said:

"I think it is high time that the administration and the Pentagon came clean with the Congress and the American people."

The State Department, which has been openly unhappy on previous occasions over MacArthur's public statements on matters of diplomatic affairs, obviously was chagrined again. The general's latest writings had come to light at a time when American diplomats were trying to quiet the worry of allies over Chinese reaction to a new push into North Korea and they fail to note MacArthur's comment that "here we fight Europe's war with arms while the diplomats there still fight with words."

The military high command winced at this new pronouncement from the Tokyo command.

There was nothing to indicate that MacArthur had "cleared" his letter to Martin with Washington before sending the latter the writings, indeed directives, that all theatre commanders get such approval on matters involving high policy.

Train Bearing President Auriol Of France Passes Through City

The president of the Republic of France, Vincent Auriol, was in Belleville, this afternoon for a few minutes. Escorted by his 11-car train sat at the north station of the Canadian National Railways while his engine crew was changed.

Four Belleville men were involved in the crew changes, two of them, engineer W. G. McGee, and fireman Grady Gray, Jr., brought the train here from Toronto, and the other two were to take it through to Brockville.

A. E. Cornish was the engineer to replace McGee here, and the fireman accompanying him was J. D. Bronson. The rest of the crew, conductor W. D. Farrow and trainman A. W. Fargey and Lloyd Knox, all of Toronto, did not change here.

Railroad officials said this afternoon that after the crew change here, the train was scheduled to go right on through to Ottawa with a stop for dinner this tonight. "He has a clear track ahead of him," they said.

The French President is also accorded the French President's car, due to the little time available. Canadian National Railway dignitaries were travelling with him on the train, however. Sources here said that there were about 50 people on the train. Included in the 11 cars were those of the Governor-General and the Canadian government.

Problem of Commercial Area In Parkwood Heights Still Unsolved

Still another meeting with respect to development of a commercial area in the Parkwood Heights district was held at the city hall this morning and the meeting ending without anything of a concrete nature being decided upon.

But at the same time residents of the Parkwood Heights area and other interested parties were told that a decision on the proposed commercial area must soon be reached or council will not attempt to restrict commercial construction in the area.

Attending the meeting were interested residents of the area, land owner Bertram Docter, and members of city council.

When no decision was reached as to the type of commercial construction to be permitted, distance area from the street, and other factors, Mayor R. T. Potter requested that interested parties, including the planning committee of the city council, the regional planning board, consult and that same Mr. Docter get together and decide what they want and when decided upon present their proposition to council which attempt to implement it.

The mayor noted there was no planning board to council unless there was complete agreement as the municipal board would not otherwise pass any building by-law for the area.

The mayor further noted that unless agreement on the matter is reached soon there would be nothing to prevent commercial construction of any type in the

It is believed that the other car pulled out from a cloverleaf and turned into the wrong traffic lane. Mrs. Ketcheson, in telephone conversation with a Frankford resident last night, said that she believed a police car was following the other car, in an attempt to stop it. After the collision between the other car and the Ketcheson vehicle, a transport behind the latter car, in attempting to stop, jackknifed and hit the police car.

NEW DRIVERS' TESTS

Closer examination of persons applying for drivers' licences is being instituted in the city of Winnipeg ,and the move may indicate a trend in the country. If the results of the new tests are any indication of the type of people who are driving cars in these times, then it is certainly to be hoped that there is a new trend on the way.

Included in the Manitoba rules now are provisions for written examinations, a road test and psycho-physical tests. The first is a fine idea, although not of too great a value; the second is commonplace, and the third is something new. Written examinations have a limited value, because psychologists can prove and have proved that knowledge gained in a "cram session" before a written test is soon lost. It has little staying power.

On the other hand, knowledge that has been gained over a period of time will stay with the learner over a long period, and will be of some use to him. The "cram" lore does not remain long enough to be of much use.

Road tests are of more value, because they show what skill the applicant has available. It does not take long to determine what type of driver the applicant will be — the nervous type, the brash type, or the cool, sensible type. Skill in handling the automobile is apparent from the first drive, but it may improve, and usually does improve, with practice.

Psycho-physical tests, however, may be more worthwhile. Since there is no exact explanation of the nature of the tests, we can only assume what they will incorporate. That being the case, it is reasonable to believe that they will include a straight physical examination to determine the health and general condition of the applicant.

This is an angle often overlooked in driving tests, and indeed, until paraplegics were given permission to drive specially-equipped autos after the war, was hardly considered at all. Now it is realized that the man with a bad heart condition may be a menace to himself and others on the road; that the driver whose nerves are not too steady may not be reliable in a tight spot; and that physical defects normally hidden from the layman's eye may well be brought out in times of stress.

The psychological part of the tests, it may be assumed, will have to do with the mental condition of applicants, and their capacity of mind. The fact that 34.1 per cent of the first 1,314 applicants tested failed the course is an indication that either the system is too strict, or that today's drivers are not too competent.

We are inclined to believe the latter. One has only to drive on Ontario's highways to realize that a more strict system of issuing drivers' licences in this province would bring about a better accident-safety record. Regular reviewing of permits would help to weed out the potentially dangerous drivers, and would, in effect, protect the innocent travellers on the road.

That more than one-third of the applicants failed the test is shocking, and is an indication against the capacities of the drivers of Winnipeg. Even worse, however, is the condition that other cities may find themselves — sheer ignorance of the situation, because they do not know their accident-potential.

BLOOD IS NEEDED

An example that Belleville citizens might well take to heart in the autumn of this year has been set by a Montreal man who has donated twenty-two gallons of glood to the Red Cross. The Mobile Blood Donor Clinic of the organization will be in this city in October. It deserves all the support Belleville citizens can muster.

R. C. Hulme, of Montreal, has made a total of 103 donations, a mark for anyone to shoot at, in hospitals as widely separated as Singapore and London. Officials advise that blood should not be given more than four times each year (that is, three months between donations), which means that Mr. Hulme has been giving for at least years.

Giving blood is a simple matter. Prior to the Second World War, it was classed in the same scale as going to the dentist or having a minor operation — it was an ordeal of sorts. Then, when it became a large-scale operation in order to build up banks of plasma for armed force use, it became more of a duty and less of an ordeal to donate blood.

The pins that the Red Cross passed out to civilians during wartime for achieving a certain number of donations have disappeared from coat lapels now, but the work goes on. Red Cross services in the civilian field last year were working hard at Rimouski, Cabano and Winnipeg, when fires and floods brought misery to thousands.

Since Korea, the organization has been operating in war fields again, continuing the service it rendered during the war. Its needs are just as great now as they were six or seven years ago, and the response should be just as great.

A pint of blood is little enough to give. A healthy body replaces the lost blood in a few hours, and general health is not impaired. Squeamish persons got over their problems of the needle during the war by turning their heads and baring their arms to the doctors and nurses.

Belleville citizens could do worse than turn and bare their arms again when the time comes.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The American newspapers and magazines lately have been publishing spreads of photographs of the chief figures in the Kefauver crime and gambling enquiry now proceeding. When you look at these collections of beauties from what you might call the sport world of the United States, you have a sense of having seen them before. The same hard, smug faces of men in their forties, fifties.

This feeling of recognition on your part may be due to sub-conscious recollection of the similar spreads of photographs the same magazines carried ten years ago of the Nazi and Fascist war-lords of Europe.

In every community in the world, not only in the big cities, but in even the small towns and rural counties, there are at all times the makings of some sort of lawless band. Tirelessly pushing from below, against law and order, and against the established system set up by the majority of us, is this element of the amoral, unmoral and immoral. They are not exactly the outcasts of our society, such as it is; but rather the misfits. They have intelligence; but it does not readily fit into any niche in our system. They have energy; but they can't channel it into any of the accepted grooves. They have ambition; but they have been unable to find any vehicle for their advancement in the way things are arranged in their own personal relation to the community. Patience is what they lack above all. Give a man some intelligence, considerable energy and the spirit of ambition, and his patience can conceivably give out before he finds, by constant trial and error, the means to satisfy all three characteristics. That is where crime, graft, cheating and skulduggery come into the picture.

Never fear: what has happened to many countries of the world in the current generation can happen to us, if we are not alert. We have the makings of the equivalent of the Nazi party among ourselves. And brother, they all look like the gents Mr. Kefauver is digging up; or the ones Hitler assembled.

Just Another Day's Work For Test Pilot

Toronto, April 6 (CP) —"Being a test pilot's wife, you just have to keep your courage in both hands," Mrs. Lois Warren, 28, said Thursday on learning her husband, Flt. Lt. Bruce Warren, was killed in the crash of a jet plane near London Ont.

"Bruce left at 8 o'clock this morning," she said. "It was just another day's work for him." She was holding her baby, Douglas in her arms. Douglas was crying.

The Warrens bought a house here last October. "Now it looks as though I'll have to get a buyer," Mrs. Warren said, beginning to cry.

She said she will take the baby home to Wetaskiwin, Alta., where she and Bruce Warren went to school together and were married five years ago.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

RULE BY MOB

Let us all squat about the camp-fire tonight and consider the strange case of those poor, bewildered clucks who stood idly by last week while two youngsters came near to perishing before their eyes.

As you'll have doubtless read, the youngsters' sailboat overturned in the frigid bay, somebody phoned for help and soon a large crowd of spectators, all presumably wringing their hands in dismay, gathered upon the shore to watch the pair in their agony.

Into this limp crowd, by chance, came a pair of plumbers, a breed of men who thrive (at $1.60 an hour) on emergencies. Run up the flag for all plumbers!

Well, sir, these two birds—Russell and Hutchinson, by name—took a look at the situation and instead of quietly taking their places in the suffering, helpless throng, they hot-footed it to the nearest boat-house, broke down the locked door, got a rowboat and reached the kids just in time.

One of the rescuers, when it was all over, is reported to have made some remark about what lackadaisical bunch" and, in view of the circumstances, that is surely moderate language, especially for a plumber.

The incident is one that interests me because it demonstrates so dramatically the uncertain temper of a crowd. One might spend a lifetime of study and never solve the imponderables of mob psychology.

Only a week before I'd seen another example. Gazing down into the street from my fourth-floor office, I watched an old and shabby fel'ow falter in his stride and sink to his knees on the pavement. A dozen or more pedestrians had paused and gone on, glancing back over their shoulders, before the cop on the corner noticed the trouble and came over to do his duty.

The Destroyer

At times a crowd can be a frightening and senseless thing. The mobs chanting "Seig Heil" to Hitler's controlled hysteria were that and so, too, are the crowds that gather on the scenes of tragedies in our town.

Some years ago I went out on a suicide story A young man., temporarily insane because of an unrequited love, had leaped from the roof of a down town building, paying his final respects to womanhood.

When the photographer and I reached the alley where the broken sack of his body lay we had to make our way through a thick crowd of spectators. The crowd stood stolidly there, staring down on the sprawled figure with the coat thrown over the face.

Later, I had no conscious memory of the faces of the onlookers, yet I knew there was something about them that had chilled me. I went to the photographer's dark room and watched him make his print. As the picture took form in the solution we saw, first, the body, capsized in the foreground, and, beyond, the rows of faces, many of them wearing strange, vapid smiles.

Individually, these people would be normal citizens, I suppose, but the presence of a mob seems to drain away the individual's personality and character and the human race is always observed at its worst when some event causes a clot in the normal stream of movement.

Once an air raid warden in London told me of a discovery he had made during the naked terror of the German air raids in the earlier years of the war. People, he said, lost all capacity for individual decision and action when en masse. They moved as a mob, following the first sign of leadership, whether it came from strength or weakness, order or panic.

This is the real reason why even the most modern armies are never without the seemingly archaic business of endless foot drills. The idea is to instill a sense of discipline so that when a moment of indecision comes the instinct will be to follow the leader.

With Laughter

Fortunately, the tragic ease with which an individual's character is numbed by mob rule is seldom seen except in the lighter vein.

Recently, in talking to Ivan Ackery, one of Canada's least inhibited showmen, he recalled an occasion on which he had placed a large barrel on a busy street corner. A sign on the barrel warned that the day was Friday, the 13th, and not to look inside. Inside—need I add? —was some advertising for a movie then playing at Ivan's palace.

The street throngs, he recalled, reacted in a pattern. The pedestrians would eye the barrel and the sign suspiciously, but make no move to take a peek. Yet when one person stopped to look, a throng gathered immediately.

I remembered the day, too, when a traffic light on the town's busiest corner stuck. Pedestrians with the "Go" signal filed across the street in an unbroken stream. Those with the light against them were bunched on the curb long after it became obvious that the lights were not going to change. They stood there uncertain, eyeing each other with emberrassment, until one man (a plumber, perhaps?) made the break. And then all they, like sheep, filed after him. I remember the incident vividly because I was among those who waited.

It is surely a strange feeling to know that this indecision, and the mass hypnosis induced by two youngsters in trouble, lie behind the bland, expressionless faces of the hurrying crowds in the streets this bright spring day.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SENTIMENT

I once sat near to where President Wilson was addressing a crowd. I recall but one sentence from what was an inspiring talk. It was this: "Ladies and gentlemen, the greatest things in life are the things of sentiment." When we think of the many acts that are influenced by sentiment, how lives are often changed and inspired by it, its great power is recognized.

Millions of things of no intrinsic value are tucked away in safe places in homes merely because of their sentimental value. Things like tiny baby shoes, photographs, prized letters, inscribed books, and other articles. A sentimental value may far exceed all monetary value.

Tucked away in a little safe place of mine is a little book of mine. It is only two and a half inches tall, and was printed in Boston in 1801. It is therefore one hundred and fifty years old, but as such it is not a valuable book, for many older in age are relatively common but this little book has an inscription in it from my great, great grandfather to my grandmother, his daughter and when she was but a small girl. Outside the fact that it is a beautiful small book its value is purely sentimental to me, but I would not part with it for anything.

In my small collection of manuscripts is one of a long poem by James Russell Lowell, the American poet. It was written to his sweetheart whom he later married and inspired by her love he wrote this poem about some pressed flowers. I believe it originally appeared in the Atlantic Monthly.

It's sentiment that keeps thousands of flower shops in business all over the land. How wonderfully beautiful is the silent sentiment of a flower! It often tells more than any word could. I like to pause before one of these shops and watch the faces of those who also stop to look at the beautiful displays of these silent friends of man. Flowers talk to the heart. And that is what sentiment is—the language of the heart.. It is the one universal language that every human being understands.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SPRING AND SPROUTING

"At this season of the year I intend to refill my pen triple-strength—to shut-ins, newspapers (many never reach print)—to the clergy and laymen alike! It has been my contribution several years, and the lowly penny-card sows additional seed along the route! Seed—picked by One who planned a long way ahead, with implicit confidence in the harvest at a crucial point in history—something shared with neighbors! Not memorized, but utilized! Not musty dogmas, but living, powerful, wonderful! Another grandson this week—making four good reasons for my renewed interest in a future to be proud of."

Thus writes one of the readers of this column. Living in a small village she makes it a point to write messages of hope on penny post cards and send them to people who she thinks will be helped by receiving them. And undoubtedly they are. Seed cast to the wind and allowed to fall whefe the wind scatters it, will surely take root and grow.

We do not need position in order to be helpful.

Scatter a few such seeds around your neighborhood and see if the spring season will not cause them to sprout and the summer bring them to fruitfulness.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

THE GOLDEN RULE OF HYGIENE

At first blush it may seem far-fetched to associate the Gospel of St. Matthew with the science and are of keeping well or preventing disease. But the fundamentals of hygiene were included in the sermon on the mount, especially in that injunction recorded in St. Mathew, 7, 12:

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that any man should do to you, do ye even so to them.

It's like this. Any one with the intelligence of a normal eight-year-old child resents being coughed or sneezed at, and any one who is not an imbecile or a moron knows it is impolite or rude to cough or sneeze in the presence of other persons without covering nose and mouth to prevent spraying or spattering others with moisture droplets expelled by cough or sneeze.

One with the intelligence quotient of a high schol freshman knows or should know that it is not only unpleasant to feel the impact of sneeze or cough spray or droplets in the face, but that it is dangerous and may prove fatal. For instance, it is the usual way the common respiratory infections spread from one person to another—the germs or virus of the disease are carried in the moisture droplets directly to mouth or nost of the next victim. Since nobody, not even the doctor, can tell with reasonable certainty, what an alleged "cold" (I apologize for use of this term, but so many of you nice, in Webster's sense 1, people would not understand if I said C-R-I here) will turn out to be the only safe course in the early hours or days of the illness or indisposition, is to assume it is, say, the onset of infantile paralysis, meningitis or measles and try to keep out of range.

The effective range of open-face cough or sneeze spray is up to ten or twelve feet. The effective range of ordinary conversation spray is less than five feet. So, if you can contrive to keep your face five feet or more away from the suspect you are out of range of conversation spray.

The only protection against open-face sneeze or cough spray in an ordinary room is a suitable mask.

In view of the fact that the C-R-I (kree), that is, any and all of the common respiratory infections—acute coryza, acute sore throat, tonsillitis, acute bronchitis, pneumonia, measles, scarlet fever, diptheria, influenza, grip, infantile parlysis, acute cerebro-spinal meningitis, whooping cough, mumps, rheumatic fever and in many cases chickenpox and smallpox; and in view of the fact that the C-R-I- in most instances may or does escape recognition because patient and/or doctor choose to attribute the symptoms to "cold"; and in view of the fact that, as was confirmed by a survey made by the U. S. Public Health Service, these Common Respiratory Infections and their complications or sequels are responsible for three fourths of all the illness attended by physicians; in short, in the name of honesty and common sense, isn't it about time that doctors and people put aside this childish concept of "cold" as an ailment or disease and apply a little of our boasted scientific knowledge to the prevention of respiratory infection?

Let no sophomoron, lay or professional, try to shrug off these facts as pipedreams of mine. Every point I have made or implied is supported by medical authorities—and if any physician or health officer take issue with this statement of the facts I am prepared to cite authorities.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Dreadful Truth

When a person goes to a medical doctor for to have the blood pressure taken or for a heart test is it necessary to tell the doctor their right age? A friend says it is but I say it ain't. (A. M. K.)

Answer—A person shouldn't go to a doctor for measurement of blood pressure or for a heart test. Leave such matters to the doctor's judgment. Go to the doctor for professional opinion, advice or treatment. The doctor who examines a patient knows how old the patient is.

Tuberculosis Not Inherited

A claims tuberculosis is heriditary. B claims it is not. A child whose father died of tuberculosis six years ago does not look very well. (Mrs. M. E.)

Answer—It is not inherited. But any child or youth who has lived in a house or apartment with a tuberculosis patient may have contracted the disease and should be watched and regularly examined by the doctor.

CAMPBELLFORD

Earle Nelson Heads Northumberland Jr. Farmers' Organization

Campbellford— At the annual meeting of the Northumberland Junior Farmers' organization, held in Brighton on Monday night, Mr. Earle Nelson of Campbellford, was elected president for the year 1951.

President Helen Davidson, reviewed the activities of the year which consisted of some social occasions, a sports day, church service, two tractor driving competitions and the judging competition, at Roseneath. Secretary-treasurer, Evelyn Finlay, read the minutes and the financial statement, showed the organization in good shape. Miss Jean Noble, Home Economist of the Department of Agriculture, made a brief report on her work. R. C. Sanbury, requested co-operation in staging tea gids' and boys' clubs which is the largest number ever attempted in Northumberland County.

The feature speaker was Miss Freda McCulloch, of Campbellford, who told of her activities in girls' club work, the winning of the Inter-County competition at Guelph last fall and the going through to the National Competition in which Northumberland County placed third. The experience of meeting groups from all provinces and the organized trips to Niagara and Ottawa were looked on as highlights. From the fine way the paper was presented, one realized few girls could hope to make a better showing in club work.

The girl delegates selected to attend the Guelph conference on April 22 to 24th were Mary Dorland, Freda McCulloch, Leila McColl and Doreen Dorland. The boys who will represent the county are Neil Adams, Alfred Gooding, Nell O'Connell and Roswell Mann.

DECLINE SAID "TRAGIC"

Toronto, April 8 — (CP)—The decline of Canada's sheep population was described as "tragic" Thursday by W. P. Watson, livestock commissioner for Ontario.

Addressing a luncheon meeting of Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers Ltd., Mr. Watson said that under present conditions, particularly on Ontario farms, it is necessary to concentrate on larger flocks and that sheep husbandry a specialized business.

There was plenty of room for expansion for the reason was the need for more meat to meet demands of Canada's higher standard of living.

SAVES LIFE OF CHUM

Lindsay, April 6 — (CP) Five-year-old Jackie Copeland yesterday saved the life of a three-year-old chum. Jackie called his father when he spotted Paul Fawcett struggling in the landlord's backyard pool. Father and son pulled Paul from the pool and called firemen who revived him.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT

Uxbridge, Ont., April 6 (CP)—Provincial police said last night the fatal shooting of Ronald Burnell, 16, Tuesday in the bedroom of his home was an accident.

BRITAIN

Little more than two weeks ago a brief statement was drafted and reported agreed on. It would have said mainly that the U.N. had put down the aggression in south Korea and that the way was open to talk peace, with a cease-fire generally on the line of the 38th Parallel.

Shortly after this statement was circulated for final clearance and apparently after Truman had agreed he would make it, MacArthur visited the front and issued his offer of willingness to meet the Chinese communist commander in the field for peace-talks. He also implied that if the Chinese did not agree to negotiate, they could expect crushing attacks on China itself.

This was so much more dramatic than anything that had been planned for Truman that the 14 countries had to decide whether to issue their document at all. They determined to go ahead and it was then the trouble with Britain arose.

According to diplomatic informants, Britain long delayed any reply to the U.N. draft proposal and then let it be known informally that she believed the statement might make a fairly-concrete peace gesture.

The United States, however, took the position the U.N. coalition would lose rather than gain by appearing to beg the Chinese communists for peace at a time when U.N. forces had demonstrated their superior striking power in the field.

Officials said it seems unlikely that the U.S. and Britain would be able to compromise the issue.

AURIOL PLEDGES

The Ambassador and Madame Hubert Guerin took second place with the French president and his lady entertained in honor of the Governor-General of Canada and Viscountess Alexander.

They had 66 dinner guests made up of cabinet members and their wives, political party leaders, members of the Senate and Judiciary and representatives of the municipality and the press.

Only 1,200 invitations were issued and apparently all were used. For more than an hour the brilliantly-attired guests milled through the great lower hall and moved directly up the grand stairway to the ballroom where the President and Mme. Auriol received with ambassador and Mme. Guerin.

The presidential party left immediately after the hand-shaking to take a special train for today's functions in Toronto.

UNIFORM FREIGHT

Cabinet members objected to a debate at the time, and Speaker Ross MacDonald ruled it out after the government had promised to open up an opportunity to discuss the tests issue Monday.

Asks Govt. Action

Attempts were made by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and J. S. Sinnett (Liberal), Peel, to move that the Commons sidetrack all business to talk of the high cost of living as a matter of "urgent public importance". M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, also had a motion of his own ready but supported Mr. Drew's when the Progressive Conservative leader got the floor.

Mr. Drew's motion said the new index record called for government action to halt inflation, hold down the cost of living and restore confidence in the Canadian dollar."

Trade Minister Howe, Finance Minister Abbott and Works Minister Fournier, Liberal House leader, joined in decrying the urgency of an immediate debate.

Mr. Howe contended further that the necessary urgency was removed from the issue by the fact that the index figures were "four or five weeks old."

Conceded Figures Old

Mr. Drew retorted this was the first chance the House had to debate them. There was nothing affecting Canadians that called for such urgent consideration as the "runaway inflation". Members should be given the chance to express their views on whether the living-cost trend should be dealt with by the government.

Mr. Coldwell conceded yesterday's figures were some weeks old but added that "since then (Feb. 1) we've had more of this runaway inflation." It affected the welfare of the great mass of the Canadian people.

Mr. Fournier said it was not urgent for members to tell the government that the cost-of-living index had gone up 4.5 points.

"It's not by your speeches that you make the government take action," he said.

"Parliament goes out the window", interjected Gordon Graydon (PC—Peel), deputy Progressive Conservative leader.

"The fact that we can't get the government to act is not saying the emergency does not exist," Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East) said. He added the matter was one of "particular urgency" that could not be left over.

During his transport speech, Mr. Fournier said he does not favor a suggestion by Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra) that the commission report should be studied by a Commons committee. He said any legislation on the subject would go to committee for study.

Another proposal of the Vancouver member was that a commission should be established to study effects of the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway.

NEW LAWS

Premier Frost's budget, brought down in mid-session provided for a record $265,000,000 expenditure and a $598,000 surplus in the coming year. It called for no new or increased taxes and a 5½-per-cent reduction in the hospitals amusement tax.

Among new expenditures listed were $2,000,000 for free public school text books, $1,500,000 in hospital grants to help pay for indigent patients, and construction grants of $1,000 per bed for old age homes built by charitable or religious organizations.

Two important select legislature committees were named to meet after the session.

A five-man group appointed yesterday under Travel and Publicity minister Louis Cecile will advise the government on any necessary changes in federal-provincial tax agreements Ottawa will take over on May 1.

A seven-man group under Attorney-General Porter will investigate the administration of criminal justice, and has been instructed to take such measures as it sees fit to control gambling and the transmission of gambling information.

The government has also announced it will appoint a committee of up to nine persons as an advisory group to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

One important measure—drafted and passed in near-record time to meet a threatened milk price increase—named a consumer representative to the milk control board and gave the board power to set maximum wholesale and retail prices on milk and milk products, except butter and cheese.

Workmen's Act Amended

Amendments were made to the Workmen's Compensation Act to reduce the waiting period for benefits from seven to five days, increase the maximum weekly on which payments can be made from $3,000 to $4,000, and increase death benefits for dependants of workmen fatally injured on the job.

As in every legislature, some things were god done, thirty-six of the 161 bills introduced were dropped by the wayside or left on the order paper. A few of them were government bills dropped to make way for others but most of the opposition members' bills either were defeated or shelved.

No action was taken on the Hope Royal Commission report on education, published last year. Premier Frost said early in the session that it was too early to weigh its recommendations.

The report's majority recommendations dealing with separate schools were attacked by Aurele Chartrand (L—Ottawa East), who said the $300,000 cost of the commission would better have been left unspent. Implementation of the recommendations, he said, would destroy amicable relations between French and English-speaking citizens of Canada.

Favors Agreement

The premier referred to two questions now requiring constitutional amendment.

Ontario was in favor of reaching agreement as soon as possible on ways to reach agreement on the pension plan, he said, and he would attempt to solve outstanding differences between the provinces on an amendment to that end.

Of the second matter of whether provinces should adopt a three-per-cent federal turnover tax he said: "That government is anything but enthusiastic about indirect taxation."

Lieutenant-Governor Ray Lawson entered the chamber in the closing minutes of the session to give royal assent to 122 bills passed by session. He had given assent to three other bills in mid-session.

At the top of the list was "social" legislation — laws to provide against employment discrimination on the grounds of race, creed or color, to provide for equal pay to men and women doing the same work, to give women the right to sit on juries.

Middle of Road Position

The question of federal-provincial relations occupied much of Mr. Frost's speech.

In the matter of constitutional amendment, he said, Ontario held a position "in the middle of the road" between provinces who wanted amendments apart from matters of language, schools, religions and minority rights—sanctioned by a set majority of provinces and those who wanted the whole rigid formula of unanimous consent.

"I have found my own personal position to be very similar to that of Mr. St. Laurent," Mr. Frost said.

Of two proposed amendments to the constitution dealing with old-age pensions and indirect sales taxes, Ontario was in favor of the pension agreement.

However, he added, "this government is anything but enthusiastic about indirect sales taxes."

But the federal government and the other nine provinces were in general agreement on the constitutional changes for sales taxes, and Ontario could not very well veto their wishes.

Food Sheets Tell How to Stretch Family Dollars

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 6 — Pamphlets flattened recently on envelopes containing family allowance cheques — telling Canadian mothers how to stretch their food dollars.

The green sheets held the Health Department's recommendations for bucking the rising cost of living. There were several sensible hints. Housewives were urged to make their own relishes and salad dressings; supplement whole milk with skim milk, fluid or powdered; use grade B eggs for baking; serve fish, eggs, cheese, beans, liver, kidney, heart or tongue instead of roast and chops, and do their own bakings.

Distribution of the first several thousand pamphlets evoked letters from only nine recipients. These included one from a bakery firm which complained about the home baking recommendation.

The Health Department does not make a habit of including pamphlets with its family allowance cheques. In fact these bulletins are not distributed more than once or twice a year. It wouldn't be psychologically sound to distribute them more frequently.

Those in the know say it's human nature to turn to reading material that's always there. On the other hand an occasional pamphlet whets the immediate interest.

Nutrition experts in the Federal Health Department say it's time to get away from the secret tea leaf idea when considering the diet of older persons.

"We think very strongly that old persons need more protein than they are accustomed to eating," said one official. He explained this partly is because of a "slowing down" of the metabolism.

"Old persons rationalize themselves out of their prostate," he said. "They say meat is hard to digest, cheese is constipation, milk is for the babies."

While they should be eating a variety of foods, they tend to "narrow their diets down more and more."

High Ovens

Do you prefer a stove with a high oven to the low ones that manufacturers now are putting on the market? It would help many women do.

The Canadian Association of Consumers has a survey under way to determine family preference on this matter. It grew out of complaints from several housewives that they are unable to buy "high oven" ranges.

Members still are flooding C. A. C. headquarters with their views, and so far most of them favor the high ovens.

Suggestions from Canadian housewives soon may be cutting kitchen costs in the industrial design committee of the National Gallery. At the suggestion of this committee the C. A. C. asked its

St. Andrew's Church Friendship Group Holds Spring Tea

An attractive spring tea and novelty sale was held yesterday afternoon in the Sunday School rooms of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, under the leadership of the Friendship Group.

Mrs. J. G. Gibson, Mrs. M. W. Taylor and Mrs. W. D. Adam received the numerous guests at the door, and graciously welcomed them into a tower replete with apple blossoms.

The long tea table was daintily appointed with a white damask cloth, centred by a pink and white floral display and flanked by tall pink and white tapered candleholders, while each of the small quartet tables had its white cloth and centrepiece of tiny apple blossoms.

Those who presided at the silver services were, Mrs. A. Hill, Mrs. R. S. Hill, Mrs. J. Goodfellow and Mrs. C. Templer. The tea hostess was Mrs. R. Elliott, and Mrs. Ross Thompson, Mrs. Hugh and Mrs. G. Therne, assisted by their group members.

The novelty table, in charge of Mrs. H. Brown and Mrs. C. Broomfield, was most attractive in its manifold display of objects, both useful as well as ornamental.

The treasurers were Mrs. C. Templar and Mrs. W. McCreary.

A lovely tea, splendidly conceived, Mush credit is also due to Mrs. G. Robertson and Mrs. G. Smith who had charge of the decorating motif.

19,000 members for ideas on improved design for household articles, and they're getting plenty.

One housewife asked for "an egg-beater that doesn't spill out of the bowl." Another suggested "plastic lamp - shades without aluminum trimming" in order that all parts of the shade may be washed."

Catholic Women's League Sponsors Springtime Tea

One of the most successful teas, under the auspices of Belleville sub-division of the Catholic Women's League of Canada, was held at the home of Mrs. F. G. Guthing, 36 Queen Street, on Wednesday last. This was the big final event of the outgoing executive and was indeed the highlight of their term of office.

The guests were admitted by little Miss Jane Patterson, with Miss Catharine Patterson conducting them to the guests' rooms upstairs to leave their wraps. Mrs. D. V. Doyle, C.W.L. president, greeted with Mrs. Guthing and Mrs. Nelson Patterson, a visiting hostess.

Mrs. G. W. Philbin invited to the tea room. Here, in the lovely landscape mirror over the mantel was reflected a sparkling scene of gracious hospitality. The tea table was beautifully appointed with silver centre bowl of yellow daffodils, pale into deep mauve shades of evergreens with fern flanked by triple silver candelabra holding yellow and mauve candles with white lacey collars. Silver services gleamed in the soft candlelight at either end of the table, over a hand-crocheted cerse cloth.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mrs. M. J. O'Callaghan and Mrs. Gordon Corbett, Mrs. Geo. Lee and Mrs. F. Domenico, Mrs. C. J. Murry, and Mrs. H. Carr-Brainf. The servers included are Mrs. V. Carroll, Mrs. Geo. O'Brien, Mrs. Jos. Lynch, Mrs. E. Haines and Mrs. L. Shiels. Mrs. F. Deacon with Mrs. A. Cowan replenished and Mrs. J. Vinkle made the tea.

Mrs. M. J. Kennedy with Mrs. G. Donoghue and Mrs. A. Wilkinson did a fascinating business at the homebaking table. A bountiful assortment of the most delicious delicacies was completely disposed of.

Miss Alice Doyle sold chances on the lovely bath towels and the table arrangement of spring flowers, which were won by Mrs. L. Shields and Miss Ethel Barrett.

Mrs. M. Stork was custodian of the set of cornishes jewellery and this went to Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick. Mrs. A. Lynch was the lucky winner of the exquisite fruit bowl of crystal, entagtio etched with colored flowers. Mrs. Harold Barrett sold the tickets on this. This lovely affair, so largely attended, was convened by the Hospitality committee of the League, which includes Mrs. J. V. Doyle, Mrs. R. A. Flynn and Mrs. J. R. Logan.

Mrs. H. R. Burley was treasurer.

Fashion Flashes

NO IN-BETWEEN lengths mark the new evening dresses. Either skirts are quite short and very full, or else they are floor-length. In the latter length is an exquisite dress of pale pink silk organdie with large single calla lilies scattered over the skirt. Quilted appliqued lilies trim the simple bodice top.

KIND THOUGHTS for slim budgets are well expressed in a group of bridesmaid dresses that are perfect for dancing evenings later. Pastel net makes a bare-top, floor-length gown with allucked bodice and flower trim in matching tone. For cover-up there's a ruffle-edged capelet which can be worn later as an apron over the evening dress.

COLORFUL HATS are liked with dark suits. A silky, smooth straw in pale blue makes a soft-crowned bonnet trimmed with a soft twist of violet velvet ribbon, with bows and long ends in back.

SMALL FRY have their own versions of the popular duster ensemble. A crisp duster cost in white has short sleeves with facing, collar and cuffs of plaid gingham. Gingham is used for the sleeveless blouse and pleated skirt that make up the accompanying dress.

AN ADDITION, and a very nice one, to the spring suit parade is the suit with the cape bolero. Navy novelty woolien makes a pretty suit, the bolero and its wide, cape sleeves lined with white silk surah pin-dotted in navy. The same silk fabric is used for a simple, short-sleeved blouse top. There's a pocket at the side-front of the peg-top skirt.

THERE'S EASE and casual charm in a group of fine lisse-weight, worsted jersey dresses in delicate pastels. The dresses are set on simple chemise lines with surplice necklines. The necklines are held by bread contour belts of leather to tone, and long stoles of the fabric add a finishing touch.

SMART WAY to whip up an important ensemble is with a good black and white or navy sleeves. It is worn with a matching wrap-around navy pique skirt.

NOVELTY shapes are many in the new millinery collections—some bizarre, others wearable. One model features an upward-curving, shovel-like brim, that is most becoming. While grosgrain is used for the body of the hat and the under-side of the brim is faced in black velvet. Deep white grosgrain ties at the temple hold the hat securely to the head, and from beneath the soaring brim a black dotted veil extends to the nose.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

Sin Is Something Real

By ROY L. SMITH

It is not uncommon to hear modern sophisticates laugh at the idea of sin, and say that it is an "invention of the priests." The educated however, is more clever than it is intelligent. The truly scientific mind accepts very frankly the idea of sin, and undertakes to provide salvation, for sin is something very real in the life of every person.

An Ancient Explanation

In today's Sunday school lesson we have an ancient explanation of the fact of sin written down by one who had given careful thought to the subject, and who had seen great light.

The Sunday School lesson for April 8: "The Beginnings of Sin." Genesis 3:1-5:5; 6:5-9:17.

There are those who accept the story of Genesis as actual history. There are others who prefer to think of it as the effort of an ancient thinker to put a profound truth into story form so that the untrained minds for whom he was writing might be able to understand.

It makes little difference which of these two approaches we follow in providing a motive at the truth. Sin is something that destroys the human soul.

The Psychologists See It

The psychologists have wrestled very frankly with the problem of sin and, in general, have come out at about the same position occupied by the theologians. They have used a different terminology, and have talked in a scientific vocabulary, but their thinking is very much the same.

They have much to say about the necessity of removing the "sense of guilt." This is exactly what the preachers have talked about for hundreds of years.

They have discussed learnedly on the subject of complexes and inhibitions, and the preachers have talked about hatreds, lusts, and "the desires of the flesh." There really isn't much difference between the two ideas.

The psychologists have described frustrations and fears, and the preacher has urged his hearers to "have faith". It is all very closely related.

Sin, to a psychologist, is a disruption of the normal functioning of the human mind. To the theologian it is a defiance of the laws of God which results in a disintegration of the human spirit.

The Techniques May Vary

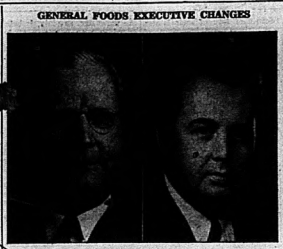
The old time revivalist exhorted his hearers to come down to the altar, make a clean and complete confession to Almighty God, and accept pardon.

The modern psychiatrist tries to persuade his patient to "drain his mind." He points out to him the effect of wrong thinking, of early mental mistakes, and their resulting fears. He tries to bring the festering mass of false ideas up to the surface where they can be looked at and dismissed. At times he sounds almost like an evangelist, except that he points to no sawdust trail, and uses a strange vocabulary.

The Beginnings of Sin

The scripture in this week's Sunday school lesson makes it very plain that the sinning began in the thinking. This same doctrine is taught repeatedly in the scripture. Jesus' own teachings on this subject are perfectly plain. The psychologists agree with him when he says that the acting begins with the thinking.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." "Keep the heart with all diligence, for out of it cometh the issues of life." "He that looseth after a woman to lust hath committed adultery with her in his heart already."



It is all in agreement with the scientist who says, "Watch your thinking, because you are what you think."

Pipers Play Out Last Hamilton Streetcars

Hamilton, April 6—(AP)—The soulful wail of the lament played by highland pipers will set the musical background today for the last clattering ride of Hamilton's streetcars.

When the last trams loaded with dignitaries and veteran operators roll over the belt line and pull into the car barns they will mark the end of a transportation era in this rapidly-growing industrial city of some 170,000 population.

The rumbling streetcars and their clanging bells will be replaced by diesel buses which will fill in until Hamilton gets its trolley buses into operation.

Streetcars have been the major means of public transportation here since Dr. Lewis Springer and John Irwin started their trolley system back in 1874.

For the first 20 years horse-drawn cars were used. In those days it wasn't unusual for the driver to stop his car and obligingly wait, while a householder ran into a grocery store or butcher shop to pick up the family order. Ended in 1892

The horse-drawn era ended in 1892 when 23 electric cars went into operation. The new-fangled cars were starting for a time to both passengers and horses.

One of the wildest episodes in Hamilton's transportation history was in 1906 when employees went on strike demanding increased pay and union recognition.

When strike-breakers were brought in, the men pelted the cars with stones and sticks and

Mackenzie's Column Economic Survey In Britain Presents Grim Picture

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The British government has informed its people that the country must go on walking the economic tightrope as long as it is compelled to continue its defensive rearmament program.

The annual official economic survey presents a grim picture of much further austerity to a people who already had had a bitter decade of it. Experts figure it will take four or five years more to finish the rearmament program, even if war is averted.

This burden is imposed on a people who have no fat left on their bones. It would be a tough program on any country, even if there were fat to burn.

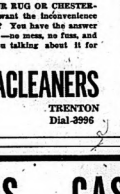
Blame for this critical position is laid squarely on the menace of Russian armies. That charge, by the way, must be taken as a back-handed admission that the Bolshevist "cold war" is meeting with some success in causing economic difficulties among the democracies. Britain isn't by any means the only one hard hit by the necessity of arming against implied or actual red threats.

All United

An important aspect of this position in Britain is that all political parties are united on carrying out the rearmament program. The program isn't a political issue at all, despite the ceaseless efforts of the Conservatives to cause the downfall of the Labor government.

The British standard of living has become low. This isn't a new development, as I see it, but one which really began back in the First World War and has grown worse with passing time.

The country had a high standard up to the First World War, living on the bequests of its ancestors, so to speak. But the First World War broke Britain's economic back. The conflict forced other countries to manufacture their own necessities, and England's ancestral investments went by the board.



40 P.C. in Taxes

These days the people are giving up about 40 percent of their income in taxation of various sorts. The taxation is so high that it is almost impossible to increase it without discouraging enterprise.

Another example is the weekly meat ration. That is eight cents worth—the equivalent of a small lamb chop. Butter, tea and what not are closely rationed. Children do get preferential treatment as they should.

Despite the tough conditions the health of the population seems good. Experts wonder, however, whether the physical stamina would be the same in the event of war.

In any case, rearmament is going on. Some nine per cent of the national income was spent on national defence in 1950, and the Kingston, April 6 — (CP) — A smartly - dressed modern counterpart of the highwayman, Norman D. Macaud, 18, of Toronto, Thursday admitted robbing an American woman whose car he had forced off No. 15 highway near Brewer's Mills, 10 miles northeast of here.

Macaud also pleaded guilty to a charge of car theft and was remanded to April 13.

The youth was arrested a few hours after Miss Viola Hansen of Cambridge, Mass., was robbed of $10 in U. S. currency.

Woman's Missionary Society Concludes Sessions; Mrs. S. W. Spafford Pres. for 1951

By M. AUSTIN

At the dinner hour on Wednesday evening greetings were brought to the WMS conference from the president of the Woman's Association of Bridge Street United Church, and from the newly-elected president of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch Women's Associations. Members are workers together in the various fields of endeavor, and co-operate in two phases of the Lord's work.

The evening worship under the theme "The Stewardship of the Gospel" was conducted by Mrs. T. Norton, of Oshawa Presbyterial. This was followed by the report of the candidate secretary, Mrs. A. G. MacLachlan.

She said she had found her work this year fascinating and interesting, but also a very considerable correspondence, but she had been able to meet with several people in close touch with girls and young women who will interested in full time church work. She attended school for leaders, Whitby, and later in the fall was a member of a committee which was in touch with local girls work in Kingston.

The purpose of this committee being to help with arrangements for speakers in the Kingston, Queen's University, the General Hospital and other centres.

She was able to meet with a few interested girls at [illegible] and to speak to the [illegible] including social hour for [illegible] churches. Mrs. [illegible] has been busy with [illegible] meetings throughout the branch and would welcome opportunity to speak in each of the other Presbyterials to groups of girls and young women.

Assistance Given

The candidate work has been greatly assisted by three other special workers, in Oshawa, Mrs. C. E. Burton arranges each year for a special meeting of the nurses of the hospital. In the Lindsay Presbyterial Mrs. Fred Reed, a returned missionary from China, has been doing a great deal to stimulate recruiting. The Peterborough Presbyterial has been especially fortunate to have Miss Constance Wagar, a teacher in the Normal School, as their own candidate adviser. No report to the branch would be complete without stating that she has done tremendous work by correspondence with Mission Bands, C.G.I.T. Groups, Mission Circles and by an essay contest on "Why I would like to be a missionary."

Mrs. MacLachlan said Miss Wagar had given her permission to announce at the meeting that she is herself entering into active missionary work next Fall. She will leave in August for Trinidad where she will take up edfication-al work under the W. M. S. This would seem a fitting culmination of her devotion to the cause of missions.

There are now two students in the training school from this branch — Betty Carkeek from Oshawa and Mary Haggart from Brockville.

In closing Mrs. MacLachlan said that every W. M. S. woman should feel it her responsibility to find possible candidates for work of the United Church. She could see never greater for the extension of God's Kingdom, and the forces of evil arrayed against it are powerful and well organized. We must all take up the challenge.

Mrs. C. C. Haggerty, Past President of the branch moved that a letter from this branch be sent to Connie Wagar in appreciation of her decision to carry the message to Trinidad. This was seconded by a standing vote of all present.

Mission Work In Korea

The C. G. I. T. girls assisted with the evening service, and a beautiful solo was rendered by Mrs. Burgoyne. The address of the evening was given by Miss E. McEachern, a retired missionary from Korea. She was introduced by Mrs. McMullen a former missionary associate, who told of her devoted work in the girls' school in Kongju, Korea. She had increased the attendance from 56 girls' who carried on in a ramshackle building to a splendid Institute of five girls in the buildings of which any of us would be proud. Kongmoon was a city of 40,000 when she had to be turned away. Miss McEacharn congratulated the W. M. S. ladies for their part in mission work in Korea. She said: "They are courageous, kind, hospitable and overgenerous people. For decades they have suffered politically and economically. Sad life is to read the reports of the past few months.

They have been left homeless and our friends wander with millions of others, cold and hungry seeking shelter and food. Many of our friends have died as martyrs but our Korean church friends are remaining true to Christ. Perhaps the time will come again when you can do for Korea what you failed to do before. We should have grasped the opportunity because of their deep religious nature and we see it that Korea became the beacon light. Let us consider political and historical Korea. Six hundred miles in length by 300 miles wide with twice the population of the Dominion of Canada and surrounded by three great nations, China, Russia and Japan.

Centuries of Domination

For centuries she was under the rule of China but allowed her own king and queen. Sixty years ago Japan began to look around. She found the peninsula of Korea pointed at her heart like a dagger, so she felt no other power should have this chance so the Japanese-Korean war of 1894-95 followed. Ten years later, Japan and Russia fought over her and the Korean king was abolished. Again Japan said 'No', Korea must not be a sphere of influence for Russia and Japanese-Russian War of 1904-05 ensued. Japan again was victorious, and Korea became a protectorate of Japan, and in 1910 this became the subject nation of Japan.

They went into mourning for three days, remained within their homes. They had lost face. When they began to take over again, the white people came in including missionaries and they turned to them for help. They wanted independence for their country and they wanted a new life so they bought Bibles and they read and studied them. Ten thousand assisted that time were following Christ. If missionaries and money were then available history would not now be as it is today. They were not allowed to carry a gun or wave or carry their green striped flag. Always they prayed for Independence, and when at the close of World War I, President Wilson said the small nations were to be free, Korea believed it, and in March 1919 a brave band stood up and said, "We Koreans now declare ourselves independent and they waved their flags. The result, thousands of Koreans were arrested.

When they were arrested and put in jail they asked for one book, the Bible. The prisons were then known as "Bible Schools". Many who went to jail as prisoners and non-believers, came out Christians. That was the second time Korea was ripe for our Christianity. They still wanted only their independence.

Hoped For Independence

The Second World War came and when German troops overran Europe—and then they were returned, Korea said again, 'Now we'll get independence, too.' They helped the Allies in many ways. When at Yalta Conference they were told "In due course independence will come, they said 'what does in 'due course' mean?'

At the end of the war the Japanese came from the south and the Russians from the north they met at the 38th meridian, a very unnatural barrier. Korea was Korea, and all our work schools, hospitals were in Seoul. Then the Christian Koreans left all they possessed because they could not live in communist-controlled Korea, they walked into the mountains and came south to where they could be free to worship. They built a church. They had churches wherever they gathered. Nearly 100 new groups came into being. Some missionaries then went back to the capital for union work.

Then the war came between north and south. You know what has taken place since then. Some Christian Koreans are now on islands, where they will worship and study their Bibles. Christianity will remain in Korea because of Koreans love of God, because of love of their Bibles, and if these two things were not true, because of the women of Korea and what Christianity has done for them Korea will remain Christian.

Tells of Suffering

Miss McEacheran related many stories of sacrifice and suffering of women before Christianity came to them, their constant fear of evil spirits etc. She related again and again that at the close of this awful conflict there will be a church in Korea. At the present time we can send them clothing. Korean students would come to learn of democracy if we would have them. We need to be preparing our candidates right now, and above all we can pray. They say the United Nations will help rehabilitate Korea but they need spiritual forces. Let us give them what they need.

Thursday Session

Thursday morning brought us a report from North Frontenac of our Missionary, Miss M. Alexander and her work there at Plevna which is about 70 miles north of Kingston and there she labors among the folks who have for other message of Christ brought to them. The area is serviced by seven schools but only one missionary. She explained to the branch her reasons for selling some of the supplies at a small figure and turning the money into the church and parsonage. They are then contributing something and it is good for them to feel they are. They will not waste but have what they need and want, and in so doing the parsonage, so plain, is being added to with necessary equipment.

Delegates to Dominion Board were appointed, the President of the Branch, Secretary of Conference Branch, Mrs. William MacPherson of Lindsay Presbyterial, Mrs. Pritchard of Kingston Presbyterial as an alternate, Mrs. Earl Jones of Belleville, Mrs. McKinney of Oshawa as an alternate.

Plan Accepted

Plan B for delegates to branch meetings was accepted by the Branch, with ten additional members to be chosen.

Memorial to Mrs. W. L. Smyth was conducted by Mrs. Soper, a room to be furnished in the Missionaries Home in Toronto—an amount of $992.53 was raised by the branch for this project.

The next meeting of the branch executive would be held in Peterborough, with Kingston as an alternative, and the Branch Biennial meeting in Oshawa with Cobourg as an alternative.

The courtesy committee brought in their report at the luncheon on Thursday — to the minister and officials of Bridge Street Church, the organist and caretaker — for their care and co-operation with us — for the Communion Service which provided a proper setting for our branch meetings — to the billeting committee and Belleville hostesses — that made our stay so comfortable. The spiritual uplift given by the worship services opening each session. The pleasant variety offered by the Mission Band and the C-G. I. T. groups — the soloists, the guest speakers: Miss Scott, Miss Christie, Miss MacEacheran and Miss Alexander who, by their vivid presentation of the work being done by our W. M. S. lifted us to wider vision and gave us renewed zeal to take back in our auxiliaries. To the executive of the branch, the program committee and Mrs. Harris. To the Ladies of Tabernacle Church, Bridge Street Auxiliaries and Holloway Church for their bountiful meals — to the press for the complete coverage of our branch conference.

The School for Leaders will be held in Whitby August 27th to 31st of this year.

Belleville Golf Wins Fourth Major A Title

For the fourth consecutive year the Belleville Golf team won the championship of the Major "A" Bowling League at the Bowl-O-Drome last night.

The Golfers, needed three points prior to last night's games to clinch the title. They were defeated by Northern Electric by a 4-3 score but Moore's Chiselers 5-2 setback of the CNR runners-up decided the championship for the Golfers.

The Golf team, underdogs during the greater part of the season suddenly struck their championship stride and slowly but surely surged to the top, dethroning the Northern Electric, which held top slot for a lengthy period. The actual battle was fought between the CNR but Golfers had enough reserve strength to pull through the winners.

In the other games Lawn Bowlers defeated Esquires by a 5-2 count with Tobe's Gents and Gardens leading Callaghan's lot a 7-0 setback.

Harry Ridley was top tripler with a 769 with D. Palmer racking up the high single of 306. Other good scores were J. Rhinsky, 682; O. Bellis, 701; Palmer, 737; W. Moore, 757; R. Baggley, 677; A. Canada's Top Sailor in Korea On Way Home

Ottawa April 6 (CP) — Capt. Jeffry V. Brock, D.S.C., Canada's top sailor in Korean waters for eight months, comes home tomorrow with his ship Cayuga with a shore job ahead of him.

The navy announced today that the 37-year-old Winnipeg and Vancouver officer will come ashore to take up the appointment of naval member of the directing staff at the National Defence College in Kingston," starting Aug. 1.

The destroyer Cayuga is due in in Esquimalt, B.C. tomorrow. She was one of three destroyers which left there last July to join the U.N. forces in Korea. Capt. Brock was in command of the three-ship flotilla and more than 1,000 officers of other navies under his wing as well.

On May 25, he will turn over command of Cayuga to Cmdr. James Plomer, D.S.C. and Bar, 39, of Winnipeg and Saint John, N.B. Cmdr. Plomer will also become commander of the Canadian destroyer division on the Pacific coast.

In the Inchon invasion last September, Capt. Brock commanded a U.N. force assigned to protect the southern flank of the invasion area. In December he led a destroyer group into the port of Chinnampo to cover the evacuation of 7,000 personnel and to destroy harbor installations in the face of approaching communist forces.

Early this year the Cayuga returned to Inchon, then in enemy hands, to—bombard communist positions ashore. The ship came under fire but suffered neither damage nor casualties. During his final patrol, Capt. Brock was commander of a destroyer group operating with the British aircraft carrier Theseus in the Yellow Sea. The destroyers now are under the command of Cmdr. A. B. Fraser, Harris of Halifax.

AT THE BELLE — Joan Fontaine, Robert Ryan, Jean Leslie and Zachary Scott are featured in "Born to be Bad," unusual romantic drama, closing tonight at the Belle Theatre.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some bridge players are not dumb enough to listen to reason. But one of them actually confessed not knowing what I meant by the overalls in opponent soup.

Evidently the agonizers were juggling the words in my lecture. The word I used was overcall; not overalls. And it was in opponent suit; not soup. Nor was Mrs. Murphy's chowder in the picture.

An overcall in an opponent suit is a bid in the same suit your opponent has bid. Like one heart by an opponent; two hearts by you. Or one spade by an opponent; two spades by you.

Such a bid by a defending player is the most powerful type of overcall he can make. It is as good as an opening bid of two in a suit. In fact, it is even more revealing.

Not only does it show a hand powerful enough to make game. Not only does it order partner to keep the bids alive to game. It also says no tricks will be lost in the suit opponents have bid.

As when you have the hand shown here:

♠A K Q 9 5
♥ None
♦A Q J 4
♣A J 3 2

If an opponent starts with an opening bid of one heart, what is your defensive overcall? Immediately say two hearts. This is an overcall in the opponent bid suit.

What have you said to partner? You have nine tricks or more. The bidding must not stop short of game. You will lose no tricks in hearts. In this case, you expect to ruff any heart lead.

Mrs. Knittingham was my partner when I made this bid. When it came to her she passed. So did the rest. There was I playing at a contract of two hearts without a heart in my hand.

Her sweet face looked up at me and said: "Oh, dear. Isn't it too bad you made the mistake of calling the wrong suit. I thought you had a lot of hearts." But she is a good cook.

Canadiens Get off Floor To Down Wings 5-2; Need Only One More Win in Semi-Final

Detroit, April 6—(AP)—"Who's doing the chasing now?"

Boisterous Dick Irvin, coach of the Montreal Canadiens' surprising hockey team, shouted that as he and his comeback lads headed today for home ice, needing only one more win over the Detroit Red Wings to land in the Stanley Cup finals.

Montreal, manned by a few veterans and 10 eager rookies, moved ahead in the semi-final series last night with a spectacular comeback in the second and third periods to beat the Wings 5-2.

A sell-out crowd of 14,221 watched Detroit's defending cup champions ram in two goals to take an early lead. Then the Canadiens, spearked by Rookie Bernl (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, punched home five goals to win easily.

Montreal now leads three games to two in the best-of-seven semi-final series, the clubs play Saturday night at Montreal and, if needed, Tuesday at Detroit—with the series winner facing the Toronto-Boston victor. The seventh game originally had been set for Sunday but was moved back because of the long train ride between Montreal and Detroit.

Coach [illegible] whose club finished [illegible] during the regular season while Detroit won the National Hockey League title, taunted the Red Wings after the game:

"After Detroit beat us two games at Montreal to square up the series at two wins each, Jack Adams (Detroit manager) boasted he had us on the run.' I'd say by looking at the standing, today that he's still chasing us, wouldn't you?"

Montreal has met Detroit in four previous semi-final series but has never won.

Was Turning Point

Irvin said that the punch which Maurice (The Rocket) Richard, Montreal scoring ace, landed on the face of Detroiter Ted Lindsay during a fracas near the end of the first period was the turning point.

"When Richard threw the punch Lindsay went down and it took all the fight out of the Red Wings," he said.

Richard went to the penalty box for seven minutes. Detroit led at that time 2-0, thanks to goals by Gordie Howe and Sid Abel.

"With Richard still in the penalty box they still couldn't score on us early in the second period and they realized they were whipped," Irvin said.

Billy Reay and Bert Olmstead rammed in goals for Montreal from close in to the scores midway through the second period.

Geoffrion then put the Canadiens ahead to stay with a zooming 55-foot shot that Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk couldn't get.

Richard and Calum (Baldy) Mackay added goals late in the third period as the roof literally fell in on the badly-outrushed Wings.

Three penalties were called against Detroit and two against Montreal by referee George Gravel. Sawchuk stopped 25 Montreal shots and Gerry McNeil halted 28.

Barrie Flyers Lead Marlboros By One Game

Barrie, April 6—(CP)—A three-goal spurt in the third period last night gave Barrie Flyers a 4-2 victory over Toronto Marlboros and a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven games Ontario Hockey Association final.

Next game of the series is slated for Toronto Saturday.

It was bad man Leo Labine who scored the winning Flyers goal. Before that he spent a good deal of time in the penalty box on a major for cross-checking Eric Nesterenko in the first period and two minors in the second.

Real Chevrefils lead off for Barrie less than four minutes after the game got going, but Ron Hurst tied the score before the first period ended. Neither team got a shot home during the second.

The middle period was not dull, however. Labine's rough attack on Nesterenko caused five stitches and almost instigated a repeat performance of the knock-down and drag-out affair in Toronto a month ago.

Marlboro coach, Bob Davidson, got himself chased off the bench for rushing onto the ice to keep his players from getting mixed up in the melee.

Big Hagan and Jack McKnight scored close on Labine's heels once Flyers broke ahead in the third period. By the time Harry Poland got around to scoring the second Marlboro goal, there was less than two minutes to go in the game.

The first Marlies goal came out of a rather weird pile up in front of the goal. Hurst and Earl Balfour brought the puck down the ice, but it was the prostrated flyer goalie, Lorne Howes, after two vain stabs, who finally poked the puck in.

A HOT SESSION!

No, kiddies, that vocal cacophony you heard emanating from the City Hall last night was not the city fathers in one of their quieter moods, but representatives of the Belleville, Bataws and Picton entries in the Central Ontario Baseball League, trying to settle a few player difficulties.

* * *

It seems that the Bataws and Picton squads who used certain Belleville players last year, did not want to yield these lads to the hometown without a struggle. They felt they were their property unless given a proper release (which they were not prepared to do, last night anyway) and the battle waged loud and long.

* * *

President Jack Carson, of the Belleville Baseball Association, after conferring with his executive the phone service was disconnected, the Belleville players were Belleville property and that was that — but he would allow certain concessions.

* * *

These did not prove agreeable to the lads from the Bataws and Picton teams and at one time during the session, the Bataws team walked out with the notion of severing relations with the league. Picton also withdrew, but later the argument resumed with "nobody getting anywhere".

* * *

Finally President Bob Nesbitt, Kingston, of the COBL who was here with secretary Harry Radley, ordered a fifteen minutes recess to allow the warring factions to discuss matters between themselves, and if no amicable agreement was reached by that time, he would revert to the OBA constitution and slide by its rulings on the matter which would give Belleville all its hometown players.

* * *

However following the team conferences, the Belleville Club agreed to give Bataws Don Semark and Art Wright, although the Shoemen claimed Wright is their property; Picton was given Jack Wardhaugh, but they demand the Vern'Goyer was turned down. Ron Church and Walter Fraser retire for the Picton team, were of the opinion they could not field a squad but agreed to bring the matter before their executives and the decision will be handed down within a day or so.

* * *

Since the COBL decided at its last meeting to operate on an independent basis and not affiliate with the Ontario Baseball Association, it was learned that the parent body intends to deal with the matter at its annual convention which starts today in London, Ont., and lasts through Saturday. Possibility of drastic action on the part of the OBA, in which it can order far-reaching sanctions, if necessary, caused some discussion at the meeting last night.

As a result two members of the executive, Vice President Jack Devine and Secretary Harry Radley, augmented by Belleville Baseball Association director Paul Hagyas will attend the convention and place the COBL's case before the OBA. Yours truly is going along for coverage purposes.

The chief "beef" of the COBL is that OBA playoffs extend far into the autumn, and necessitate extensive travelling with its accompanying high expenses. Last year Smith's Falls won the championship but did not continue for provincial honors because of the above-mentioned reasons. Potential entries this year stated at the last COBL meeting they would not continue in the playdowns and agreed to non-affiliation.

But the COBL heard about the matter, and according to reports from Tavernavia, intend doing something about it. However the COBL delegation will lay their case before the convention tomorrow morning in an effort to get some concessions.

HO HUM!

Comes a letter in the mail this morning from one of those gutless individuals who like to blow off their steam and then scuttle for cover behind the curtain of anonymity. This type which hasn't the intestinal fortitude to sign their names to their written castigations informs us "Please stick to your sports column and forget about the fishing. Leave that to the game and fisheries".

This G.I. states he has fished here for four years and never caught a pickerel. He gives his out-of-town address away with the statement that "What hurts the tourist trade the most is our 'city brothers' going north and catching fish only to let them rot. Another example of this unusual ignorance is revealed in his statement "If Lake Ontario was so full of fish boats could not travel, you still would not catch a fish in this bay".

He repeats "I firmly believe in the principle of minding one's own business, keeping his own doorstep clean. You let the game and fish wardens look after their job".

That is a good principle, but the writer does not, apparently, practice what he preaches. But then what could you expect from the type that is afraid to sign his name to his opinion? Tis to laugh.

* * *

And now, off to London!

Ray Robinson Scores Decision Over Holly Mims

Miami, Fla., April 6 — (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson pounded out a 10-round unanimous decision over tough and aggressive Holly Mims of Washington, D.C., Thursday night in his first fight since winning the middleweight championship.

The 23-year-old Mims who had to drink several glasses of water at the weighing - in ceremonies to come in over the 160-pound limit, opened an old cut over Robinson's eye in the first round and surprised the champion several times by the force of a crouch and scoring with lefts and rights to the jaw.

Ray scored his only knockdown in the second round with a right and left to the head but Mims was not seriously damaged. Mims was the aggressor all the way.

Robinson weighed 159½ and Mims 160½.

RETURN HOME

Kitchener, April 6—(CP)—Billy Flick and Dinny Flanagan, two-thirds of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen's contribution to the world champion Lethbridge Maple Leafs, returned home by air Thursday.

Centre man Mickey Roth, third member of the line that was kept intact during the world hockey championship tournament in Europe, will return with the Leafs aboard the Empress of Fresco which sails from Southampton April 10.

Flick suffered a compound fracture of his right wrist which was described by an English doctor as one of the worst he had seen. Despite the injury, Flick said he had enjoyed the trip.

Monarchs Head West in Pursuit Alexander Cup

Toronto, April 6 (CP).—The Toronto Monarchs and the Edmonton Mercurys end the elimination series between Canada's senior hockey representatives tonight. The Monarchs, who won the first game 5-3 at Edmonton last night, are struggling for Quebec supremacy and Charlottetown and Sydney are locked in the Maritimes battle.

Which Easterner whether they're pro Quebecers, Monarchs know that one or the other must win three out of four games to keep the Alexander Cup in the East. Monarchs have had a very hard season, Toronto Maple Leafs, Stanley Cup champions, have been in the semi-finals throughout this season, announced this winter a drastic all-round slash in season attendance.

Still in doubt is whether Monarchs or Toronto Maple Leafs will be the latter finished third in the playoffs with Hamilton and Montreal Canadiens will be back.

No Appointment Yet

Hap Day, assistant general manager of the Leafs, said before the game he noted the absence of the two Toronto teams now "probably" would get support next year. But there has been no announcement since.

This is the Monarchs were on last year's team at Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast professional league, which became of poor attendance last year.

They include Matt Mosich, Johnny Arundel, Dusty Blair, Frank Mulligan, Bill McCreckeon, Tom Fenton, Bill Eastwood, Johnny Uhrlesen, Jack Muldoun and Ken Watson, Johnny Gottselig (coach) O'Flaherty from Pittsburgh Hornets where he played for 10 years. Last season he was assistant coach.

The team has added goalie Phil Hughes from North Bay Hawks, Pat Wilson from St. Louis Flyers and Gord Hannigan and Frank Sullivan from last year's Allan Cup Champions, the Marlboros.

Willie Marshall is up from the Junior St. Michael's squad.

There is some weighty tradition behind St. Michael's as well. It has been 18 years since the college had a senior team. Back in 1930 St. Michael's College senior brought Toronto its first Allan Cup. They played another year, then folded.

This year's Monarchs won the Ontario Hockey Association's major league battle.

Bucky Harris Rates Senators A Better Club

Jack [illegible], April 6 — (AP) — Manager Bucky Harris rates Washington Senators a better-fifth-place club than last year. That just about tells the story.

Harris, of course, aims toward the distant first division. Everybody does in the spring. But he has a realistic shoot for 25-game gap between fourth and fifth last season. Only a complete collapse up front could cost Washington into the select four.

"We're going to have better balance," said Harris. "Irv Noren, Gil Coan and Eddie Yost all should improve. And Mike McCormick will be a big help.

"I think the key is among New York, Boston and Cleveland. A lot of clubs will very much like three ball over Vernon from Cleveland until June 14 and Mitchell from Chicago until May 30.

Had Good Season

Yost (.326) at third and Sam Dente (.289) at short round out the infield. Yost had an exceptional season in 1950 when he was rated behind Detroit's George Kell among the third-baseman.

The outfield is Harris' strong point, with Coan (.305) in left, Noren (.280) in centre and Sam Mele (.274) in right. McCormick, veteran National League outfielder, only .237 with the Chicago White Sox last summer, is one of the reserves.

Bob Kuzava (9-10) can be the choice of the pitching staff. The 27-year-old lefthander, who came to the Senators last May, is considered one of the top young southpaws in the league.

Harris will start Kuzava, Gene Bearden (4-8), Sid Hudson (14-16), Sandalio Consuegra (7-8) and Al Sima (4-3) or Connie Marrero (6-11). Mickey Harris (8-9) again will be the relief man with Joe Haynes (7-5) available for spot duty.

Jones Watches Golf Tourney From Cottage

Augusta, Ga., April 6 — (AP)— Bobby Jones relaxed in his cottage and watched, with eyes sparkling, as the greatest names in modern golf paraded past his front door.

The door was Jones' little white cottage overlooking the 10th fairway of the Augusta National course, scene of the 16th Masters tournament which he helped build into one of the sport's outstanding events.

"Do I have a favorite among the players?—Say golfers!" he repeated a question under gentle probing. "No, I don't! I don't see players enough to know what they can do under pressure and in certain situations.

"I do think that of all the golfers today Byron Nelson has a remarkable temperament for combining my own.

"I suffered before every match and every round. I was tense and couldn't eat. If I weren't all upset at first, I couldn't play.

"I think Nelson is that way—highly keyed up."

"Shy" Ben Hogan is different. He is like Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen. Those fellows just go out there and hit the ball."

Jones was asked if the first shot of a match was always the hardest — if pressure eased after he'd teed off.

"No, I don't think so," he said. "I always started off very easily and would pace pace myself — that is, I'd try for the middle of the fairway and the middle of the green. I wouldn't take many chances at first and I'd try to build up as I went along until soon I'd be shooting at the pines."

Bobby of the Atlanta grandslammer who last year was voted the greatest golfer of the age in the Associated Press mid-century poll, is currently hobbled by a spine ailment which has required several operations. But he's looking like a million.

He said until now he feels the finest physicians of the links was utterly years ago by John Henry Taylor, the old English champion of the 1890s.

"He had the best approach to golf was courageous timidity," Bobby related.

Turning Point In First Period Say Coach Irvin

Detroit, April 6 (AP) —The turning point in last night's Detroit-Montreal National Hockey League semi-final playoff game was the first-period fight between the "policemen" of Lindsay and Canadiens' Maurice Richard. That was the opinion of jubilant coach Dick Irvin of Montreal.

Canadiens had just staged a spectacular comeback with a 5-3 victory over Detroit and move within one game of taking the best-of-seven series.

Fiery Richard drew a major for punching Lindsay and received an extra two minutes for charging. The Wings were leading 2-0 and appeared to be a cinch to take the game.

"But Detroit couldn't capitalize on our shortage of one man," said Irvin, "And when our Billy Reay scored at the start of the second period with Richard still off the ice, that took all the fight out of the Red Wings."

Midway in t'e second period, Montreal's Bert Olmstead tied it up and then Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion whipped in a 50-foot shot that put Montreal ahead. "Give a lot of credit to our third line of Geoffrion, Paul and Billy Reay," said Irvin. "It was their spark in the second period that put us over the top."

In the Detroit dressing room, Lindsay was nursing a black eye and a deep cut under the left eye. He said it didn't ache. Richard's punch coming. The two had tangled along the boards and were tossed by referee Georges Gravel.

Detroit manager Jack Adams and coach Tommy Ivan, whose club won the third and fourth games after losing the first two, said little. They offered no excuses.

Thus the two teams move to Montreal for the sixth game Saturday night. So far the home team has not won in the series.

There will be 70 days of horse racing at Vancouver this summer, 35 days at Lansdowne Park and 35 days at Exhibition Park. This is the number of days as last year.

Racing will probably open June 27 at Lansdowne.

At Columbus, O., Australian-born John Marshall Thursday night swam the fastest 1,500 metres in history when he negotiated the free-style marathon in 18.10.8.

The time, far under the world record of 18:19 set by Hironchito Furuhashi of Tokyo, cannot be recognized as a world mark since it was made over the short course of Ohio State's 22-yard pool.

Tom Gard's Note Book

Spring always seems to drag at this time of the year. Perhaps it is because my impatience to get outside after having been cooped up in the house all winter makes me so restless. Unless I can the up one job after another to keep my mind occupied during my spare time, I'm as edgy as a racehorse.

One task on the agenda right now is copying an idea picked up in the last issue of my favourite garden magazine. You may have seen a bulletin board used in the kitchen or a blackboard hung for the children, but have you ever seen a combination of the two? Mine will hang right by the back door so orders of the day can be posted and hasty notes scribbled without searching for paper.

Record Holder

Santa Claus contributed a small record player to make the Yuletide Christmas complete for the children. All went well until the records started piling up. Each one of the four had to have his or her favourite bandy — varying from Teddy Bears' Picnic to the latest jazz creation — and separate from the rest. The easiest way to keep peace was to promise each a record holder. I'm going to use sturdy butter boxes. They are ideal for the purpose and will double as seats when the whole flock is congregated about the machine.

Don't Hide Your Light

Still another unfinished project that is on the go right now for the evening cottage is making bases for electrical lamps. The wiring was finished last fall and I promised the family to make the lamps myself. Some of the patterns being used are shown.

In case there is still time on my hands I have promised to help Herb, my neighbour, with his foundation planting now that his lawn is finished. With these tasks lined up, it looks as if I'll be busy!

AT THE CAPITOL — Who's who in "Born Yesterday." Judy Holliday, Academy Award Best Actress, plays pretty, blonde and pretty dumb Billie Dawn in the Columbia Pictures' version of the Broadway stage hit. Also starred at the Capitol Theatre are William Holden, left, and Broderick Crawford. The comedy starts Monday for its first showing. Now on its eighth record breaking week at Imperial Theatre, Toronto.

AT THE McCARTHY — Marta Toren and Macdonald Carey head a strong action cast starring with Robert Douglas in Universal-International's "Mystery Submarine," now at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre, an exciting sea story based on a true incident when a Nazi submarine made its escape from the Allies following the surrender of the Germans at the conclusion of World War II. Carl Esmond and Ludwig Donath head the film's supporting cast. Second hit features Annie Sheridan and Dennis O'Keefe in "Woman on the Run."

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 6 — (AP)— It was a hard fight, but Charles Boyer figures he finally shed the "Great Lover" tag.

The reluctant Lothario started a campaign four years ago to escape type-casting after a decade of film love-making. It wasn't easy. Every radio comic and night club imitator was mocking him with lines like "Come wix me to the casbah."

Boyer stayed off the screen for three years rather than play in movies he thought were "silly."

"I'm not against romance," he commented. "But I am against playing in the same silly love stories. I may do a love story in the future. But it will be as a mature lover, not as a dashing romantic."

Boyer eschewed romance when he returned to the screen. He first played a Roman Catholic priest in "The First Legion." Then he did a character role in "The 13th Letter."

Boyer is currently playing another non-romantic role — that of a maharajah' secretary in "The Rage of the Vulture." He is delighted to leave all the love-making in the film to Alan Ladd.

"The Frenchman has been seeing a lot of the United States lately, as a member of the first drama quartet. The others in this hardy little band are Charles Laughton, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Agnes Moorehead. They have been touring the country in a forum version of George Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell."

"We were a little worried about how it would go over," Boyer said. "But the reditts have been amazing. So far we have played 50 engagements, mostly college towns and the business has been capacity. We have appeared in huge auditoriums before 4,000 and 6,000, many of whom could not even see our faces."

CABBIES ASKING BOOST

Hamilton, April 6 — (CP) — Taxi customers will have to dig deeper if the police commission upholds a brief submitted by the Cab Owner's Association. Seventy cabbies are asking a boost from 25 to 35 cents for the initial one-third mile, 10 cents for every 2½ minutes waiting time, a 50 cent charge for trunk baggage and $1 for toting other articles.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Saturday, April 7

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Should be a good day for artistic as well as personal affairs. Business and financial matters may develop blither; be soundly on guard, alert in speech.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—State, world and civic affairs need greater undivided attention. Pray for God's help, that we may know right road to follow. Stars say patience, yet honor your declared principles.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Opportune period if you aren't reckless or inconsiderate of property conventions. Develop sense to be of good cheer in all situations and mind the disposition.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—With seen mildly energetic attitude benefic results are possible. Smart ideas, inventions, everyday commodities tops. Further new business well understood. Hold self high, honorable.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Genuine success from contracts long forgotten could return fine profits if properly handled. Discussions with friends, associates, superiors need deftness to attain desired results.

August 24 to September 23—(Virgo)—Fine influences for your directed effort this mixed day. Fruitful returns from earnest work possible in the most unexpected matters. Don't forget family, loved ones in daily rush.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)— Stimulating period for both business and financial investments, work well classified and studied. Fair, more generous for romance, marriage, family affairs.

October 24 to November 23—(Scorpio)— Before acting today, better check the score. How are you doing, or going to do it? What may seem minor may be the big move of the day. Keep wits, perception keen.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—By dealing with all persons equitably, fairly you pave the way for greater co-operation, better results all round. P.M. offers some stubborn situations, watch to alleviate this.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)— Moderate to fine planetary outlook but his isn't by any means assured without work, study first. Await checkup approval calmly before acting; give thorough analysis, then go out and win.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Fine vibrations for all worthy efforts. Heed clues, sound suggestions, generous results will follow, a thorough, above-board attitude will bring success and happiness in full.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Let nothing baffle you this so-so sort of day. Be keen, energetic, not only for your own ideas, but for any methods, propositions showing promise. Avoid tinkering.

YOU BORN TODAY: Seldom are at a loss to know what to do in a pinch; may, however, tend to be overanxious, too forceful. You are never afraid to try, so you should concentrate well, and check ideas before putting them to work. An interesting person socially or in business, can be a leader in most any field. Watch health needs, don't aspire to overdo. You have executive ability, are seldom content with a small or unimportant job. Many noted surgeons, dentists, managers, musicians born in this Sign. The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Rutt

"Oh, well," said Ede, "perhaps I'd better see him. Send him in."

"I'll go," Reagan offered.

"No," said Ede, "I'd rather you'd stay. I don't know what this is, but it can't be anything much."

She was entirely wrong.

The man who entered her office was vaguely familiar. But it took Ede a second or two to place him. Then she remembered. He was Mr. Summerfield's manservant.

She remembered him from that afternoon when she had faced Gil with the knowledge that he had been working with Northcott to buy Frey and Company.

Mr. Cutler bowed politely. "Miss Frey?" he said inquiringly.

"Yes." Ede stiffened a little. If this was to be an overture from Gil, she'd get rid of him quickly in a hurry. "What is it?"

Mr. Cutler glanced doubtfully at Reagan.

"It's all right," Ede said impatiently. "You can say whatever you've got to say."

Apparently satisfied, Mr. Cutler drew pieces of paper from his inside pocket.

"I found these on the living-room floor after Mr. Summerfield had gone," he said. "And I took the liberty of reading them, thinking they might be important. They seemed to belong to you, so I brought them in for your thoughts, you might want them." He laid the two scraps on Ede's desk.

They were the remains of the envelope Gil had given Ede that day, which she had torn in two and thrown at him.

Frowning she placed them together. The next instant it was all she could do to restrain a cry.

Mr. Cutler, hat in hand, fidgeted nervously.

"I hope that I did not do wrong in reading them, Miss Frey," he said.

Ede pulled herself together. "Wrong?" Her eyes were shining. "No, Mr. Cutler, you didn't do wrong. Quite the reverse. You've done me a great favor. But"—she had to ask it, Reagan or no Reagan—"where has Mr. Summerfield gone?"

"Mr. Summerfield returned to Bermuda yesterday," said Mr. Cutler, and bowed himself out of her office.

For a moment Ede sat quite still, staring at the pieces of paper. Then, very slowly she gathered them up, put them in her handbag and got to her feet. Reagan watched her curiously.

"Was it important?" he asked.

Ede drew a breath.

"Just about the most important thing that's ever happened to me. Listen Dan. Did you say you wanted to carry on here?"

"I did," Reagan said, wonderingly.

Ede was almost running toward the door. Hand on knob, she stopped and turned to him. "Okay," she said. "The job's yours."

No headwinds retarded the plane. It simply glided through still warm air, circled like a huge bird over the long dark green curve of Bermuda, then slanted down to rest in water the color of a robin's egg.

Bermuda customs officials do not make it tough for visitors. Short time Ede was through them and hailing a motor-car that idled off the air base. A grinning colored man slid the craft forward.

"How fast can you get me to Wendover House?" Ede asked.

While teeth flashed through chocolate skin. "Werry fast, Miss." He patted a gunwale. "She good boat."

They shot away, headed for Great Sound. As they rushed past Riddle's Bay, Ede glanced shoreward.

There perched on its little hill was the cottage where she and Peter Flood had lived. She looked at it with steady eyes.

If, she thought, I feel the slightest regret, I'll turn back—now.

But the cottage faded from view—the boat raced on.

Gil Summerfield, in blue sports shirt and linen slacks, was stretched in a low garden chair. He realized, vaguely that the warm, winelike air was putting him to sleep. It had already produced a marked soporific effect upon his Irish setter. The dog was beautifully relaxed, his burnished sides heaving. Gil stretched, and his pipe fell from his teeth. He let it lie on the grass. His eyes closed.

All at once the setter stirred. Gil opened one eye, started, then passed a hand over the eye. It had been a nice fragmentary dream. But, of course, only a dream. There wasn't a girl, in a blue travelling suit and a little blue hat, standing there against the opposite wall of his garden. Because, in Bermuda, girls didn't wear blue travelling suits.

And then came the voice, low and a little vibrant.

"I don't know," said the voice "whether I ought to cross this garden on my feet, or my knees."

Gil Summerfield bounced up then. The setter, disturbed, bounced likewise.

"Ede," cried Gil Summerfield, and almost fell out of his chair. Ede came toward him with firm footsteps.

"Do you think your dog would mind very much, Gil," she said, a queer sidelong look in her green eyes, "if I apologize in front of him?"

Mr. Summerfield regained a measure of his aplomb. He got to his feet. But he still stared at her.

"You—Ede," he said unbelievingly. "This—this is wonderful. Where in Heaven's name did you drop from?"

"From an airplane. I . . . oh, Gil, I had to come."

Gil was completely recovered by now. He said slowly: "Then you've changed your mind about —about never wanting to see me again?"

Ede opened her handbag and took out two scraps of paper.

"Your man, Cutler, picked up the pieces, Gil," she said. "But even without them, I ought to have known that you'd never do a thing like that to me. I"—her face twisted—"I haven't any real excuse. I just got myself horribly confused. It seemed for a while as if Jeff and Northcott and everyone else was out to— to doublecross me. Isn't that the word? And when I thought you were in it too, . . . well, that was the last straw."

'Nickel Coin' Wins Gruelling Grand National 'Chase' All But 2 of 36 Starters Fall

25th Session Of Big Four Is Adjourned

Paris, April 7—(CP)—The Big Four foreign ministers' deputies today adjourned the 25th session of their "end the cold war" talks without having made any fresh progress.

They are trying to hammer out an agreed agenda for a foul-flogged foreign ministers' conference.

After the 2 1-2 hour meeting a British spokesman said the western powers "are beginning to wonder" whether the Russians really want a meeting or the foreign ministers.

The British spokesman, asked if there had been any change of atmosphere, replied:

"The western powers started with the intention of reaching an agreed agenda for a foreign ministers' conference. Now we have begun to wonder why the Soviet Union seriously wants the results they say they do."

He said the western deputies do make policy decisions, but "here comes Mr. Gromyko and says today that it would be 'useful and advantageous' to make it clear that the deputies are for a reduction in armaments."

BULL BADLY HURT

Kingston, April 7 — (CP) — A bull - shooting episode may result in charges against a Wolfe Island farmer, police said Friday.

A purebred Holstein bull, valued at $1,000, owned by J. J. Docteur, wandered onto the property of a neighbor who shot it fire with a shotgun when it refused to leave.

The bull was badly hurt.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 7 (CP) Synopsis: Clear skies and light southerly winds ushered in a beautiful Spring morning over most of Ontario. In the eastern two - thirds of the province it will likely remain sunny all day but in western and northwestern sections many will experience increasing cloudiness with rain reaching these regions late today.

The poor weather is associated with a storm centre west of Lake Michigan. Continuation of its present northerly motion would spread precipitation over all northern Ontario on Sunday and cause a period of a few hours rainy weather to pass eastward through the southern half of the province.

Aintree, England, April 7— (Reuters)—Nickel Coin, a game nine-year-old mare, today won the world-famous Grand National after a thrill-packed race in which only a handful of the 36 runners made all the 30 jumps.

Royal Tan was second in the gruelling 4 1-4-mile race, which was run under good weather conditions over nearly snows and hail.

A total of 36 horses started but Nickel Coin and Royal Tan were the only ones to complete the course without mishap.

Derrintstown, which fell but was remounted, was placed third.

The winner was a 40-to-1 shot and Royal Tan, 22 to 1. The price on Derrintstown was 66 to 1.

Arctic Gold, owned by John Hay (Jock) Whitney, of New York, started as the 8-to-1 favorite but was one of the 34 horses to fall.

Nickel Coin is owned by J. J. Royle, and was ridden by Fred Winlock. Nickel Coin won by six lengths over Royal Tan. Derrintstown was a distant third.

Shagreen, bred and trained in Ireland and Freebooter, popular choices, fell in the early stages of the race.

Veterans racegoers couldn't recall a more disastrous series of falls, with the field drastically reduced before the first half-dozen jumps were taken.

After the first time round only six horses were left with a chance. Nickel Coin and Royal Tan kept at it steadily and took the last jump together, but in the run-in Nickel Coin drew away to win by six lengths.

Wartime Plan to Build Aircraft Carrier of Ice Called 'Absurd' Scheme

London, April 7—(Reuters) — Winnipeg-born Sir Charles Goodeve, 47, one of Britain's top wartime researchers, said today that "some millions of man-hours of allied effort were wasted on an "absurd" scheme to dgvelop a huge aircraft carrier made of ice.

The project was recalled the other day by Sir Geoffrey Bourne, who said the material was tested by Winston Churchill in his bathtub. Later Mountbatten demonstrated its toughness by firing revolver bullets at it at an allied conference.

Goodeve, deputy controller for research and development with the British admiralty at the time, said the scheme—known by the code name of "Habbakkuk" — was to build an aircraft carrier of ice, big enough to take a large part of the R.A.F. to an unprotected part of the French coast to cover allied landings.

"Its size was to be 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons," he said in a letter to The Times, "and of a draught of about 125 feet. It was to be externally insulated and fitted with a refrigerating plant, . . . and also would be self-propelled."

The project wasn't strong enough to stand even an Atlantic swell, he said, but "unfortunately it was found that the strength could be increased 20 times by incorporating 7 per cent wood pulp." That was frozen, a high concentration of the wood pulp was found to be making newsprint." This material became known as pykrete."

Goodeve said that these demonstrations (in Churchill's bathtub and at the allied conference) sold what was patently an absurd scheme at a very high level and resulted in the diversion of some millions of man-hours of allied effort before the scheme was allowed to die by our American colleagues.

Goodeve is director of the British Iron and Steel Research Association.

COMMONS HEARS DEMANDS TO END BOXCAR SHORTAGE

Scarcity Impedes Grain Movement

Ottawa, April 7—(CP) — Demands for action to crack Canada's boxcar shortage are piling up on the government doorstep.

Proposals came yesterday from within and outside parliament as the car scarcity continued to impede the movement of grain and other commodities.

In the commons, Hazen Argue (CCF—Assiniboia) called on the government of agriculture to take control of the situation and to consider putting an embargo on boxcar movements to the United States to force the return of Canadian owned cars returning to the U.S. from the railroads.

Earlier this week the Saskatchewan legislature had asked for the controller. Yesterday the Canadian federation of agriculture asked for some government action to get cars to move westward.

Transport department officials yesterday said the government has no such powers, with the wheat board and the railways represented, to find means of getting cars to the west.

Grain is Needed

Mr. Argue said millions of bushels of grain could not be moved in the winter months because of this. This not only affected the west but consumers as well, since the last grain was needed for feeding livestock.

His request came during a brief discussion last night on annual estimates of the agriculture department.

Earlier, the House gave first reading to a government bill to change the terms of federal aid to marginal gold-mining companies. The assistance based on a complex formula hinged to production costs, would amount to between $100,000,000 and $11,000,000 for the life of the agreement under formula this year's aid would have been some $3,000,000 less.

Hints of Fresh Trouble Seen At British Docks

London, April 7 (CP) —Hints of fresh trouble in Britain's docks cropped up today.

Trade union spokesmen warned that efforts may be made to provoke strife in action in British ports in sympathy with New Zealand dockers.

Dock labor leaders went on strike last month for more money. Several British newspapers gave prominence to reports that the communist party would try to "exploit" the dock strike. Attention was done in the 1949 Canada Seaman's strike.

Transport and general union, which numbers most of Britain's 90,000 dockers among its members, has long been plagued by a revolt against the official leadership of a group calling itself the Port Workers' Committee.

Arthur Deakin leader of the T.G.W.U. is expected to issue a warning soon that the committee is bent on new trouble.

French President Honored By Having Mountain Chain In Canada Named After Him

Ottawa, April 7 (CP) —Canada will have a permanent memento of the visit of President Vincent Auriol of France.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced last night that a range of Kluane Mountains in the Yukon, has been named for M. Auriol, first French President to visit Canada.

The newly-named mountains form part of the Kluane chain, stretching across the southern Yukon. Towering to 7,580 feet above sea level, these snow-capped peaks overlook the Alaska Highway to the north, and to the south, Skagway, famous port of entry to the Yukon in the days of the gold rush.

Only one other person has received a similar honor from Canada. Castle Mountain in the Rockies was renamed Mount Eisenhower on the occasion of the first visit of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to Canada in January 1946.

The Canadian government's decision to name the mountains for M. Auriol was announced by Mr. St. Laurent at a state dinner in the Chateau Laurier hotel. The dinner was closer to newspaper time, but St. Laurent's announcement was issued through his office.

M. Auriol, in Quebec today on another lap of his five-day official visit, went to the dinner directly from a special train that returned him here from Toronto where he spent half a day. He arrived in Canada Thursday.

Presented with Album

The President was presented with an album, bound in scarlet leather, containing a photograph of the Auriol Mountains and a map of the region. The album bore the Canadian coat-of-arms.

Mr. St. Laurent also gave two volumes of "Documents Relating to Cartier and Roberval"— to M. Auriol and his Foreign Affairs Minister Hon. Robert Schuman.

The President and Mrs. Auriol were given a needle-point sketch from a Canadian artist. Entitled "The Raising of the Nets," it depicts a fishing scene on the Gaspe coast in a setting which might also be found on the French coast of Brittany.

M. Auriol issued in advance the text of a speech made before toasting the King at the dinner. He told the gathering that France is trying to organize a federated and united Europe. She agreed with Canada that strength was to be found in co-operation.

Following the dinner, M. Auriol went to Union Station, where he left Prime Minister St. Laurent and other members of the government. He will not return to the capital, but will spend Saturday and Easter Sunday in Quebec and will fly back to Paris Monday.

Tension Between Yugoslavia and Russia Increasing

Belgrade, April 7—(AP)—Signs of increasing tension between the Russian-led cominform countries and President Tito's government developed last night. Yugoslavia formally accused Rumania of "dangerous" acts of aggression and recalled her top envoy in Hungary.

(From Belgrade came word that Bulgaria has asked Yugoslavia to recall the Yugoslav military attache in Sofia, Bulgarian capital, and has protested expulsion of the Bulgarian military attache in Belgrade. Bulgaria has accused Yugoslav secret police on committing "provocations," against her representatives.)

Belgrade radio said the foreign ministry had sent a note to Rumania "protesting the increasing number of border incidents" on the joint frontier. The note said a total of 61 "frontier" had taken place on the Yugoslav-Rumanian border between Dec. 7, 1950, and Feb. 22, 1951.

Later the government announced it has recalled its charge d'affaires in Budapest, Vilko Denovski.

Recall of the envoy stemmed from a fight on a Belgrade street Saturday night involving Rumanian diplomats and a Bulgarian deputy military attache Ivan Popov, a Yugoslav radio driver, and two unidentified passengers. Since then, Hrabeer, suffering from head injuries, returned to Hungary.

Leader Says Tax Will be Reduced If Elected

Kitchener, April 7 —(CP)— Walter C. Thomas, Ontario Liberal party leader, told a Liberal rally last night that his party will reduce the gasoline tax if returned to power in the next provincial election.

Mr. Thomson also promised the farmers tax-free gas. The present rebate system with its costly accounting will be ended, he added.

The Liberal leader said the liquor profits will be used to buy milk for Ontario children and expand the agricultural extension service.

"They refused us in 1943 for spending $92,000,000. They stand condemned now for spending $37,000,000 in 1950," he said.

He denied a rumor that J. G. Gardiner of Hitchenor, member of the legislature for Waterloo North, would resign to allow him (Thomson) to enter the Ontario House.

FIRE THREATENS AREA

Houston, April 7 — (AP) — A spectacular oil refinery tank fire threatened the Houston ship channel industrial area for nearly two hours last night before it was smothered out. An explosion of undetermined origin started the blaze at the Crown Central Petroleum Refinery in Pasadena. The blast shook buildings several blocks away. No one was injured.

DOMINION QUITS MAKING NICKELS OUT OF NICKEL

Saves 60 Tons Yearly Of Strategic Metal

Ottawa, April 7—(CP)—Canada is going to quit making nickels out of nickel to save 60 tons a year or the shiny, strategic metal for defence production.

Prime Minister St. Laurent disclosed in the Commons yesterday that after July 1 the Royal Canadian Mint will resume the wartime practice of making five-cent pieces out or steel in a chromium plating. An order-in-council authorizing the change was passed April 4.

The July 1 date is when the mint is expected to run out of nickel for making the pure-nickel five-cent pieces now minted. And chances are it won't be able to buy more nickel for Canada's nickel production, now running at more than 100,000 tons a year, will be needed by more vital industries.

All Canada's other coinage except coppers are made or 80 per cent silver and 20 per cent copper, and won't be affected.

Mr. St. Laurent made her nickel out of nickel since 1942, except in 1944-45 when she switched to steel and in 1942-43 when tombac, a brass, was used. This year she issued a five-cent piece commemorating the nickel industry. The coin probably will be a casualty of the nickel shortage.

Millions of them already have been issued, but mint officials say if no more nickel can be obtained after July 1, their minting will be stopped. It wouldn't be right, one official said, to make a nickel-commemorating coin out of anything but nickel.

Embossed Replica

The commemorative coin has an embossed replica of a nickel refinery on one side and the usual head of the King on the other. Around the edge of the coin, which carries a large "V" and a torch of freedom on its reverse side. These words in full will be made of chromium-finished steel after July 1.

It takes a pound or nickel to make 100 five-cent pieces. And in 1950 Canada issues about 12,000,000 such coins a year, the annual total which will be in terms of 120,000 pounds of pure nickel.

The mint stamps out coins for Canada and for other countries which places its order in relation to business and demand for five-cent pieces throughout the country.

Steel nickels with the chromium-plating finish will be put into circulation only as needed. Mr. St. Laurent said. Other "economy measures" to halt the soaring cost of living, the announcement said yesterday, will be extended for a number of food products, many of which have been rationed-free for years. Penalties for black market operators will be increased.

Tenders Fleet of Russian Trawlers Steams By Cliffs of Dover

London, April 7 (Reuters) —A fleet of Russian trawlers steamed by the white cliffs of Dover today —for the second time in a year— reported on their way to the Far East by way of the Mediterranean.

Observers on the southeast coast of Britain said they saw nine of the vessels in the Straits of Dover about eight miles off Dungeness, Kent, eastward in line ahead—naval fashion.

At that time the Russians steamed through the channel last April, but they touched off a guessing campaign by failing to give any reasons for the trip and probable destination.

Today's sightings of the Canada which places its order in relation to business and demand for five-cent pieces throughout the country.

Steel nickels with the chromium-plating finish will be put into circulation only as needed. Mr. St. Laurent said. Other "economy measures" to halt the soaring cost of living, the announcement said yesterday will be extended for a number of food products, many of which have been rationed-free for years. Hamilton Man Wins $34,500 On 'Nickel Coin'

Montreal, April 7 (CP) —Joe Oulmet of Hamilton, Ont., today won $34,500, more than half the winning ticket on the Quebec Legion Army and Navy Sweepstake, on the Nickel Coin, winner of the Grand National at Aintree.

Second prize money of $20,000 went to C. W. Kempton of (3206 Mountain Sights, Montreal, who held a ticket on Royal Tan in the gruelling 4 1-2 mile race. John Dubuard, Montreal, collected $13,500 for his ticket on Derrintstown, the third-placing horse.

MANHOLE COVERS LIFTED

New York, April 7 — (AP) — An underground blast tossed half a dozen manhole covers high into the air and shattered scores of windows around Hanover Square last night. A firemen en route to the scene fell from his truck and broke his leg. Police said the explosion was no one was hurt. Cause of the explosion was not known.

Canadians Poised South of Parallel, Allies Push North

Pats Lead Brigade's Drive, Meet Little Resistance

West central sector, Korea, April 7—(CP)—Canadian troops in Korea were poised south of the 38th parallel today, while other elements of the 27th Commonwealth Brigade fought north on the old political dividing line between north and south Korea.

The British-led 1st brigade's push to within a few miles of the parallel, then patrolled the area while Australians and other members of the brigade moved past them into north Korea.

The Canadians met little communist resistance in their push through rugged terrain. The battalion scaled five series of ridges and mountains, culminating in a majestic snow-capped mountain dominating the approach to it.

The operation occurred during a security-light phase of the United Nations campaign when correspondents were not permitted to indicate precisely how close forward troops were to the parallel.

All through the operation the Patricias were the farthest forward in their sector, and when the task was finished they were the only allied ground just four miles south of the imaginary boundary.

The action was plotted in detail on map miles, but it amounted to more than twice the distance on land. The Canadians made their way up 70-and 80-degree rock faces.

The only part of the Canadian advance which was opposed involved a slight brush with the enemy by the company headed by Maj. Jack George of Edmonton.

Drive Began Wednesday

The Canadian advance began Wednesday, March 26 when the battalion ended a 14-day rest period. A company led by Capt. Bob Swinton of Vancouver made an advance which occupied a 3,000-foot peak.

An indication of the sheer guts required was the performance of Pte. Way Buck Ling of Halifax, 34 years old and just 120 pounds in weight. Ling carried a 150-pound load—his own gear, a bren gun and ammunition and operations of a pal.

Three-quarters of the way up the peak he fainted, fell 20 feet, revived, and continued in the darkness with only sheer courage as a guide, rejoining the rest of the company four hours later.

Thursday, companies of Capt. Del Harrison of Calgary and Maj. Cameron Ware of Ottawa moved again across two mountains, the second only 2,900 feet high. Harrison's company won the honor of being the first to reach the summit.

Friday, Maj. George's men fought to get onto a hill, pushing the red line on the map north.

Saturday they got tight while flanks on lower ground drew abreast.

Sunday and Monday the Patricias patrolled forward, then last Monday a company of Cpl. Owen Brown of Calgary and Maj. George moved on to Myongil.

Wednesday, the Canadians stood pat while other troops passed through.

Air-Raid Sirens of Britain Ready To Shriek Warning of Atom Bombers

London, April 7—(AP)—The air-raid sirens of Britain are kept all-clear ready to shriek warnings of atom bombers any minute the cold war turns hot.

All over the country, board fences around the bone-picked wreckage of the last week's bombings are being fitted with new linked poster question: "What are you doing about civil defence?"

Although these are times of tension, with shooting wars in Korea and Indo-China, Korea, most Britons answer that question with a shrug of the shoulders.

The people of the country are far less ready for another air war than they were a year ago.

Local and national offices have been preparing for civil defence recruits ever since the corps was revived 15 months ago. About 18,000,000 people are eligible to join. Only a few more than 100,000 have done so.

Apathy has not kept the country from pumping fresh life into the rattling bones of its civil defence organization.

Three unique schools, outlasted with battered houses made realistic by fire, smoke, blasts of explosives, train instructors to teach the techniques of civil defence against atomic bombs and other weapons.

This training set-up began functioning three years before the Second World War, getting Britain ready to withstand a blitz.

Now it is ready again, with a corps that saved thousands of lives and built to check the ravages of fire bombs.

The people, lightened, hopped to it in hours. They thought war was coming. They are now waiting to postpone the day of preparation.

People who might volunteer to combat fires, demolitions or atom bombs fear atomic radiation. They don't want to stick their necks out for front-line jobs of rescue and first aid work.

Others also in that "veteran" feeling among many. More than 1,000,000 were in civil defence forces during the blitz; millions of others survived it. Many apparently think "I've already been through it. I dont need any more training."

Of Big Four 24th Session Just Lot of Lip

Paris, April 7—(AP)—United States delegate Philip Jessup and Russia's Andrei Gromyko conducted a one-sided conversation Friday over the lessons to be drawn from the League of Nation's long tussle with armament issues.

"It was just a lot of lip," a western spokesman said in referring to the 24th session of the big four deputy foreign ministers. "They are going to meet again at 10.30 a. m. tomorrow."

The spokesman said Jessup took up a declaration by Gromyko Wednesday that the League of Nations had always approached the question of "the level of armament" by the principle of "reduction of armaments." The usual wants the big four to take the initiative.

The American said that the Russian's declaration was wrong, that the League's approach was through the level of arms. He sought, accordingly, to convince Gromyko that the arms level should come first on the foreign ministers' agenda.

"Gromyko saw he was hooked," the spokesman said, "so he switched arguments."

Syrian-Israeli Border Area Reported Quiet

Tel Aviv, Israel, April 7 (Reuters)—Official reports today said all was quiet in the Syrian-Israeli border area where Israeli planes dropped bombs Tuesday on Syrian army outposts, in retaliation for the shooting of seven Israeli policemen.

Egypt yesterday asked Britain the United States and France to stop "Israeli aggression" against Syria.

Menachem Beigin, leader of the extremist Israeli Freedom movement, accused by the terrorist Irgun Zvai Leumi, said today that Syrian aggression is the outcome of the Israeli government's appeasement policy.

Speaking at the annual convention of the movement in Nehanlya, Beigin charged the United Nations with having connived board with being a "disturbing element" in the present improvement of relations between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

Israel's complaint to the body of United Nations observers in Israel was dropped immediately was endorsed by the convention.

Auto Dealers Discuss Problems At Regional Meeting in City

More than 110 members of the Ontario Automobile Dealers' Association held their regional meeting at the Hotel Quinte last night. Dealers came from Peterborough, Lindsay, Oshawa, Kingston, Cobourg and other points within the district.

The Belleville Automobile Dealers' Association acted as host for the meeting.

Three speakers outlined the difficulties that automobile dealers in 1951 must meet, and told how they should be dealt with. The three were Reg. Howell, general manager of Puddicombe Motors, of Toronto, Howard B. Moore, general manager of the parent body, the Federation of Automobile Dealers' Association, and A. E. Kress, manager of the Ontario Association.

Mr. Moore traced the tremendous growth of the automobile industry in the past 18 years. "In 1932," he said, "only 16,000 units were built in Canada by all manufacturers." The expansion of the industry was indicated by the fact that 413,000 vehicles were assembled in Canada in 1950.

2,537,000 Units Registered

"Further," Mr. Moore said, "2,537,000 cars and trucks are now registered in Canada." All three speakers touched on the particular problems of dealers in different lines, on taxation as it affects the industry as a whole and the dealers themselves, and on the recent credit controls applied by the government.

The speakers were thanked by Gerald Weaver of Trenton. A question period followed the speeches, with Mr. Moore answering queries from the dealers about their problems. The president of the local association, Jack Trudeau, was chairman for the meeting.

The Belleville association is affiliated with the Ontario Automobile Dealers' Association, which in turn is connected with the national body.

ROOKIE CONSTABLE HELD

Toronto, April 7 — (CP) Frederick Street, 22, a rookie constable on the Toronto police force, was arrested last night on two charges of car theft. Later, Kenneth Trimble, 21, also was charged.

Street was suspended from the force and held on $2,000 bail.

After weeks of investigation, detectives traced improperly registered license plates and recovered one of the cars, stolen from a parking lot last month, in front of the house in which the two men lived.

11-Car Special Only Stayed Few Minutes in City

The few scattered spectators who yesterday stood on the almost deserted station platform as the special train of Premier Vincent Auriol of France passed through the north station here were, to say the least, disappointed.

Spectators on the platform were for the most part railway employees who stepped out of their offices as the special train carrying the French president from Toronto to Ottawa rolled in exactly on time at 4.12 p. m. They failed to catch even a glimpse of President Auriol during his train's three-minute stop.

Immediately the 11-car special train rolled to a stop, two redcoated Mounties stepped smartly off the premiers' car and standing on guard on the platform kept the more curious from mounting the steps. No sign of life was seen in either of the two official cars at the rear of the train.

The special train stopped just long enough in Belleville to change engine crews after which it pulled out for Brockville and Ottawa.

Juveniles Blamed For Break-ins

The series of break-ins reported in various parts of the city during the past two weeks was continued last night with juveniles believed by police to have been responsible for entering Reid's Dairy on Parker Street, and also the Belle Cleaners and the Campbell Paint Shop on Coleman St.

Police discovered the break-in at Reid's when the patrol officer checked the premises. It was reported that about $20 in bills and change was taken, along with two change purses and a number of milk tickets.

There was no report as to whether anything had been taken at the other two premises entered.

The firecracker nuisance continued with police receiving a complaint that boys were in the habit of throwing lighted crackers into Dozier's Hotel beverage room. The boys had dispersed by the time police officers arrived.

Vatican Favors Accord With Yugoslavia

Vatican City, April 7—(AP)—Authoritative Vatican sources today said the Vatican would favor an accord with Yugoslavia's government, but a necessary prelude for such an accord must be the establishment of religious freedom in Yugoslavia.

This opinion was expressed in comment upon a statement by Msgr. Alojzije Stepinac, imprisoned Archbishop of Zagreb, who said in an interview with Associated Press correspondent Alex Singleton that he believed a compromise solution of differences between the church and Yugoslavia's government could and should be worked out "in the interests of both."

The archbishop's statements, the sources here said, correspond perfectly with the viewpoint of the Vatican.

The archbishop's emphasis on the need for a clear-cut division between church authority and state control over temporal matters, the sources here said, always have been a precept of the Roman Catholic church.

The executive of the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities yesterday paid tribute to Orrin H. Scott, B.Sc., Belleville, at the annual meeting of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario at a dinner in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto.

Honorary memberships in the association were presented to Orrin H. Scott, B.Sc., P. Eng., Belleville; Edward V. Buchanan, A.R.I.C., P.Eng., London, Ont., and Morris H. McHenry, B.Sc., P.Eng., Toronto.

Mr. Edwards were given in recognition of the contribution made by the recipients over a period of years to the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities and to hydro in general.

He came to Belleville in 1913 as manager of the then Trenton Electric and Water Company. When this institution was purchased by the government in 1916 and operated under the Ontario Hydro Commission he was retained in a managerial capacity.

In 1929 the city took over operations under the name of the Belleville Hydro Commission, and Mr. Scott was named manager-secretary. From that time until 1937 the commission supervised the use of hydro only. When the Public Utilities Commission came into being and assumed control of water and gas utilities.

Mr. Scott who was presented with honorary membership in the AMEU at a dinner at the Royal York, Toronto.

In 1919 and 1920 Mr. Scott was named president of the Association of Professional Engineers of Ontario, and for a number of years since has served as a director-at-large, a position he holds today.

He has always taken an interest in the community welfare of the city. He is one of the few remaining charter members of the Rotary Club here and a past president of that service club. He also is a past president of the Chamber of Commerce and for a number of years served as a director.

SET 15 FIRES

South Royalston, Mass., April 7 — (AP) — A 16-year-old boy yesterday admitted, police said, that he set fires in 15 homes in the last three months. Two of the fires destroyed two houses with a total loss of $30,000. The boy gave police no reason for his actions.

Giant Carriers Steaming North To Handle Ore

Cleveland, O., April 7—(AP)—Giant ore carriers steamed north today toward Lake Superior to load the first of 60,000,000 tons of iron ore the American mills will need this year.

Even with start half a month earlier than last year, moving the 90,000,000 tons the defense transportation office says is needed will keep 255 vessels in the ore fleets operating at a fairly fast pace.

Last season only 78,205,000 tons were brought to down-lake ports, and stock piles at furnaces are lower than a year ago.

Fifteen of the carriers left last night and today from Lake Erie ports and were due to enter Marquette, Mich. and Two Harbors, Minn., Sunday.

Another 15 vessels will leave tonight. Monday the Lake Carriers Association ice committee will decide whether the remainder of the fleet can embark.

The icebreaker Mackinaw reported yesterday afternoon that the first contingent of carriers should have little difficulty in investigating the St. Mary's River from Lake Huron into Lake Superior. The Mackinaw entered Whitefish Bay late yesterday and was finding the going fairly easy on the way to Michipicoten, on the Canadian side of the international boundary, through Lake Superior.

Today the Mackinaw was to reach Marquette, and by tomorrow break the way for the carriers into Two Harbors, near the west tip of Lake Superior. Today's passage to Marquette was expected to be a fairly easy one, the Mackinaw officers said.

From the Michigan iron-ore port of Escanaba, locked in Green Bay off the west side of Lake Michigan, the first cargo of ore cleared yesterday in the Interlake freighter Seelwood.

Stories of Famous Hymns

GRACE B POWELL

"O HAPPY DAY!"

O happy day that fixed my choice
On Thee, my Saviour and my God!
Well may this glowing heart rejoice,
And tell its raptures all abroad.

O happy bond that seals my vows
To Him who merits all my love!
Let cheerful anthems fill His house,
While to that sacred shrine I move.

'Tis done. This great transaction's done;
I am my Lord's, and He is mine;
He drew me, and I followed on,
Charmed to confess the voice divine.

Now rest, my long divided heart;
Fixed on this blissful centre, rest;
Nor ever from thy Lord depart,
With Him of every good possessed.

He taught me how to watch and pray
And live rejoicing every day;
Happy day! Happy day!
When Jesus washed my sins away!

Philip Doddridge wrote nearly 30 hymns during his lifetime but his "O Happy Day!" will always be the best loved in the list. A close friend and admirer of Watts, another gifted English hymnist, Doddridge wrote most of his religious poems for use in connecting with his services in the independent congregation at Kibworth and in later preaching at Northampton. It is for his custom, immediately after visiting his Sunday morning adults each week, to write a hymn embodying the doctrinal and devotional sentiment of his sermon and to have it sung at the close of the preaching.

He was the youngest of a family of 20 children and entered the ministry when he was only 19 years old. He was scarcely 21 when he began his pastorate at Kibworth and six years later he was serving as head of the theological training school at Northampton while he preached in a local pulpit on Sundays.

Philip Doddridge holds a coveted niche among the world's greatest hymn writers and the quality of his poetry is reflected in the fact that more than one-third of his hymns are still in general and regular use. His religious songs were circulated only in manuscript form during his life-time and it was not until 1755, four years after his death, that they were collected and published for the public under the

...is a grand collection. When will Christians ever cease to sing such glorious hymns as "Awake, My Soul, Stretch Every Nerve," "See Israel's Gentle Shepherd," and "Hark, The Glad Sound! The Savior Comes"! Where will they find more precious messages than that in the verses:

"How gentle God's Commands!
How kind His precepts are!
Come, cast your burden on the Lord,
And trust His constant care.

Unchanged from day to day;
I'll drop my burden at His feet,
And bear a song away."

countries. No matter how important or far reaching the effects of an event may be, it very seldom rates headlines that is to say, the largest print is about one-third or so inch high, and is always printed directly above the description of the event itself.

The Swiss publishers are extremely eager to print pictures because of the limited amount of space. From time to time small ones will appear, and some papers reserve the last page of about three editions a week for a series of photos on recent happenings. Weddings do not seem to rate pictures.

On the other hand, specialized newspapers that appear twice weekly, such as Sport, have a copious supply of pictures with each edition. In addition there are several illustrated weeklies, on the whole better than Canadian weeklies, which cover all types of events, and which serve a generous helping of pictures.

Billboard Editions

Two practices that are not widely used in North America, are found here. In every city there are large billboards, about eighteen inches high and twelve feet long. Each paper has these boards in the various cities and every day the main edition is pasted on the boards so that every one may read it.

The second is the delivery each day of a copy of every newspaper to the various restaurants in town. This paper is put in a special rack on the wall and made available for any diner who wishes to read the news. Since most Swiss have at least two hours for dinner and are in no hurry at supper, many of them will take their favorite paper or magazine from the rack and read it before, during or after the meal.

For those who wish to buy a paper on their way home there are numerous stands which deal only in printed matter. There are also paper boys of every size on the street corners, and who sell not one or two but about a dozen papers. The price for a single copy is from five to seven cents. Most of the newsprint is imported from Canada, and the present high price of paper makes for the shipping costs prevent the Swiss from printing paper which compares favorably in size with ours.

CAMPBELLFORD

Principal Resumes Duties

Campbellford—Mr. W. Armstrong, principal of the Campbellford High School, has returned to his duties after a period of illness.

Mr. George Keith, B.A., the supply principal, whose services were greatly appreciated and who made many friends in Campbellford during his stay, has returned to his home in Lindsay.

Allan Wickens on behalf of the student body, presented Mr. Keith with a fountain pen in appreciation of his services.

St. John's Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the St. John's Y.P.U. was held this week with a very good attendance. The meeting was in charge of the Christian Fellowship convenors. Tom Fox and Ila Armstrong. Pat read a poem and Barbara Finley read the Scripture selection from the Beatitudes.

On the program, Shirley Wright read a poem entitled "Don't Quit" and Marilyn Thompson favored with two piano solos. "The Tennessee Waltz" and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes".

The business meeting was turned over to the president, Earl Tutt. Earl read a letter from the secretary of the Cobourg Y.P.U. for their assistance in helping to make the program put on by the Commodores, a success.

After the roll call, the members separated to their groups for contests. Games were played.

Philadelphia, April 7 — (AP)—Jordon Scott Cantell is only 3½ months old, but already they call him "Hercules." His mother, Mrs. Adele Cantell, says he's been climbing himself for a month. Jordon weighs 16 pounds, sits up and stands.

RESCUED BY FIREMEN

Camden, N. J., April 7 (AP)—Thirty children, many of them swinging in baskets 50 to 70 feet in the air, were rescued by firemen Thursday night from a disabled ferris wheel. The ferris wheel, part of a travelling carnival, ceased operating after a turnbuckle broke.

FEED SAWDUST

Schenectady, N. Y., April 7 — (AP) — Feed sawdust to cows? Certainly, if you treat it with electrons, say General Electric scientists. Tests have shown that sawdust subjected to irradiation with high - voltage electrons, or cathode rays, makes the pure cellulose in the sawdust digestible for cows.

REGALE LILIES

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever;
Its loveliness increases: it will never Pass into nothingness."
—KEATS.

Regale lilies are one of the most popular of our garden lilies. Its fragrant beauty, hardiness and ease of culture all combine to make it the ideal garden lily. The fragrant flowers are large, trumpet-shaped, in glistening white-shaded cream-yellow at the throat. The outside of the petals are flushed with rosy purple. Stems are straight and strong with dark narrow foliage. It grows to a height of 4-5 feet. It should be planted about 6-8 inches deep in well-drained garden loam to which has been added a small amount of sand and bone meal. The garden lover should plan to include some of the lovely lily varieties in his plantings.

Europe as I See It

NEWSPAPERS IN SWITZERLAND

St. Gallen, Switzerland — (special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — The newspaper industry in Switzerland is a flourishing one, judging by the number of editions that appear daily. The majority of newspapers publishers have at least two every day. The leading ones have three with an additional one on Sunday.

There are papers of every religious and political hue; even the communists have one called "Forward." This latter one, however, serves as the Swiss comic strip, since the pictures in it are extremely humorous and their editorials make such sweeping and outrageous statements about the country that everyone has a good laugh. Freedom of the press still exists here so they are entitled to say what they think.

The majority of newspapers here differ greatly in their composition from Canadian newspapers. They are only about one-half as large and on the average contain about one-half as many pages. With the larger papers, certain daily features appear only one of the three editions. For instance, the main sports page may be in the noon edition, the stock market reports in the evening, and the Canton news in the morning.

Different Styles

What advertising is done is generally put on the last pages, and this usually covers the whole page. Very seldom is it scattered about in the paper. Ads conform to the size of the paper and are rather small, the largest being about one-quarter the size of the page. There is no want-ad section as we know it, these ads being scattered throughout the general advertising. Death notices appear here also, each bereaved family inserting its own. It is always ringed with a black line.

An important aspect of a Canadian paper which is missing here is the editorial page. There is nothing along this line to be found but instead the editor will express his opinion from time to time by himself writing articles on current events. He does this most often on the day to day happenings at the United Nations or on economical difficulties experienced by various and Marilyn Thompson favored countries.

THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES

Do men have to be gentlemen on city buses at five o'clock at night? Look around the rush hour buses, and the hostility is most apparent at the afternoon rush hour, when housewives are hurrying home to get this night meal on the table, and when workmen are rushing home to eat the meal.

The courtesy shown on buses, streetcars and other forms of public conveyance has been strained in the past few years. Men who were working long days and nights in factories during wartime felt that they were entitled to sit down when they dropped their fares on buses, and chivalry took a back seat, so to speak.

Attitudes have much to do with the actions of people. Few men will get up and offer to give a seat to a pile on buses. Few men will get up and offer to give a seat to a woman who stands and pushes through the crowd. They know that if they do give up their seat, the thank-you will not even be audible. The demanding woman, even if her arms are full of parcels, seldom is offered a seat.

Also in the masculine class are the women who, when they get seated a spot to sit, unload their parcels on strangers. They are determined to relieve some of their load, even if it means plopping the week's groceries on somebody else's unwilling lap. And then, there is always the chances that the poor male will be driven to offering his seat, in preference to balancing groceries on his lap.

Many women are refused seats at the rush hour because workers feel that, having spended a full day, they are entitled to sit down. Women, they feel, have all day to go downtown to do their shopping, and should be home before the rush hour starts. They extend little sympathy to the shoppers.

There are men, of course, who are old hands at the game of seat-snatching. They are easily spotted by their familiarity with bus and streetcar routines. They can adapt themselves to roll or jolt, and still make their way to the rear of the vehicle in record time. Once at the back, they settle in the dark corner, and there rest until it is time to get off. These men feel that they will not be bothered at the back by indignant females, and once wedged into their niche, they are hard to root out.

The second class of male "experts" includes the people who are standing by the bus, peering into the windowgazers. These men look everywhere but at the people who are standing on the bus, and keep their eyes turned to the window. Even at night, their eyes can find more of interest outside the vehicle than in, and they avoid that embarrassing look that a standing woman can give them.

Women are typed, too. There is the "larger" woman, who shifts her parcels high in her hands, clamps her hat firmly on her head, and pushes through. Her arms are so full that she cannot take hold of a handrail to keep her balance, and the people on either side of her must hold her up.

Next in line is the "limper." She is the woman who suddenly develops a bad limp on a crowded bus, or twists her ankle getting on the vehicle. Any man in the first eight rows of seats is thus subjected to the sight of a woman in pain, and is almost forced to give up his position. Unless he happens to be a window gazer, and thus exempt.

The fight goes on. Well-meaning persons have decried the dimming of the light of chivalry for years, but it seems to be growing dimmer as the years roll by. And its place is a battle of the sexes that may last forever.

A DISCOURAGING INCREASE

A new round of wage increase demands is on the way. The [illegible] the laborer's reaction to the skyrocketing of the [illegible] index in February to an all-time high of [illegible] had been started in parliamentary circles by [illegible] official announcement was made [illegible] to begin re-imposition of price controls.

[illegible] working force of the country will not mind [illegible] because their wages are anchored to the [illegible] which have risen steadily since 1939. Otherwise, when the index dips, wages lessen. [illegible] to be experienced.

[illegible] people whose weekly wages are not tied to the latest increases in living costs is merely one [illegible] of monthly blows. But by the intensity of [illegible] (4.5 points over January), it will be a severe [illegible] to most people in the lower and middle classes of [illegible] power.

[illegible] white collar worker is caught in the middle. He [illegible] organized, and thus can present no united front to [illegible] buyers. His remuneration depends on his ability to [illegible] the right job, at the best wages.

[illegible] with the fact that Finance Minister Douglas [illegible] Abbott's budget speech is expected to hit the pocketbook [illegible] little harder next Tuesday night, the cost of living increase is discouraging. The mad cycle continues, it seems.

An American woman, visiting in Canada, has been carrying on an argument with a well-known Canadian newspaper columnist. The latter had chided certain Americans for their links between politics and organized crime. The lady replied that he should never compare a "peanut country" like Canada to the United States. The lady is obviously miffed in her country. She obviously has heard of the disastrous British "groundnuts" scheme, and has confused Canada with the United Kingdom.

THE PRIDEFUL THINGS

We build our hopes and dreams on these:
Rose bushes and the lilac trees;
Children with manners that will please.

These make the sum of all desire:
In winter time a cheery fire;
A few possessions friends admire.

We strive and long a lifetime through
For things to deck the home anew
And gadgets drudgery's tasks to do.

A home content, by love maintained;
All true delights till strength has waned;
With these, the best life holds is gained.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE URGE TO TELL

Readers of this brief column have, of course, noted how frequently I have urged Belleville writers, hoping to stimulate others to travel down a path that has been found very helpful to me. Also, to call attention to books that have nourished me in mind and heart has been one of the supreme privileges of this space.

By sharing our pleasures and profits with others, we double our own. Some time ago a reader of these lines told me of his own little book, which he called "Come Climb My Hill." I found it very inspiring because it was about simple things that the author, Norton O. Abbott, wrote about when he lived in Maine. Most of us are interested in the loves of others and like to hear and read about them.

Many years ago I became interested in two small books, by Logan Pearsall Smith—"Trivia" and "More Trivia." These brief books were made up of sparkling gems of literary expressions that fascinate one who delights in beautiful prose. Christopher Morley speaks of one of these writings as "dainty little paragraphs of guilded wines, these nibbles and gets of wistful inquiry, these pointed sparkles of wit."

So interested did I become in these books that I searched for others by Smith and for books about him. Finally a new edition was published in England. I got it and read it. It is mostly of the letters that he wrote. But in it the author tells of the day before Smith died, when he came across a book he had never heard of and asked that the telephone be brought to him immediately that he might tell about it. "Who is he asking for?" said the wife to his son, "Logan Pearsall Smith" (The book was George Orwell's "Critical Essays.")

I think we all have this urge to tell others of books that have intrigued and given us pleasure, as well as places that have given us happiness, or works of art that have inspired us. One of the great sharings of this life is how lies in telling others that they may share with us the thrills of our experience.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

SIDESHOW EXHIBIT

The sponsors of the local sideshow society masquerading as a "peace council" have reached into their bottomless pit of hypocrisy and pulled out a lulu. At a forthcoming speaker the council proudly announces the name of that delightful study in contradictions, Dr. Christopher Woodward, of London, England physician, Conservative pacifist, and, with the possible exception of the Dean of Canterbury, the favorite curio of the far left.

Dr. Woodward was last in the news when he got, in his own words, "a most fantastic reception" in Prague en route to the Warsaw "peace" conference and was delighted to find he hadn't even been asked for his passport. "What an Iron Curtain!" he exclaimed, in keeping with his charming naivete. (It is still made of iron, unhappily, if you happen to be an objective journalist asking for a Russian visa.)

Dr. Woodward on his timely Tory thrilled everybody to pieces by announcing that the British government had "no illusions about the Americans, branded General MacArthur a hypocrite to cheers and expounded his theories of non-violence as the true path to peace. He didn't mention the Russophiles. Dr. Woodward is not on the record as having said but sweet murmurings about the Soviet Union itself.

It is reported that the Warsaw conference listened with respectful interest to the doctor's views on pacifism. It happen to be a Christian Pacifist," he is reported to have said. "I have burned my life to be sacred and I know of nothing that would justify me at any time in either killing or running any risk of taking, human life."

It was also in Warsaw, in 1942, that Herr Himmler issued all order which stated that all Christians were to be killed in the course of a year and the dead were to be used like cordwood in the Warsaw Ghetto. Yet no one at the conference pointed out to Dr. Woodward if he felt that this might have justified our date with the Nazis.

A Biz Hello

The local council is in a delirium of joy at getting such a controversial figure on the platform and nothing so far has demonstrated the 400,000 fathoms deep cynicism of the boys who pull the strings in this puppet show. In fact, Dr. Woodward represents almost everything that they stand against.

In the first place, he is a Conservative, although suspended from his party at the moment for conduct unbecoming to a Tory, and to the party-liner the very word "Conservative" was loaded contempt. This was the party that sided with the workers of Great Britain, the proprietors of the class system, the defiler of the very fundamentals of socialism.

In the second place, the doctor is a Pacifist, a believer, in the resistance and non-violence, even for defense, and this too, is a kind of blasphemy that sinks in the quivering nostrils of the Communist.

On the platform when Dr. Woodward speaks, and no doubt applauding the loudest of all, is at least one citizen who cheered the last days of the Mackenzie-Papineau battalion who fought for freedom in Spain at least one who speaks in the defense of Stalinism (and not without reason) as a shining moment in world history.

That, in crude, Dr. Woodward stands opposed to all that the left holds dear and, in this, he shares the view of the far left. A Tory-Pacifist is an anachronism which reminds one of a certain master of a slave ship in which some homely slave girl like rats in the hold and the text "Love Ye One Another" was carefully set in neat.

And yet the executive secretary of the "peace" council wouldn't split on a Tory and a most militant fellow) has "no illusions about the U.S.S.R." and is inspired" after Dr. Woodward's address.

Hail, Hail For two reasons.

The first reason is because of the doctor's pacifistic principles and the fact that he comes from a prominent church family, and the second is that he is a man of respectability and an atmosphere of the commercial—all to the council's false front.

Secondly, however alone the doctor and his philosophy, all of the Hyde Park Corner noises he made sounded like the last gasp of the democracies, all have the effect of planting doubts in the minds of the weak-kneed who take freedom so much for granted.

Forcing Peace

The small and busy hives of conformity in this country would like nothing better than to have a nation of Dr. Woodwards to mote as that possibility may be.

Pacifism en masse would be extremely open to attack from without, but within, unless of course the nation willing to use violence against our own people and not against foreigners.

Fact is, the only real hope we have these days for a peaceful world is in non-violence which, in today's cockeyed semantics is non-pacifist. The United Nations is pledged to maintain world peace. It's been said by many men that if there had been a League had there been a United Nations in 1939 with the will to resist Hitler, there would have been no World War Two. As it was, inere was no UN—only a Conservative and appeasement.

All this is well known to the doctor who talks and to the men behind the "peace" groups and explains why Dr. Woodward is to appear under their auspices.

American Army Buying Meat Behind Curtain

Frankfurt, Germany, April 6—(AP) — The American Army has been buying meat from behind the Iron Curtain to feed its dollars for it. German wholesalers reported today.

They said they have imported beef from Hungary for United States occupation personnel in Germany and have been promised help by American officials in obtaining pigs from Poland.

There is no embargo on non-strategic trade between Communist-eastern Europe. The U. S. State Department has ordered it to discourage the flow of dollars to iron curtain countries, which use them to buy raw materials on the world market.

Today's wholesale trade in shipment of livestock from Hungary, American officers at Heidelberg said.

"This headquarters has no knowledge or transactions of this nature."

SWALLOWED SMALL MOUSE

Forli, Italy, April 6—(Reuters)—Two-year-old Rosalba Zaniti was reported out of danger today after swallowing a small mouse. The baby girl choked when Rosalba's mother was awakened by the cries. She managed to speak, to the girl indicated acute stomach pains. The child vomited and a small dead mouse appeared.

PROTEIN — WHAT IS IT?

Foodstuffs consist largely of proteins, fats and carbohydrates. Foodstuffs consist mainly of but one of these substances, others are combined in two or more. It is generally understood carbohydrates consist of starches and sugars. There is very little reason to misunderstand the nature of fat. The nature of protein seems less well understood.

A protein is an extremely complex compound, consisting of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, sulphur, phosphorus and, particularly, nitrogen. The nitrogen content of protein is the characteristic element which distinguishes it from other compounds.

The elements of protein are combined in such a manner as to form so-called amino acids, of which some twenty-three are known at the present time. While these acids are all very similar, sufficient difference exists between them to create a distinct difference in the nature of the protein derived from various parts of the same body. The proteins in the blood of a person are slightly but distinctly different from the blood protein of another man.

All animal and plant tissues contain proteins which are intimately involved in the life and growth of the cells. Even mature cells—much more so than fats or carbohydrates. Proteins are the principal constituents of all animal tissues and fluids.

Recent years have been blessed known that proteins vary widely in their nutritive value. For many years, it was believed that all protein merely consisted of the nitrogen-bearing portion. With the more recent knowledge of the chemical arrangement of the amino acids which make up protein, we now know how to rate the various sources of protein as to their nutritive value.

In the order of their comparative values, the proteins stand head the list. Milk, fish, rice potatoes, oats, peas, white meats, eggs and cheese.

This listing may surprise those who wondered how certain articles—rice eaters—could compete physically with Americans who consume meat. Actually, the Oriental diet has been commonly regarded as "starvy" and deficient in protein. But orientals—particularly those in the coastal areas—consume considerable fish. Fish and rice are the third and fourth most valuable sources of protein food in the list of foods given above. Thus while the orientals may not classify as meat-eaters, as the term is used by Americans are, they nevertheless manage to get their proteins.

The devourer of refined carbohydrate foods — to the exclusion of protein foods—can no longer point to the orientals as proof that proteins are not highly essential to nutrition. The scientific facts and laws concerning nutrition are not changed by provincial boundary lines or by race. The "handful of rice" consumed by the oriental is not denatured and refined. Long regarded as a starchy food, rice is a far cry from the pink and brown "pop" of America—a carbohydrate and nothing more.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Shaking Palsy

I have written twice for information about the taking hyoscine and parabrybrol for Parkinson's disease, and have received no answer. (D. A.)

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope. Hyoscine for Paralysis, Agritans, Shaking Palsy, Parkinsonism. For the information you request, consult a physician.

Druggist Flays Doctor on the Side

I see ads urging people to drink lemon juice every morning to keep well. One ad says the citric acid in lemon juice is detrimental to the system, causing rheumatism or irritating the stomach and other organs. (M. A. J.)

Answer—I like it, lemon juice every day is healthful. It carries the kind of minerals that are alkaline—tends to oppose acidosis. But take my share and we'll continue to fight it in the form of lemon meringue pie.

Hydrocele

What causes hydrocele? Can an ordinary doctor tap it or treat it as well as a specialist? (W. T.)

Answer—Yes. I don't know why in perhaps one in each thousand there is accumulation of serum (watery fluid) in the sac around the testicle. Sometimes, although the fluid (tapping) is usually only temporary in effect. Any doctor can do the treatment or operation is necessary.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A million motor cars could go past me; and unless they were the latest, the extra chrome stripes or unless they had a man dancing a jig on the roof, I would not notice any one of them a passing glance. Yet there are countless numbers of people who take keen interest and pleasure in noting every car they see; they could tell you the make, the model and year. A million women could pass me; and unless their hats were the latest, or were outlandishly designed, or else in tireless interest the clothes they men wear, paying tribute to the women's taste, I would not remember.

Any number of us take no more interest in the sight of a beautiful small wild flower than we would in a scrap of paper blown by the wind across our view. And it is perfectly understandable. The instinctive interests of most people are directed to man-made affairs, often born in the list of existence. We do not altogether push ourselves into the world.

Yet in the spring of the year it is possible, in the human consciousness an awareness of wild nature that is not instinctive but one that comes from familiarity with the temperature and consistency of the weather, and is definitely warmed by the coming of spring. And to take such a one into the fields in the country, or even into the suburbs, or a park at this time of year, when the first fantastic birds are returning and the first wildflowers showing their heads, is to open up a new magic door for another insider. I say insider instead of guide for to me that people with no awareness of wild nature are living little as far more dry domicile than they perceive.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

UNDER THE GREAT BATON

The concert is about to begin. A hundred musicians are gathering on the stage. Some are tuning their instruments, but most of them are quietly playing over certain difficult parts of the program about which they are nervous. Others merely sure.

The result of this, of course, is indescribable discord and confusion. Each man is quietly playing his part, but he is playing without any reference to anyone else.

But here comes the conductor. Now each musician begins to play his part under the direction of the conductor's baton and with the most scrupulous regard for the performance of every other member of the orchestra. What at once was playing his own part, now becomes harmony of revising beauty. Each one part is blended into the playing of the whole, and all under the direction of the conductor.

There is discord all along over this in our offices, in the government, in the clubs, within the political life. But there are few men insists on playing his own part of the great symphony as he pleases. It is time and scrupulous to see that we harmonize with the plan of the leader, and do it as under the direction of the Great Conductor, that discord turns into harmony.

Quinte Pickerel Included on Menu For Auriol

Picton—Fish caught in Prince Edward County waters were included on the menu which the President of France, Vincent Auriol, enjoyed at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto. Some time ago, when plans were being made to entertain the distinguished visitor, a request was made by the hotel to James Scott and William Watson of Picton to supply fish for this occasion. They were commissioned to ship 250 pounds of pickerel. This was carried out this week, the fish being taken in nets set off Indian Point. The local fishermen were quite thrilled that Quinte fish were chosen for this select menu.

FRANKFORD

Upsets Feature Bowling Playoffs

Frankford—Frankford Bowling League opened their playoffs Thursday night, and a couple of real upsets were the result of the opening round. The Sharpshooters, an all-season joke to the Hornets, couldn't do anything right and bowed out in 3ll-three games. Biggest upset came as the Lucky Strikes overpowered the Monarchs in all three games, in spite of Captain Bob Morgian's 806 game for the losers.

The Alley Cats surprised the Screwballs by taking two games from them, and high total by 28 pins. The Aces took two games from the Royals and currently hold high total by 53 pins. Next week, the same teams go at it again, in the best six series, total pins to count for the six games in event of a three-all tie.

COMMONS HEARS

Opposition members criticized the new aid as "insufficient", asking that Canadian gold producers be enabled to get at least part of the benefits of the current premium price for gold on the world market. The government now pays gold at $35 (U.S. funds) per fine ounce.

Will Help Mines

Mines Minister Prudham said the government hopes the gold bill will help the mines to meet continuing high costs of production and consequently assist northern communities which derive their livelihood from the mines.

He discussed the vital place of the industry in Canada's economic pitcture and reviewed the assistance program since it first was introduced by the Industry.

Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) suggested the industry was in for a "very great disappointment". A fundamental problem was that it was squeezed between high production costs and a selling price for its product which was fixed by the government and "tied up" through International agreements.

On the present basis, the legislation was "stop-gap and temporary."

Joseph Bradette (L—Cochrane) supported the legislation, but suggested it would be impossible to put it into permanent form. He called for a higher price for gold and suggested the treasury, as an experiment, lower its price by $5 or $10 an ounce.

He would like to see more gold released for use by industry and other ornaments.

Mr. Prudham denied that the new form of assistance would penalize efficient producers in favor of those with a high-cost operation.

The "floor" cost at which assistance started was low enough so that any mine able to operate below it would have ample room to make a profit without federal aid. He questioned whether mines making a satisfactory profit should be subsidized.

Mr. Prudham also indicated he did not favor a free market for gold. It was his view that, if the whole world got on a free gold market, the price might drop.

In any case, he said, Canada had to abide by the regulations of the International Monetary Fund as long as she was a subscriber to it.

John Blackmore (SC-Lethbridge), Social Credit spokesman uses the measure as a springboard for an attack on "that inquitious monster" the International Monetary Fund. The fund has been a long-time bugaboo of the monetary-conscious Social Credit group.

E. D. Fulton (PC-Kamloops), whose riding contains British Columbia's biggest gold producer, suggested one of two alternatives:

1. Allowing gold to be sold on a free market, which would be beneficial to international trade and the convertibility of currencies.

2. Further domestic measures to assist the industry beyond the proposed legislation.

Mr. Fulton said the gold-mining industry of British Columbia faces a "real question" to whether some mines will be able to continue operation under present conditions.

Not Solution Claim

Armand Dumas (L—Villeneuve), from a Quebec gold-mining area, said he is hopeful the government will soon see its way clear to paying a higher price for gold.

A free market it not the solution to the problem, he said. He added he thinks the government realizes its financial aid is not the real solution, either. But he accepted the word of Finance Minister Abbott that Canada must stand by its commitments under the International Monetary Fund.

Earlier, the chamber gave first reading to bills to bring the Arctic Weights and Measures Act up to date and to end the long-standing rule that no one can sue the federal government without first getting the government's permission.

WEDDINGS

BLAIR—ROHRBACK

A marriage of interest took place in the United Church parsonage, Ivanhoe, on Saturday, March 30, when Alverna Louise Rohrback, only daughter of Mrs. Wm. Hensell and the late Edward Vincent Rohrback, of Bridgeport, Penn., N.J., became the bride of Charles Robert Blair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robert Blair, of Crookston.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Boyd Hamilton.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. William Hensell, was winsome in street length powder blue moire taffeta with matching hat in blue straw, flower trimmed, with veil. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses.

She was attended by Miss Helen Sweet, of Toronto, who wore a street-length baby pink sheer nylon, with matching hat, and a shoulder corsage of sweetpea sweetpeas, pink carnations and purple pansies.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Walter Blair, of Niagara Falls.

Fred Beebe Discusses 'Shyness'

"Shyness may show itself in many ways, some of which are very objectionable," stated Fred Beebe, as he led a discussion on this topic before the Parent-Education group of the Home and School Associations at Queen Mary School on Thursday night. With the aid of wall charts and audience participation, a comprehensive survey was made of the symptoms, causes and remedies for children, adolescents and adults.

Thoughtless remarks about a child's size or some peculiarity or adult laughter at his awkward attempts to learn and speak make a child feel humiliated and inferior and gives him the impression that he is different from others and so leads to shyness. Surrounding a child with too many restrictions and so limiting his experiences that he becomes afraid to try new things is another contributing factor. Making all the decisions for him instead of letting him think for himself makes him unsure and hesitant in new situations. Expecting too much in the way of manners, habits and dilatory manners, habits and dilatory makes him inadequate. His environment may cause his shyness. Too many changes and additions in the home are not good, with a domineering parent or erratic disciplining. All these things may weaken his faith in his own ability to do things—and to do things as well as others.

Adult "Milquetoast"

"This trait of shyness may manifest itself in the timid person who is known as the adult 'milquetoast'; the child may be studious and well behaved and may become the boisterous adult. This is often not recognized for what it really is, anyway, and the attempt to overcome it. The shy child who will not play with other children often becomes the antisocial person in later life. We have the carping dresser and sometimes the over-fussy dresser who carries these habits into later years. The over modest person is also the shy person who is afraid to be at ease in social contacts and sometimes a poor marriage risk. The shy person is often described, diffident, bewildered, easily distracted."

There are remedies which will prevent or cure shyness and precautions will be taken by the wise parent when any of the symptoms occur. A shy person needs to have the feeling of "belonging" to his home; and he must always feel that his parents want him and love him, no matter what. The second essential is to help him build up a foundation of security and self-confidence so that he feels he is able to do many of the things he wants to do and to be many of the things he wants to be. He needs encouragement and affection, and when dealing with a shy person it is well to be considerate and fair in the demands made on him. He should be helped to overcome his unwillingness to meet situations but scolding or persuasion will not help.

Positive Approach

There must be a positive approach in preparing the child for a new experience by setting the stage beforehand and making the situation as pleasant and appealing as possible. It helps to direct his attention away from the things he can't do to what he can do and make him feel that these things are important. Even the shy child successful in anything he should always be praised for it. Avoid the spotlight for the shy person, and do not make pointed remarks when introducing a child to new people. The parent may have to accept the child's position of safety by giving him time to make gains at his own speed as he breaks away from old dependent habits and develops greater poise and control.

A film showing the causes of shyness and its results and cure was shown.

Thanks were expressed to Mr. Beebe for his excellent preparation and presentation of the subject. This meeting concluded the series of meetings for the season.

The story tells the changes that take place when this trio O'Hara with a talent for art starts bringing a little happiness into the dark castle. It has a delightful Irish flavor and just enough romance.

The story for older boys and girls is about a lively younger daughter, Ankhesenpaaten, who was very keen to learn. Her destiny was to be the girl queen of Tutankhamon but her real love was for Kenofer, the young royal scribe. This book is the picture of the Egyptian court where at the age of seven a princess was carrying on in adult capacity far beyond her years. The book also a vivid and accurate picture,

SISTERS ALL

By Jean Love Galloway

At a wedding last week, Gordon Graydon, M.P., proposing the toast to the bride, told an amusing story about a couple celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary. Graydon asked the husband how it was they had lived so happily together all those years . . . The man explained that on the first day of their marriage, he and his bride had made an agreement. Any major difficulties which came up during their life together would be settled by the husband as the head of the family. Any minor difficulties, were to be settled by the wife . . . Then the husband remarked, "And do you know, Gordon, in all those 25 years, we haven't had one major difficulty to settle."

A successful market gardener in the Niagara district says that tobacco smoke will harm small tomato plants. Scientific experiments in agricultural colleges show that tomato plants subject to the tobacco fumes of planters smoking cigarettes and pipes, are likely to be stunted in their growth. That is why people working in greenhouses usually hate their cigarettes before going inside.

A friend wintering in Florida sent us to a plant nursery there to inquire about buying some choice pansy seed to take back home with her to Canada. The pansies growing in the nursery were as big as coffee saucers and were blooming in the most unusual shades of amber and purple.

The clerk explained that they would be glad to sell her some of their very choicest seed. "These seeds are the very best pansy seeds you can buy in the world. We get them from a man in a little town called Burlington in Ontario." Our friend gasped at this news. You see, she came from Burlington, had lived there all her life without knowing anything about the fame of Burlington pansies.

This reminds us of a similar incident which happened when a neighbor was visiting Scotland. She went into a shop to buy a toy for his young son at home in Canada. Asking the store clerk for something Scottish, the clerk brought out half a dozen Scotch toys, all of them marked "Made, in Canada." "You see, sir, our best toys come from Canada," the clerk said.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't marry just to get a home.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was married when I was 17 and I am 23 now and divorced. I have two children, five and six years old, whom my mother has been taking care of ever since they were born as I have been working.

I yearn for my own home, and it seems that I fall deeply in love with every man I go out with. The last one I have been going with is a serviceman who has a wife in a mental institution. He has never gotten a divorce because he said he did not figure he would ever need one. He wants to marry me when he gets back from overseas, but people tell me that he couldn't get a divorce for a long time.

My parents are against the setup, and the other night I got mad at my mother and told her I hated her on account of him. They feel I should go with someone who does not have a wife, so I will be able to get that home I want. But every man I meet seems to have a wife. This man has made me the beneficiary for half of his service insurance and claims he loves me very much, so I thought I would ask your advice.

H. S.

Dear H.S.:

I am on your parents' side, I don't think you should be going out with married men.

Of course, if this one's wife is hopelessly ill, if he is truly in love with you and if you are satisfied to wait for him, the problem could possibly be worked out in some way when he gets out of service. But, according to your own story, you fall in love with every man you meet, so that you probably would change your mind in love a number of times before he got back, particularly if you could get a divorce and give you "what home."

Consequently, I think you would be very foolish to consider yourself committed to him.

You are still very young, and in the course of time, if you make friends wisely and go out to proper places for good times, you are certain to met some single man in your own age group. I know it is hard to wait for things that you want, but don't let your desire for a home of your own rush you into marrying just anybody.

Have fun, but don't build air castles.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 and very much in love with a man of 30. He is not the almost every weekend when he comes home. Everyone tells me he likes me, but he has never actually told me so himself. When we are together he is very affectionate, and yet at times he acts very strange.

How can I show him how I feel about him without throwing myself at him and how can I find out if he really likes me?

P.

Dear P.:

If this young man makes you feel as strongly as you every time he is home, it seems to me that ought to be enough to show you that he likes you. And if you are already ready to see him when he does come, that shows him that you like him. So you really don't have any problem, do you?

One word of warning, though: A girl of only a bit young as a man of 34, so don't let yourself get too romantic about him.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Not honest for bride's mother to pay for shower hesten'd by bride's friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) Is it a breach of manners of the bride's family to give the shower? I have heard that she may assist, but never should give the shower herself. Whose name should appear on the invitations? I maintain that the name of the one outside the family, not that of the member of the family.

(2) Also. Is it correct for a member of the bride's family to give the engagement party?

P. A.

(1) It is not considered good form or good taste for a member of the bride's family or the groom's family to give a bridal shower. It's too, too obviously a bid for presents and has a touch of the new home. And relatives and friends who have less and discrimination about such things wonder why the engaged girl has not some family member who would be eager to plan a shower for her?

I have many times heard about the kind of under-false-colors remarks made about a shower by the bride's mother or sister, for example, by her cousin or by a friend of the bride. I do not subscribe to the lack of honesty of this "covering up" theory.

(2) The party given to announce the engagement of a couple is given by the parents of the engaged girl. (This party is not a must, of course, but it is the party should be given by those who rightfully have the responsibility and the honor to announce such an important milestone in their daughter's life.) Usually the engagement has been announced . . . in any way (by simply telling a number of close friends or relatives and friends, and/or publishing a notice in the newspaper, or by a party) . . . anyone who wishes, relative or friend of the bride or groom, may give a party to celebrate the engagement.

Groom's problem: not enough friends for his bride to be ushers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm the prospective groom, and my fiance and I are planning to be married in July. My bride-to-be plans to have her maid-of-honor and a maid of honor. And this makes a problem for me, which I hope you can please solve. I'm a student at a college here, and due to the fact that the college will be closed in July, there will be only two of my friends who will be available as ushers. Some of my friends are being drafted, and others have to report to their local draft boards at the closing of the college term. My fiance's sister will be the only bridesmaid I am having, so that will be two men and I am an only child. My home is not near here, and most of my high school friends are now in the East or able to be here. My fiance's home is a very near here, and she says that if I can't find enough of my old friends who can be here, she can have some of her friends serve as ushers. She says that these friends of hers, whom I have not met as yet, are not ex-beaux!) What should I do? Please help me.

N. S.

Well, let's see. I judge you will need a best man and four ushers, although of course it is quite possible to have the same number of ushers as bridesmaids, the number of ushers depending on the number of the bridal party that's probably the number. Is your father going to be coming to the wedding? If so, why not give him the honor of being your best man, thus leaving the most important family representative free to quite often the groom's father is his best man. Then your fiance's brother would be groomsman, or the head usher, also quite customary. Ask two of your friends who you say will be there at the time of the wedding, as two more ushers. That leaves only one usher to 'corral', and doubtless a bridal attendant will be either engaged or married, and you can invite her fiance or husband.

What Every Woman Wants— Trim Ankles, Lovely Legs

If ankles are inclined to be heavy, be careful in your choice of shoes. Plain pumps, like the ones pic tured, are best. These have flexible leather sides.

By HELEN FOLLETT

ANKLES, "trim and slender, to your feet. like a faun's". Some girls has 'em, some hasn't, and the "hasn'ts" feel that fate has given them a cruel blow. They yearn with all their hearts to line up with the slender silhouettes.

There is an old-fashioned notion to the effect that when women wore high buttoned shoes, ankles had more support, kept trimmer. Nobody knows about that, but there may be something to the idea. Weak ankles nearly always thicken. That condition can be corrected by exercises and specially made shoes.

Dark Colors

How the legs are dressed has something to do with appearance. Plimpies should select hosiery of the darkest colors they can buy; skinnies should seek lighter tones. To normalize fatted calves one should walk tippy-toe, do high kicking, make every effort to so tighten and strengthen the ankle muscles that the fat in time will go off and die. Wear plain shoes that don't draw attention

BEAUTY

Steam treatments for blackheads

No butter, cream, rich pastries, or chocolate.

"The explanation is simple," a medical man tells us. "Along about the age of thirteen or fourteen fluid glands undergo certain unhappiness among the young fry and, unless the condition is corrected, a mild acne develop acne, a skin disorder that is not quickly overcome, even under professional care. Eighth-graders are particularly likely to be afflicted, certain glands take place in the glandular system. The sebaceous glands are over-active; they send out an excessive amount of oil that picks up all manner of dust, putting a black cap on the wax-like plugs in the pores. These blockades increase in size, the walls break, invading bacteria take possession and pimples form. Then you have a case of acne that may continue for years unless something is done about it."

Most skin specialists put acne patients on a diet, one that is fairly free of fats. No butter, cream, rich pastries or chocolate. As a little girl is dreadfully conscious of the speckled complexion, she is not likely to rebel against these restrictions or deprivations.

The diet should include fruit juices, especially orange juice. Luncheon should include one vegetable, dinner two, and perhaps a green salad. There should be three large glasses of milk a day, from which the cream has been removed.

The daily bath with plenty of friction is part of the treatment, because the skin is an organ of elimination. It must be kept function normally.

Twice a day the face should be washed with a rich soap suds, not just swished over with a washcloth, but scrubbed with the fingers until the soap lathers freely. A rinsing with warm water follows, then the flesh is given a steaming treatment in order that the blackheads and heal the eruptions. There should be at least five hot, moist compresses, applied. Then a cold rinsing, a gentle drying with a soft towel, and an application of a soda solution—one teaspoonful of ordinary baking soda dissolved in half a cup of water—should be allowed to dry on.

Large blackheads should be removed, but never pressed out with the fingers. At the drugstore one may purchase a comedone extractor, a steel instrument with a small circular opening that is placed over the blackhead. If pressure is applied evenly, so the skin will not break and cause a scar.

about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

It pays to be in the pepper business these days.

Ordinary food prices aren't high at all when you think of the rise in the price of pepper. It multiplied a mere 28 times in 4 years, rising from 10 cents a pound in 1946 to $2.60 a pound in 1950.

Although it is eaten in pinches, pepper constitutes one-fourth of all the spices we import. Good pepper has more of a fragrance than a burn. When you grind it in a wooden pepper mill, the fresh unmistakable aroma gives zest to any food.

A bread crumb stuffing for rolled round steak should be made with crushed whole pepper, frequently called peppercorns. Caraway seeds, will give the stuffing a full bodies flavor. Don't make the stuffing too moist, since it absorbs the juices of the meat during cooking.

When ordering round steak, select an unbroken slice with as few seams as possible.

Stuffed Round Steak. Serves 4-5

2 lbs. top round of beef cut 3-3 inch thick
2 cups hard white bread crumb
1-4 cup onions chopped fine
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
1-4 teaspoon crushed whole pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped gherkins
1-2 tsp Salt
Flour
Fat
1 teaspoon meat extract

Have the butcher pound the meat thoroughly with the cleaver.

Combine the bread crumbs, onions, parsley, caraway seeds, pepper and gherkins. Add 1 well beaten egg. Add 1-2 cup water or stock. Use more liquid if it is a more moist stuffing is desired. Add salt to taste.

Spread the stuffing on one side of the steak. Roll up meat and tie shut or fasten with skewers.

Sprinkle the meat with salt and pepper. Dredge with flour.

Melt fat to a depth of 1-3 inch in heavy frying pan. Brown the roll on all sides.

Transfer the meat to a heavy saucepot fitted with lid or a Dutch oven.

Add 1 cup of boiling water and the meat extract. Cover with a tight lid. Simmer over a slow flame until meat is very tender about 2 hours.

Add more liquid to pot during cooking if necessary. Skim excess fat from gravy. Whole potatoes or carrots may be added to pot about 1-2 hour before meat is finished, and cooked until tender.

The Former Miss Frey

By Edwin Rutt

Gil remembered," belatedly, that he was an impromptu host. He took her arm, settled her into the chair. Then he set down on the gram beside her.

"My man, Collins," he said with big faint smile, "has brains. I'm sorry I didn't bring him down with me."

"You're a funny man, Gil." Ede smiled off the little blue hat, let it fall to the ground. "You don't right very hard for your rights. Why didn't you just grab me and make me read that—that statement. Didn't you know that's what you're absolutely in the clear?"

He nodded. "Yes. That was why I went to the trouble of appearing before a notary and getting it. It was sort of a precaution. You see, I was in a jam and I didn't know what else to do. Because the other person was involved. But you took me completely by surprise in my statement. And when you ripped up the paper and walked out of there I was stunned."

Ede reached down and took his hand. "I was a fool. Just a little fool."

"No," said Gil. "I can see how you felt. But I was a fool. I was pretty upset. And I guess I didn't do much straight thinking. I even thought that you'd probably consider my document I'd had drawn up a phony."

"How could I? It's dated and notarized and good notarys don't fake dates, do they?"

"No, they don't. But after you told me what you thought of me that day, the whole world seemed to bust up. I didn't care about anything that night. I left the statement where you threw it and rushed off there to get a lick my wounds, sort of. I was a dope, of course. I'm glad Curt used his head."

"Why don't you tell me just what did happen, Gil?" she said. "I'm still mixed in spots."

Gil retrieved his pipe, lighted it. "Well, shortly after I went up to New York, I ran across Lew Northcott; I've known him for years and we had a couple of drinks together. And, over them, he surprised me by asking me if I wanted to make some money. As it happened I did."

"Why?" said Ede curiously.

"I'll come to that. Northcott went on to say, that he was in touch with a group of men who were considering building a hotel on the side. But he couldn't swing it all on his own account unless he got in with a hook. He needed an angel, he said."

"And naturally, you were the perfect angel!"

The cynical smile deepened on Gil's face. "In more ways than one, I had money and I'm a dope about business matters. Northcott knew both of those things. But I give you my word, Ede, that at first I didn't dream that Lew had your agency in mind. He just said that he controlled a lot of business and that it was simply a question of buying your good agency. The net of it is, I agreed to put up some money. Quite a lot of money."

"I'll bet," said Ede. "Northcott makes making offers, big, wide and handsome. Probably on the strength of your money."

"Well," said Gil, "the matter rested for a while. Then, one Saturday, Lew phoned me and asked me to meet him at his golf club, I did. And I was floored when I found my brother Jeff there. I—I sort of tumbled then, that it was pretty late."

"Northcott's a supreme egotist" Gil Summerfield went on serio-comically. "He's shocked he said anything across no matter how ticklish it is. And he let his hatred for Conway Frey and Company, because he honestly believes in it, and he wasn't going to let anything stop him. He knew that I'd known your family for years and he knew the whole situation about—about your father. It was risky, but he thought he could swing us into line. He believes implicitly in his power to dominate people. And probably why he told you he controlled Jeff's shares before he actually did. And I guess he thought he could dominate me, too. He can't, but he certainly put me in a tight spot."

"You mean because of— of Jerry?" Ede asked reluctantly.

Gil looked away. "Yes. Because of Jeff. We had a talk, Ede. I'm pretty dumb about business, but I gathered that this was supposed to be a cozy little get-together between the three of us. And I also gathered that you weren't to know anything about it—yet."

"Then you saw him that night," Ede said, almost accusingly. "And you didn't say a word."

He spread his hands. "How could I? Listen when I found out that it was Frey and Company Northcott had in mind, and that Jeff was involved, I was on the horns of a dilemma. I'm the thing altogether. But then I reconsidered, Ede—figured, his for darkening. This isn't too easy, Ede."

"I'll help you," Ede said. "You know that Jeff was having pressure put on him to sell out. You thought he was pretty anti, too. It. And you decided to buy his shares, rather than let anyone else get them. Wouldn't that about cover it?" She shook his shoulder.

Gil said embarrassedly, "all right, Not that I'm any thin red hero, but I did figure it best for me to appear to play ball. But, naturally, I couldn't—couldn't."

"Tell me some more evening that Jeff was a louse!"

He nodded. "I didn't want you to know anything about Jeff's part in it unless you absolutely had to. It might hurt you, you see. Jeff couldn't make up his mind. But 'louse' is way too strong. Jeff's easily led and Northcott obviously had him under his thumb. So I figured that if Jeff were really going to sell his shares, I'd better buy them. Rather than let some stranger Northcott might dig up cut himself a piece of cake. Or rather a piece of cheese."

There was a soft warm light in Ede's eyes.

"The lazy," she said, "is getting it at last. Naturally, you did not want me to find out about all this and think—all the things I did think later on. So you went to a notary and made a statement to the effect that if Jeff's shares came to you, you intended transferring them to me. In other words, you were all set to double cross Northcott, weren't you? As a favor to me? I've been looking for a word to describe you, Gil Summerfield. I can't be sure, but I think it's 'darling'."

Gil pretended the hand she'd given him gratuitously.

"And then," he continued, "we all got out on Northcott's boat. You've got to remember, Ede, that I was still affecting to play ball with him. Well, before Northcott talked to you, he came to me. Very late that night. He was quite disturbed. He wanted me to use my influence with you as an old friend of your family's. And then's when I balked. And I balked especially because he finally came clean and told me exactly what he was going to do with your agency, if he got it."

"I must have handed him a jolt when I turned down his offer," said. Ede. "He thought I wouldn't be able to refuse. But what was he going to do with the agency?"

"It's perfectly simple when you stop to think about it," Gil told her. "Northcott controls a lot of different advertising agencies, one of them in that firm he's with. He's a big shot and he can throw business into his own shop. Well he gets a magnificent salary as advertising manager, he owned a big advertising agency, he could gradually shift all the business into his own shop. Naturally, he wouldn't own the agency openly. But he could get someone in front for him and be the power behind the throne. You understand, don't you? He'd not only have his big salary, but he'd get the commission on all the money his firm spends for advertising. It'd be like owning a good fat gold mine. Lewis Northcott, Ede is a very clever man. Not to say unscrupulous."

Ede shook her head. "I guess I'm rather stupid, I ought to have guessed what he was up to. Well, what happened next, Gil?"

"We had a fight," Gil said. "I told him that, now I understood how things were, I wanted nothing to do with such a scheme. I was all for a thorough and that he could get someone else to go in with him for the dirty work. It was"— Gil laughed shortly — "quite a good fight. And finally Northcott blew up altogether and ordered me off his boat. I was glad to go because. . ." He checked himself. "I guess we'll skip that."

"We're not going to skip anything." Ede said firmly.

"Well," Gil said, "do you remember that Winwood woman on the boat?" It seems that once when she was dummy during the bridge game she went on deck and. . . Oh, it was just that when she came back, she—she said something that made me think [illegible] and Reagan were that way [illegible] darkened deck; a faint, almost imperceptible scent of perfume. She smiled.

"I see, Mrs. Winwood stumbled upon what must have looked to her like a movie fadeout. And being the kind she is, she'd have to make a remark about it."

"It doesn't matter," Gil said quickly.

"You're absolutely right, Gil. It doesn't matter—now. Tell me, what do you think Northcott will say when he hears you've backed away from us, I suppose?"

"No," said Gil, unexpectedly. "I don't think so. Since we're on the subject, I went to see him the other day and we patched up our quarrel. I got him to agree to do nothing about your account for at least six months. By that time, he'll come to his senses. Right now he's in love with his little scheme. But I'm betting that he eventually decides it's too risky."

"Gil, you're a lamb, Gil!" she added thoughtfully "I don't know that I ever want to do business with Northcott again."

"Why not just relax on the whole thing, then?" Gil suggested. "Northcott won't make any [illegible] body's cooled down. Anyhow, before six months is up you'll have other interests."

"Just what do you mean by that?"

He tapped the cold ashes from his pipe. "Oh, nothing special. Only the big Irishman won't wait forever, will he?"

Ede was silent a moment. At length, "You believe that the— the movie fade-out Mrs. Winwood saw meant all that you've it meant, don't you Gil?"

"Well, I don't know. But after all, he's a pretty attractive guy and you were both in that business together and I'm a great believer in propinquity and. . ."

"Gil, would you mind standing up for a minute?"

"Eh? Why?"

"Because," said Ede, and there was a queer tawny light in her eyes, "I'm going to do something I ought to have done a long time ago. But darn if I'm going down on my knees to do it."

Gil obediently got up. So did Ede. Suddenly she took his face between her hands and kissed him full on the lips.

"There!" she said. "Does that tell you anything?"

". . .Ede you don't mean that —that you . . ."

"I do mean just that, Gil Summerfield, I should have married you years ago, only I didn't have sense enough to. As for Dan Reagan, he's a grand guy. But I'm not in love with him and he isn't with me either. Oh, he thinks he is, of course. But, actually, he's in love with just one thing, getting along in life. He—he doesn't need me."

Gil Summerfield his arm around her, drew a long breath. "I'm very glad of that," he said, in a low voice. "Because I do.

Later, a very long time later, Ede said, lifting her head from Gil's shoulder, "By the way, isn't Hamilton Greive here?"

Gil laughed. "No, I threw poor old Hamilton out. Couldn't have him around in the state I was in. He went back on yesterday's boat I hope, though, that your young sister's gotten over him."

"If she ever was. It was a few days ago is true," Ede said, "she has. It seems she and that nice Tommy Melbourne have things all settled. In fact, Gil, she's delivered ultimatum everything's working out so well that I—I'm scared. Reagan will do a grand job of running the agency, and Jeep Jeff and Myron in line. Of course, I'll have to go to New York in a while, just to let them know I'm alive. But, outside of that, I'm perfectly willing to leave business to the career women and be a nice comfortable play person-to-person."

But his face was serious. "We could. But if you want diamonds and champagne and big parties and—and such like, you'll have to get 'em from that agency of yours. Because Summerfield's income isn't what it used to be."

"Gil!" Ede sat up. You're trying to tell me you've lost money? No!," she added hastily, "that I care."

"Take it easy," said Gil, "I haven't lost anything. But you know how I've been feeling about being useless. Fooling around and contributing nothing. That's the reason I listened to Northcott's proposition in the first place. I wanted to raise all the money I could."

"And you had no luck?"

"Well, it has. But when Northcott finally made himself clear, I had to scrap that way of trying to be of some use. But I think, now, that I've done the best thing I could do; I'm simply turning over most of my income to help out with—war rehabilitation. I mean for guys who came out of that damned mess a lot worse than I did. With a heck of a lot more than just game legs. I'm pretty late of course. But I guess anything will be welcome, late or no. The rehabilitating centers are going to need money for years, I couldn't put my profits into though. We'll have this house and $150 per. Well how about it?" The little amile, neither tired nor cynical now, was in his dark eyes "Could you rub along on that, Mrs. Summerfield?"

Ede's blue—red, parted— were dangerously close.

"Could I, Mr. Sf My gosh! If you'd even said a couple of bright thin dimes, I. .Oh, Gill Kiss me, idiot!"

A lick of sultry wind, slipping over the garden's tall weed, brought the scent of frangipanni. Oblivious of it, the idiot kissed her.

BELIEVE GIANT IRON DEPOSIT IN HUDSON BAY ISLAND

Discovery of a new iron ore body in the Belcher Islands of Hudson Bay was announced by these four prospectors who flew back to Rouyn, Que., with samples of the ore. Their claims were staked 20 miles north of Cominco, a known deposit of iron. They admit that even though the deposit isn't nearly equal that of the famed Mesabi range of the U.S., it would require millions of dollars to develop the property. BIG MOMENT IN ESKIMO CHILDREN'S LIVES

It took an automobile, a train, a dog team and an airplane to transport hockey skates to Eskimo children at Port Harrison, on the shores of Hudson Bay. The skates were sent as a gift from hardware merchants of Saskatoon, Sask., following an appeal by Anglican missionary, Rev. Don Whitehead. The skates went by train to Moosonee, Ont., by dog team to Moose Factory, by plane to Port Harrison. Arrival of the skates is shown top as Rev. Whitehead removes them from the plane. Pilot Ed Rice is at right. Above is the big moment when the children try on the first skates they have ever had. — Central Press Canadian.

IVANHOE

Rev. O. E. Wagar Talks On 'Fellowship'

Ivanhoe — On Monday evening, the Friendship Circle held their meeting in Beulah United Church.

A worship centre on the communion table formed the setting for the worship service. This centre symbolised the open doors of a church with the picture of the "Good Shepherd" inside. The open Bible was placed in front and the pulpit light centred on the picture.

The meeting opened with a song service led by Rev. B. J. Beckel with Mrs. Keith Bragg as accompanist. The worship service was conducted by Doris V. Twiddy. During the playing of quiet music "The Lord's My Shepherd," a poem "The Good Shepherd" was read.

The Scripture lesson, John 10: 1-18 was read by Mr. Keith Bragg followed by a meditation given by the president on the 23rd. Psalm describing man's relationship to God.

A clear picture of the "Good Shepherd," who laid down his life, was pictured in this brief message, which showed that He wants to keep us in His flock always.

A brief business period followed.

The guest speaker for the evening was the Rev. O. E. Wagar, of Belleville, a former pastor, who chose as his theme, "Old Time Religion." This fine address went back to Old Testament days, stressing the need of a study of the early days and of the Bible to get back to the Old Time Religion. "There is no finer word than Christian fellowship." It is in such religion as the old time religion that such fellowship is enjoyed. Once we get back to the old time religion a far greater Christian fellowship will be enjoyed even more than what we as Christians enjoy today.

Rev. B. J. Beckel voiced thanks and appreciation to Mr. Wagar for giving of his time and talent to bring this most helpful and inspiring message.

At the close coffee and cookies were served and a fine fellowship enjoyed by all.

Ivanhoe — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, of Foxboro, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaw.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Twiddy and Miss Doris Twiddy attended a special service in Trinity United Church, Madoc, Saturday evening. Rev. Lorne Cass, evangelist, was the guest speaker.

Miss Mabel McKnight, Reg. N., of Toronto, is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Duggan.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cooney and family have moved to their new home on the Eighth line, formerly owned by Mr. Ted Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wood, Jackie and Judy, spent the week-end in Kingston.

Miss Gladys Rollins, Reg. N., of Toronto, is visiting at her home here.

Rev. O. E. Wagar and family, of Belleville, attended a meeting held in Beulah United Church on Monday evening.

Mrs. G. A. Creaser, of Hillside, Ont., spent the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Twiddy.

Defence Carrying Maple Leafs Against Bruins as Both Teams Prepare For Fourth Tangle

Toronto, April 7—(CP)—That ole question about what happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable object will be answered in part tonight when Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs resume their Stanley Cup semi-final series.

Perhaps Bruins, who had the third highest goal production in the National Hockey League's regular season, don't really deserve the "irresistible force" tag. But the Maple Leafs, top defensive team in the loop, come close to the "immovable object" class.

Leafs, who hold a 2-1 edge in games in their best-of-seven series (one game was tied), have been drawing heavily on their defensive strength—and it has been paying off.

Toronto has allowed Bruins only four goals in as many games. Leaf goalie Al Rollins' seven-and three of those counters have been by defencemen.

Bashing Bill Barilko, coming into his own with the rough play the teams have produced in the series so far, has counted twice. The other was by Fernie Flaman, former Bruin.

Lynn Patrick, Bruin coach, is counting on a rested squad—the teams played last at Boston Tuesday when Leafs won 3-1—and some new faces to pull his club even with the favored Leafs.

Four players from Hershey Bears, worked out with the Bruins here yesterday. They are goalie Jim (Red) Henry and forwards Georgs Sullivan, Jack McIntyre and Silvio Bettio.

Patrick said he hasn't decided which one of the four will be used. At his disposal also are Bill Davidson and Barton Bradley, loaned from Tulsa Oilers of the United States League.

Maple Leafs, scheduled to return today from their training base at St. Catharines, Ont., will present the same squad which turned in two victories in Boston this week.

Baseball Clinics Will be Held In Province

London, Oct. April 7—(CP)—Delegates attending the 34th annual meeting of the Ontario Baseball Association here today discussed ways to promote province wide baseball clinics for coaches, players and umpires.

Barry Lowes, representing the community programs branch of the province, told delegates that steps are being taken to promote province wide baseball clinics for coaches, players and umpires.

Barry Lowes, representing the community programs branch, addressing before members of the minor executive and delegates from minor associations and leagues, said the purpose of the clinics was to raise the standards of baseball coaching and umpiring in the province.

To date, 19 requests for clinics have been received by his department Mr. Lowes said.

The program community programs branch undertakes to pay the instructors and half of their travelling expenses and costs of boarding the instructors.

S. B. Armstrong of Toronto, chairman of the minor association of the O.B.A., presided at the afternoon session, while senior and intermediate representatives met in the seminar.

Today's general session will discuss constitution amendments.

One amendment that came in for a great deal of discussion Friday by the minor group was proposed under the "certificate tax."

The amendment as proposed would be changed to read that "players in all series must pay O.B.A. certificate charge of 50 cents is made for all senior to pee wee certificates inclusive, which is the same as now. The wording of the individual leagues and no player is eligible until payment for certificate has been made to the treasurer of his league."

Delegates finally voted to change the amendment to read that only senior, intermediate and junior players would be subject to the tax. The original and altered amendments will be discussed in league meetings before session, today.

Fans Lined Up Early Today For Tickets

Montreal, April 7 (CP)—They take their hockey seriously in Montreal.

At 7 a.m. EST, more than 300 persons were lined up inside the Forum to be sure of tickets for tonight's Stanley Cup semi-final between Detroit and the home-town Canadiens.

In the lobby itself, another group of some 100 persons, including a number of women, were whiling the time away seated on newspapers spread on the floor.

The earliest of the early birds was Amedee Dallaire who, despite a taped-up rib, arrived to take up his post at 5:30 p.m. last night.

Next came R. Collette, a family group of three, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrod Lederman and a daughter and Paul-Emile Emond.

The box office for the "first come first served" tickets opens at 10 a.m. Game time is 8:30 p.m.

Canadiens lead best-of-seven series 3-2.

Cleveland Barons And Hornets Open Series

Cleveland, April 7 —(AP)— Cleveland Barons and Pittsburgh Hornets—both with perfect play-off records this year—open a best-of-seven-game duel tonight for the American Hockey League title.

The Barons, western division champions and winners of the league percentage title, polished off Buffalo in four straight. Then they had to wait around for several weeks while the Hornets eliminated Springfield and Hershey with six spectacular victories.

The second game of the series will be played here Tuesday and the next two at Pittsburgh, Thursday and Saturday. A fifth game, if necessary also would be played there. Should the series go the limit, the last two games would be in Cleveland.

The Hornets, denied admission to the playoffs until the league directorate finally approved forward John (Goose) McCormack, have been setting a terrific pace.

Their goalie, Gilles (Gil) Mayer, has allowed only six goals in the club's six playoff games. Ray Hannigan of the Hornets also is the leading playoff scorer with eight goals and five assists.

The Barons have just returned from a 1,100-mile exhibition tour.

Geoffrion Hero To Montreal Fans For Winning Goal

Montreal, April 7—(CP)—The Boom-Boom called his shot, and to all intents and purposes put Montreal Canadiens within a single game of the Stanley Cup hockey finals.

It was two hours before game time in Detroit, with the Red Wings and Montreal locked two-all in this best-of-seven series.

"I score tonight," announced Le Gros Boom-Boom with all the aplomb and cocksureness of a Dizzy Dean.

So it turned out that Bernard Geoffrion, 19-year-old pick-up junior for Montreal Canadiens, blasted in the winning goal and gave Canadiens an to a 3-2 victory over the favored Red Wings.

Now it's up to Canadiens to waylay the home-town jinx and win tonight on Montreal ice to settle the series. If the jinx holds, the clubs will play the deciding game in Detroit Tuesday, the winner of the next either Montreal or Boston in the final.

Canadiens face up to tonight's game with the confidence of winners. Coach Dick Irvin predicted last night that his opponent players would end the series. Coach Tommy Ivan of the Wings was just as confident that his club, with a bad game out of the way, could come back and tie the series.

The teams travelled to Montreal on the same train. The Detroit car was just ahead of the Montreal puffer.

There wasn't a semblance of fraternizing. At the five-minute warning Flaman players paraded the station platform in a group. The Montrealers flitted about and raced to nearby stores for soft drinks.

The latter ate in groups in the diner. Ted Lindsay of the Wings, sporting a bandaged head, marched to the far-end table with Gerry Pronovost, but talked affably with anyone who dropped by.

Don Gehrmann Easily Defeats Wilt in Mile

Montreal, April 7 — (CP) — Scores of Montreal track fans today are convinced of the superiority of Don Gehrmann over Fred Wilt in the mile run, feature event in last night's Canadian Legion annual indoor track meet.

Gehrmann, running for the University of Wisconsin, ran away to the final lap in the event from Wilt, of New York and add to his consecutive mile victory over the New Yorker.

Gehrmann ran the distance in 4:04.6 and broke the previous mark of 4:10.6 held by the American since 1945.

In third place was Stewart Ray of the New York Athletic Club.

The first half of the mile Gehrmann and Wilt sticking together. Gehrmann held until the final lap before making his move. He shot in front with three – quarters of a lap to go and finished nearly 20 yards ahead of Wilt.

Both the Canadian and provincial marks of 4:26.6 and 4:30.4 were shattered in the Eastern Canada mile event by Bill Varnell of "Vancouver, running for Washington State University. His time was 4:18.7.

In second place was John Alston of the Montreal Athletic Club was John Joe Barry or Villa Nova College, Philadelphia.

In the two-mile open event, Herb McKinley of Jamaica came from behind and won the race in hand all the way.

Don McEwen of Ottawa and University of Michigan broke the Canadian indoor record in the 2-mile run, registering a time mark of 9:08.2.

McEwen wasn't even extended, moving in front of the field at the start and holding his advantage to the finish. The Canadian open record was 9:14.6.

Skee Riegel Holds One-stroke Lead Over Golf Field

(By The Canadian Press)

A fledgling professional, Robert (Skee) Riegel'gave the greats of golf a lesson on the greens Friday to wrest a one-stroke lead at the halfway point of the Masters Tournament at Augusta, Ga.

He fired a four-under-par 68 over the 6,900-yard layout for a 36 hole total of 141.

The first day pace-setter, little George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa., fell out of his opening 66 pace with a 74 that left him tied for second place with U.S. Open champion Ben Hogan and pro Lew Worsham, the 1947 Open titlist, at 142.

Hogan, who has never won a Masters, used 37 putts but still came home with a creditable 34-36—72. Worsham also was erratic on the greens but managed to roll up a 35-36—71, matching his round effort.

State Premier John G. B. McDonald Friday cancelled a conference of political leaders Saturday that would have discussed a suggestion that Melbourne, Australia, forego the 1956 Olympic games.

McDonald announced Thursday that Victoria State political leaders would meet to discuss bringing the games. The suggestion was described Friday in some quarters as "a policy of despair."

"Australia's amateur athletics are not going to allow their Olympic birthright to be sold by any politicians' messing and pottering," said Keon Hughes, a member of parliament and W. Uren, Victorian Olympic council chairman in a joint statement.

Hamilton Mormons, spearheaded by Doug Shepherd, hook-shot artist from Mesa, Ariz., Friday night ran Saint John Maroon Majors ragged in the fourth quarter to rack up a 61-52 victory in the opening game of the Dominion Intermediate basketball semi-finals at Saint John, N.B.

Mormons trailed by a single point—39-38—at the end of the third quarter, but the Majors, weakened by the foul-out late in playing coach Ralph Fitzpatrick, were no match for their better-conditioned opponents in the final stages.

Welterweight champion Johnny Bratton of Chicago signed Friday for a non-title 10-rounder with Detroit April 18 against Don Williams of Worcester, Mass.

Ross Riemma of Toronto Friday defeated Lional Doryner of Montreal in 32 moves in the first of a six-game match to win the Canadian junior chess championship at Montreal. Winner will represent Canada at the first World Student junior championships in England next June.

Terry Moore, a substitute's sub, turned out to be a surprise package Friday night as he scored a split 10-round decision over Chuck Hunter of Cleveland in the main bout at St. Nicholas Arena in New York. The Baltimore youngster weighed 159¼ to Hunter's 161½.

Called in on 24-hour notice to fill in after Dick Wagner and Ray Ross were forced out, the 21-year-old understudy made an impressive Madison Square debut.

The Sea Lamprey in the Great Lakes

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables)

As you probably know, commercial fisheries in the Great Lakes supply annually millions of pounds of fish to the food markets of the country. While several varieties of fish are taken in the nets and marketed, the one that is most prized is the lake trout.

Back around 1935 the year's haul of lake trout was smaller in Lake Huron than was usual. In 1936 the total catch was smaller still. Alarmed at the unprecedented decrease in lake trout, fishermen began to look around for the cause of this decrease.

They found it all right — the sea lamprey. In case you haven't read about it elsewhere, let me tell you something about this parasite.

The sea lamprey is an anadromous fish — that is, it hatches and spends its early life in fresh water, migrates to the ocean where it grows to maturity, and returns to fresh water to spawn. The adults spawn only once; then they die, but they leave behind them anywhere from 50,000 to 1007,000 eggs to hatch out and return to the sea.

When the baby sea lampreys hatch in tributary streams they drift with the current until they reach mud and silt flats. Here they dive for the bottom where each little lamprey establishes itself in the mud, burrows and installed in their new homes, they live on tiny organisms until they are about 3 or 4 inches in length. This takes, as a rule, about four years.

Toward the latter part of their fourth year, they transform into the parasite stage, when microorganisms no longer satisfy their appetite. They emerge from their burrows and drift down toward the lakes.

Attached to Fish

Once there, they attach themselves to the first fish they can find. Nature has equipped them with round, sucker mouths in which are circular rows of sharp teeth. These rasp a hole through the side of the unfortunate fish and the unwelcome visitor then lives on the blood and body juices of that fish until the victim dies.

Hatchery experiments show that delicate fish, such as the brook trout, die quickly, but hardier species, such as the bullhead, can survive the attacks of several lampreys for a period of weeks.

This damaging business goes on for about a year and a half as the lamprey obtains its growth. Then it goes to sea and immediately a radical change takes place. The sex glands expand enormously, while the digestive tract and other organs shrink, eventually rendering the lamprey incapable of feeding.

After this change has completed itself, the mature lamprey returns to fresh water to spawn. The adults spawn only once; then they die, but they leave behind them anywhere from 50,000 to 1007,000 eggs to hatch out and return to the sea.

When the baby sea lampreys hatch in tributary streams they drift with the current until they reach mud and silt flats. Here they dive for the bottom where each little lamprey establishes itself in the mud, burrows and installed in their new homes, they live on tiny organisms until they are about 3 or 4 inches in length. This takes, as a rule, about four years.

Toward the latter part of their fourth year, they transform into the parasite stage, when microorganisms no longer satisfy their appetite. They emerge from their burrows and drift down toward the lakes.

Attached to Fish

Once there, they attach themselves to the first fish they can find. Nature has equipped them with round, sucker mouths in lake trout. In 1948 the total catch of these same fish, by the three fisheries and using the same methods, was 4,000 pounds.

Huge Decrease in Fish

In Lake Michigan the sad story is somewhat the same. It must be remembered that the first sea lamprey to be captured in that lake was taken in 1936. In that year, 4,763,000 pounds of lake trout were taken by the commercial fisheries. Compare that with the 1948 total of 1,106,000 pounds. Exact figures are not yet available for 1949 but reliable estimates place the total for that year at 343,000 pounds.

These figures all deal with lake trout, but the damage does not not stop there. Other species are suffering just as much, particularly whitefish, suckers, and walleyes. Probably all species are subject to some lamprey depredations, regardless of size or safety.

Of course state and federal conservation agencies are greatly concerned over the damage that is being caused by this parasite, which evidently is increasing. Accordingly, intensive effort is being exerted to effect the control, if not, improbably the complete elimination of the sea lamprey in these waters.

These experimental efforts have taken three forms — prevention of spawning by blocking streams and capturing the lamprey as they come to the spawning grounds; destruction of larval lampreys in the mud flats; trapping and destruction of the migrants on the way from the mud flats to the lakes.

While numbers one and three are highly experimental, do show fairly satisfactory results, none of them indicate the complete solution of the problem.

Our scientists are working on the problem and the sea lamprey is working actively. The task is neither short nor easy. To effect a lasting, reassuring, effective management will take many years and a great deal of money. At present the prospects do not look bright.

Remember, however, that we live in a great country. We have been faced with problems before, serious problems, and we have come through in good shape. Let us bet that a low-grade organism such as the sea lamprey is not going to spoil such a record.

Shagreen Moves Into Favorite Role For Chase

Aintree, England, April 7 (AP) Aintree and nearby Liverpool today looked like New York on St. Patrick's Day — full of Irishmen.

The Irish and thousands of others arriving nightly from all parts of the world had invaded the two cities for the 1951 running today of the Grand National. (Post time 10:15 a.m. EST).

There were plenty of Irish angles to this race.

The favorite was Shagreen, bred and trained in Ireland and handed down to 17 to 2 by a late flood of Irish money.

The second choice was Arctic Gold at 9 to 1, another product of Irish breeding, although now under the American ownership of Jock Whitney. His jockey was Irish Tim Molony.

The third choice was last year's winner Freebooter, a half-brother to an Irish plow horse and ridden by Jimmy Power, a true son of old Erin. The odds on Freebooter were 100 to 9.

A broad Irish streak extended right down through the joint 4th choices, Roimon and Cloncarrig.

Although bred and trained in England, Roimon was scheduled to have Irish Martin Molony at the controls, as his jockey, providing Molony's injuries from a fall early this week permitted him to ride. Cloncarrig, whose odds fell from 22 to 1 to 10 to 8 this week, has often raced in Ireland.

The emerald isle also is represented by Royal Tan and Mr. Derrick town, two less-fancied choices.

And last, but not least, as far as thousands of Americans and Canadians are concerned, the Grand National is the lasts for the Irish Sweepstakes drawing.

The starting field was due to number between 35 and 39, depending on the weather conditions.

Light showers during the night softened the course and more showers were forecast for mid - day.

Magna Charta Invoked By N. Z. Seaman

Wellington, N.Z. (CP) — A New Zealand seaman who deserted here after signing on a ship in England invoked Magna Carta when he was faced with deportation.

Under New Zealand law, a deserting seaman is liable to deportation to the country whose he signed on. Under Article 29 of Magna Carta, however, it is prohibited to exile or banish a freeman from his country.

J. H. Watt, counsel for the seaman, Ronald Albert Murphy, contended that to deport a New Zealand citizen meant exile and was in conflict with Magna Carta.

Magistrate M. B. Scully rejected the plea.

"Defendant will be placed on board a ship about to leave New Zealand for the country in which he was engaged," he said. "Upon reaching that country, the seaman may proceed as he thinks fit as to his returning to New Zealand, when and how he likes, other than as a deserting seaman. There is no restriction on his entering his own country in the ordinary way. This falls short of exile or banishment from his country."

Notice of appeal has been lodged.

While in other parts of the world, communists and western soldiers fight to the death, in Berlin and Vienna a formal exchange of courtesy still prevails in the changing of guards. In Berlin, top, Russian and U.S. soldiers exchange salutes as the guard is changed at Spandau prison. Above, a French officer shakes hands with a Russian commander as the control of Vienna's International District is turned over to the Russians in the rotating system of control devised at the end of the war. — Central Press Canadian.

Victoria, B.C. (CP) — Vast stores of minerals lie under the huge park areas and reserved lands in British Columbia and the mining industry is seeking a way to operate in these areas.

J. A. Fox, manager of Island Mountain Mines Co. Ltd., told the B. C. Natural Resources Conference here that the province is losing revenue and jobs by closing off the areas from mining.

He said 13.7 per cent of the province land area is given over to national or provincial parks, forest reserves or under forest management licence.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 7 (AP) — Notes and comments on the Hollywood scene:

This week Hollywood was still talking about the 1950 Academy Awards. And the conclusion many people reached was: "If you want an Oscar, do it on Broadway first."

This is no hard-and-fast rule, but it is certainly borne out by this year's returns. Judy Holliday won the palm for the role she played for three years on Broadway. Jose Ferrer got a lengthy break-in for his Cyrano film job by playing it on the stage, too. And Josephine Hull had four years on the stage to work into her role in Harvey.

Only George Sanders among the winning actors did not play a role he had created on the stage.

"The Thing"

It looks as though Hollywood has a new way to combat television—scare 'em into the theatres. This week Hollywood was given the first glimpse of "The Thing" (from another world).

It's a shocker in documentary style and harks back to the finest tradition of the early Dracula and Frankenstein efforts.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Sunday, April 8

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Planet aspects today favor mostly quieting pastimes, good reading, healthful exercises and activities. First your duties, necessary tasks, then a wholesome and pleasant diversion.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Your Venus very favorably aspected, improve home, family interests, personal affairs, art, music, reading, charity and useful social activities. Don't forget your spiritual needs.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Not all-auspicious for alertness, originality, the very unique, but a pleasant, if quiting day for you who wish to spend it that way. Religious services, correspondence, charity works okayed.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Happy indications your Venus in most friendly aspect. Augurs for pleasant home, family relations, benefits for church and charity affairs, music, entertainment. Good day.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Day approves the activities and interests befitting a Sunday. Church services, good entertainment, science, domestic relations honored. Heed God's and nature's laws for true contentment.

August 23 to September 22—(Virgo)—Dedicate matters, family affairs, music, other fine arts are favorites this Sunday. Or course your religion is foremost; we all must pray for a return to God for all peoples.

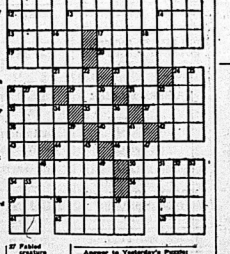
September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—You planet Venus only star in very favorable aspect now, augurs strongly for spiritual nourishment, charitable deeds, happy family relations. Rest, read, enjoy a hobby if you can.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)— Often you energetic active folks need period of complete relaxation time for reflection for the soul, renewed mental strength. Most encouraging rays for refreshing interests.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Forget business and finances where possible that you may get better acquainted with spiritual values, enjoy family life more, improve a hobby. Necessary duties rate.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—All work and no play not good for anyone. Healthful diversion (if pleasant and uplifting) side toward better thinking, more considered, happier life. Essential tasks sponsored now.

January 22 to February 19—(Aquarius)—Plan early for an interesting schedule that will include church services, worthy friends, a healthy diversion. You in the armed services, do your noble work, and have faith.



February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Artistic professions, work with children and old folks, entertaining our armed forces and those in hospitals, and, of course, religious services are today's leaders. Be happy, rest.

YOU BORN TODAY are the ambitious type. Have abundance of talent and capability but could hamper both by being too quick in act and speech, perhaps intolerant of others' abilities and ideas. Don't let these possible failings take hold. You can be firm, strong-willed, like these needs to correct in your faults. Promote God-given gifts, honorably, modestly. Work amiably with superiors, employees, associates for the good of all. Keep your good humor; study, and pray daily.

From a great height a hawk ...ks down on a field, dieting ...hes a diminutive meadow ...use in the grass, and drops ...on it. A neutral colored fish ...imming under water can be ...overed by an osprey flying ...t feet or more above the sur...e. Then down comes the big ...d, aiming perfectly. Gannets ...en plunge for a fish from 400 ...t. Nature has provided such ...ly wonderful vision, but gad...ts to natural supplements ...e for their eyes and extra ...ces under their wings.

In migration, birds look down ...mountains, valleys, oceans, ...ers, lakes, desert country, and ...t roofs. The majority have ...ded their ancestral aerial ...ls. Two main flyways bring ...em from the south to our part ...Canada: the one used most ...tensively leads up the Missis...pi valley, the other by the ...lantic coast. The entire trip ...nnot be made without stopping. ...itable spots must be found ...ere they may alight for rest, ...d, except for swallows and ...ow birds that feed as they fly, ...ot roadside restaurants are a ...bability.

And so warblers are watching ...r woods, sparrows are scanning ...e ground for fields, ducks are ...oking out for nice bodies of ...ter, kingfishers are searching ...r sandbanks. Aviators have re...orted meeting birds at an alti...de of 5,000 feet, and many are ...ght travellers. Yet unerringly ...y reach their old northern ...unts.

Easter in Monte Carlo

By LAVONIA STOCKELBACH

Monaco — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — It was my intention to come over to Monte Carlo by the French liner "Liberte" to Le Havre and then directly down here so that the Easter holidays could be spent with my sister-in-law. But the government - owned railways in France were on strike and anything government - owned over here is slow to deal with, so I was obliged to stay in Paris more days than expected.

To quote Christopher Fry, "Paris is the town that I most often do not go to." It never has appealed to me. We were taken from the port to Paris by autobuses, some hundreds of us, including the movie actor, Humphrey Bogart and his present wife. It was worth an epirance fee to see the speed and precision with which they got themselves into the correct post for the photographers, in a flash the lady stopped chewing her gum, placed her two nice, little feet just so, and although he had no pistol in his hand, he looked even more of a brigand than he used to in the movies.

There were four pleasant sunny hours in a bus which was chiefly window and with a chauffeur who went with relentless and illegal speed, except when climbing the little hills of Normandy. A gentleman, a Italian-Swiss with whom I was placed, soon offered me the seat by the window and as no time at all, he was to all intents and purposes, sharing my excitement over the birds. The fields and air were full of them; skylarks, chaffinches, linnets, blackbirds, magpies, jackdaws and crows. He tried unsuccessfully — to teach me the Italian names and we had a jolly school-ma'am, school-boy time of it; anything to pass the time for he was hoping to meet his wife in Paris.

Had Praise for Ca

He was on his wa[illegible] Toronto where he was establishing a new industry and "needles." It was something more than pleasant to hear his praise of Canada. "Canadians are very hard to deal with," he said, "for we find that you always can be depended upon to keep your word. And it not that a good foundation for any business enterprise? You have the advantage of fifty years of mistakes of the Americans and if you can avoid them, there are great possibilities. It is in Canada where we want to bring up our children."

Our autobus skirted Rouen, but we could just see the square where Joan of Arc had been handed over by her countrymen to be burned by the English and I looked again at the windows from which so many years ago excited eyes had looked at the ghastly spectacle.

At last the Eiffel Tower of Paris came in sight. Surely it is one of the most ugly structures that man has ever built. But, soon, I reached the comfortable room reserved for me and there was the spotless bed-linen and the bath-water that was very, very hot. These lines are being written in the dining-room while my meal is being cooked and at the moment a solemn waiter passes with a fish on a pole and a very lively fish in it, for the approval of a guest. Later, it will appear, probably boiled and served with a sauce, but at any rate, you know it did not come from a freezer. No, there is no guarantee that the fish you eat is the one you saw in the net, but the chances are that it is.

Trying to find a stamp-shop in the vicinity of the old Trinity Church, (there is always time in Paris unless you are in a car) I stopped to watch little children playing in the little square in front of the church. There was a tiny lawn crowded with pigeons and sparrows and the walks were crowded with the children of all ages, dressed in warm, furry-looking clothes, with the rosiest of cheeks and the slightest of legs, parents and perambulators in plenty.

No youngster stepped over the ten-inch high railing, and on the lawn was a notice that food was not to be thrown to the birds, but that the children could not read, and threw the bread in. Along came a policeman and gave everybody an energetic scolding; but a three-year-old, not at all impressed, asked to have a piece broken up for her. A man beside crumbled it for her, threw the crumbs into the air while six or seven sparrows hovered like feats, catching them with astonishing speed, sometimes nipping them from the man's hand. A pretty sight.

Sparrows Liked in Paris

In America sparrows are always unwanted immigrants. Here in Paris they are liked, so it was no surprising a little later, to see in a jeweller's window, beautiful golden brooches — the "Sparrow of Paris." Beautiful indeed, but not enough to draw twenty-three dollars from my purse.

Later in the day, completely exhausted, I entered the Church of the Madeline. It was a curious service. A side entrance had placed me near the altar at a time when twelve choir boys were ranged around with a loaf of bread. They rose, bowed to the very impressive priest with a white waiter's apron tied around his expansive front, and accepted the bread, bowed again and placed the loaf on the floor at his feet. Then, with the same ritual, each was presented with a quart bottle of white wine, which was placed on the floor beside the bread. Finally came a big envelope, contents unknown.

After that, a gorgeous mantle was placed on the shoulders of the dignitary and all retired. Later I learned that the bread and wine were distributed among the poor, of whom there are very many in Paris.

The taxi strike was over, but the railway strike continued, so all the planes were put into action, and a place in one was found for me. After you have watched and danced for four hours at an airport as they hammered and thinkered to get the ancient plane into shape, your temper gets worse and worse and the anxiety more so for I was to be met at Nice and there was no way of notifying anyone about the delay.

Accustomed to American and Canadian planes where one always is given a bite to eat, the sandwiches, cakes, beer, wine and whiskey for sale at the airport were ignored and as the luncheon had been only asparagus and bread, the temper got no sweeter. But at last the "Aigle-Azur" got us going smoothly, steadily and speedily. At Nice we came down with a bang, lights went out, sparks flew, but a neat turn landed us safely on shore a few yards from the Mediterranean, too late for dinner or supper and too early for breakfast.

But presently the blessed telephone put everything to rights and next morning my sister-in-law met me and drove me to Monte Carlo in the clear warm sunshine of March on the Riviera. We were two extremely happy women and it was quite all the hair hour ride to tell each other that.

Awakened by Bells

Eagler morning I was awakened by church bells and so up and went to the Roman Catholic Church of St. Charles, at ten o'clock. It was bright and colorful and not overpowering by its size or antiquity. The altar was decorated with stalls lilies and red carnations, white and red being the national colors, as in Denmark. The singing of the choir boys was especially good and all the music was of the gayest, The beadle was exactly what one hoped for — gorgeous. His chief duty was to prostrate himself when making the collection, tap his rod firmly on the marble floor, advance another three steps, and so on.

This Principality is guarded by ninety soldiers but the beadle was much more splendid.

After that was the Easter dinner where Mr. Belleville's brother and Mr. Belleville sister were able to enjoy each other and our host. But we missed the lovely villa overlooking the sea. My place at the table looked out on the garden with its lemon and orange trees, palms and geraniums.

For dinner we were served first a cold meat course, then a roast chicken with braized endive and potatoes, and a wondrous cake with the name of each guest in plate my host's Easter gift to me, and I was trying to remember him that champagne went all the way along.

My host, who spoke not one word of English, was able to understand any variety of French, and one day he is to tell me as much as time will permit about Indo-China, where, until a few years ago, all his life had been spent since 1890.

Out on the tables in the garden five cats, friends at the three household cats, had placed themselves and I kept hoping that a great big orange just over the head of one of them would drop down. It did not. Naturally, I did not voice my thoughts, either in English or French, but my interest was observed and two almost new kittens were brought for me to play with while in the course, we changed. It did not actually enjoy the kittens, I did the situation.

Then a remark about the two white bees in the garden brought forth their family history. One was called "Angelique" and the other "Antoinette." The latter laying a light brown egg and the latter a pure white one. It was the cackling that had caused me to look out, for it was an international cackle that did not need to be interpreted, but my sister-in-law went out and later placed two sweetly clean and still slightly warm eggs before me. We were amused.

In America, people wonder how the French can possibly spend two hours at their mid-day meal. Now you understand! Nearly all shops, everything, is closed between twelve and two.

World Turmoil Forgotten

Apart from kittens, cats and eggs, there were the many family things to talk about and all the happy nonsense of such a reunion. The world situation was not even referred to. When you have been in a concentration camp; when you have been interrupted in your preparation of an omelette by a bit of shrapnel dropping into it; when you have spent nights huddled below in the garage while the noise of the bombing was overhead, the tea table is kept well away from world situations; kittens and eggs are silly but preferable.

After dinner we went up to the library with its five big book-cases, my host bringing out for me some of his choicest books, until interrupted by visitors, two of whom had just returned from Quebec which they did not like too well, as, indeed, so many France-French do, the principal reason seemed to be that it was cold there in winter!

A long walk and a talk in good Ontario English ended this happy Easter day in Monte Carlo.

Jittery Albanians Protest Violations By Italy, Greece

Claim Provocations Aimed At Starting Third World War

London, April 9 (AP) —Jittery Albania protested today against alleged violations by air, sea and land of its territories by Italy and Greece.

Accounts of the protest published by the Russian news agency, Tass, coincided with reports from various neighboring countries that the Soviet satellite government on the Adriatic had thwarted a planned uprising by 3,000 anti-communist Albanians, Turks, Greeks and Yugoslavs against the regime of red Premier Enver Hoxha.

Tass, however, made no mention of any such plot.

The Russian agency said Albania lodged its protest against Greece with the United Nations secretariat, charging 14 violations between March 1 and March 28.

It accused Greek soldiers of firing five machine-gun rounds at Albanian frontier guards near Strani March 5, and a Greek plane dropped propaganda leaflets on Albania March 25, and declared a Greek ship entered Albanian territorial waters in the area of the Khimara Point March 20.

At the same time the foreign ministry sent a note to Italy "resolutely protesting" eight flights across its frontier by Italian planes between Feb. 22 and March 31.

Tass reported last night that Albania, in a protest to the Yugoslav government, accused it of the role of "frontier provocations," which the Albanians charged also included a bombing off a third world war.

Lacks Confirmation

Reports of the attempted uprising varied and the "invasion" itself lacked confirmation from non-communist Balkan groups.

But, as pieced together from reports of Eastern European diplomats, diplomatic missions still in Albania, exiled Albanians and broadcasts, this is the story:

Forty-One Killed In Two Plane Crashes in U.S.

Charleston, W.Va., April 9 (AP) —A C-47 air force plane flying to Charleston on a funeral mission crashed with a fiery explosion Sunday, killing 19 of its 21 passengers.

There were two survivors. They were brought to hospital in Charleston suffering from burns and other injuries.

"Hospital attendants said each had a "50-50 chance of recovery." Both were burned about the head, face and hands.

Those in the plane were to serve as a guard of honor for the funeral Monday of Major Woodford W. Sutherland, 34, who was killed in another plane accident Thursday.

Most of those killed were fellow officers of Major Sutherland. The funeral service was carried out three hours after the mishap.

The plane was just five minutes from landing at Yeager airport when it crashed atop a rugged hill eight miles north of Charleston.

A misty rain was falling and the ceiling was almost down to the treetops.

Four Colonels Killed

Santa Barbara, Calif., April 9 —(AP)—Twenty-two persons, many of them horribly burned and mangled, died in the crash of a South-west Airways plane Friday night.

Rescue men, backing and crawling through mountain growth, reached the wreckage Saturday about 12 miles northeast of Santa Barbara.

Outside of a motor and a wing the wreckage of the C-3 was little more than a pathway of smouldering grey ash.

Many of the dead were service men. Four were colonels and one a private en route to his wedding.

The plane became lost on a flight that normally takes only 20 minutes from Santa Ana to Santa Barbara.

The plane scattered a wide path of brush, bounced in the air over a little rocky ridge and came to rest about 1,000 feet from where it first pancaked onto the mountain slope.

John Burgum, 38, Los Angeles newspaperman and novelist, was aboard. He was assistant editor of the Yendor Press and had written several books and magazine fiction.

Lack of Oxygen May Have Caused Crash of Jet

Toronto, April 9. (CP)—The Star said today that lack of an oxygen may have caused last Thursday's crash of a CF-100 Jet fighter near London, Ont.

"Something happened eight miles high to cut off the oxygen supply for Flt. Lt. Bruce Warren (the pilot) before the fatal plunge of the CF-100," the paper says in a newspaper story. "This is the theory to which investigators have been led during an initial examination of wreckage scattered around the crash site.

"Warren and his engineering officer, Flt. Lt. Verander, were unable to use their ejection seats during the 40 seconds it took the twin-jet plane to dive into the ground and kill both men."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 9.—(CP)—Synopsis: Showers or weather which may be widespread throughout the state of Michigan Sunday has become rather spotty, so that not nearly as much rain as was at first expected will fall over Ontario today. However, scattered showers will occur here and there between southern and eastern Ontario making it a doubtful weather. Further north, aside from cloudy periods, sunny skies will prevail.

U.S. AND BRITAIN WILL DISCUSS IRANIAN CRISIS

Britons Opposing Nationalization Move

Washington, April 9—(AP) — The United States and Britain today open a series of talks designed to produce a common Anglo-American policy for meeting the Iranian oil crisis.

The U.S. Assistant Secretary of State, George McGhee, is expected to urge the British government, through Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks, to accept the nationalization of Iranian oil and cooperate with the United States in working out a plan for operating the industry under Iranian control.

Britain, however, is understood to oppose the nationalization move approved by the Iranian parliament, and is reported to be anxious to block it.

This apparent division of views probably will be the major issue in the talks.

The Iranian fields produce about 500,000,000 barrels of refined oil a day through the world's largest refinery at Abadan, and an additional 100,000 barrels of crude oil. The fields are controlled by the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. This company is dominated by the British government and is a vital source of oil for Britain's navy.

The Iranian wells, together with those in Iraq and Kuwait, supply most of the oil for Western Europe.

Because of the constant Russian pressure against Iran, western diplomats are convinced that nationalization of Iran oil might result in a diversion of the fuel from western industry to Russia.

May Have to Get Help

There also is the possibility that the Iranians may not be able to operate the industry and will have to call for foreign help.

Colorful Figure Of Alaskan Gold Rush Dies

Santa Monica, Calif., April 9—(AP)—Michael (Klondike Mike) Mahoney, colorful figure in the Alaskan gold rush, died yesterday at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital. He was 81.

Mahoney, 74, a Quebec-born former lumberjack, acquired a fortune from operations in the Klondike gold rush.

Other exploits in the Yukon and Alaska are legion. Asked at one time about the period of his life spent in Ottawa, he remarked that it depended on "how you feel to place it over it myself."

Mahoney, who obtained both fame and fortune from Klondike, in later years became a successful business man in Ottawa. He lived over the story of his adventures make a best-selling book—Klondike Mike"—published in 1943.

For the last three years he had made his home in Santa Monica.

White Powder Aids Heart Victims By Taking Forbidden Salt Out of Food

St. Louis, April 9—(AP)—For the heart patients, a new white powder takes half the forbidden salt out of their food after they've eaten.

That means tastier food, and even regular restaurant food, for many persons with chronic heart failure, high blood pressure, and kidney trouble, the liver.

The powder helps to get rid of excess water, to lose weight, and to reduce the work load on the heart.

The powder is a resin (trade name Resodec) shown today by Smith, Kline and French Laboratories, Philadelphia, in an exhibit at the opening of the 32nd annual meeting of the American College of Physicians.

West Central Sector, Korea, April 9 (CP) —Canadian troops crossed the 38th parallel Sunday —unopposed.

The Patricias filed through an opening in barbed wire across a mountain valley trail northeast of Seoul—and that's all there was to it.

By nightfall rifle companies were north of the boundary and were patrolling ahead.

The troops crossed the parallel in the lee of positions Australian forces took two days ago.

Fire Aboard Liner That Took Seven Lives Deliberately Set Says Report Given Commons

Ottawa, April 9 (CP)—A fire that took seven lives aboard the St. Lawrence River cruise liner Quebec Aug. 14 last was deliberately set, the Commons was told today.

Mr. Justice Fernand Choquette of the Quebec Superior Court, who conducted the Commons inquiry, in a formal investigation was tabled in the house by Transport Minister Chevrier, found also that the 4,-000-ton ship's sister-electric fire-alarm system had been deliberately put out of order.

He could not identify the person or persons who started flames sweeping through the vessel-at she neared Tadoussac, at the mouth of the Saguenay River, with 426 passengers and 197 crew members aboard.

The dead were all passengers, asphyxiated in the fire and smoke while the ship was speeding to Tadoussac after the outbreak had been discovered in a linen closet. No other passengers and crew were put ashore safely at that village.

No Fault of Owners

Mr. Justice Choquette said the fire and the loss of life were not contributed to by any "wrongful act or default" on the part of the owners—Canada Steamship Lines Ltd.—the ship's master—Capt. C. H. Burch—or any other persons beside s the incendiarist.

However, he added there were "several individual defaults and omissions" by crew members not going to stations assigned to them. Also, lack of fire-fighting qualifications and training of the crew was "obvious."

He made several recommendations for tightening up safety precautions on ships of the Quebec type, and in a statement accompanying the tabling of the report, the Transport Minister said these would receive his department's immediate attention.

Mr. Chevrier said:

"With the full implementation of the Passenger Steamship Fire Protection Regulations of 1950, ed. which must be complied with before different types of ships are placed in commission for the season of 1951, the fire protection standards on Canadian vessels will be the highest required in any maritime nation, and the travelling public will be assured of the best possible protection."

The investigator made these recommendations:

1. That fire-fighting training of crews be improved and that the services of experienced fire-hire crew members be given with the same qualifications be obtained [illegible] "fire during the navigation season.

[illegible] ...ast electric alarm sys- tests be tested at least once a week.

3. That additional hoses be placed on the sides of outside decks near side exits at the centre of the ship.

4. That simple-type smoke helmets be placed near fire boxes in passenger quarters corridors.

5. That more life jackets for passengers be available near their quarters.

6. That the storage-battery and dry-battery system be kept under lock and key, and that the linen rooms and the central section compartments where passengers are not admitted be kept also under lock and key.

AURIOL'S END FIRST OFFICIAL VISIT TO CANADA

Given Hearty Welcome On Canadian Tour

Montreal, April 8—(CP)—President and Mme. Auriol of France, a five-day official visit to Canada completed, head for home today.

The distinguished couple, who also made an official visit to the United States before coming to Canada, were given a hearty welcome on their Canadian tour, but it remained for Montreal, observers said, to extend a welcome that far outranked any in other Canadian centres.

The 66-year-old president and Mme. Auriol beamed happily at the ovation and smilingly acknowledged cheers of thousands of milling Montrealers.

The President's party was scheduled to leave for Paris aboard a special Air France plane at 3.30 p.m. today.

Yesterday was a busy day for the President and his entourage. They arrived by train from Quebec and were greeted with a display of pomp and grandeur not seen here in many a day.

The display was only fitting, officials pointed out, noting it was the first time a French Chief of State had set foot in Montreal since the city was founded by the French in 1642.

Although a few official functions were slated for today, yesterday was the "big day."

The party met religious and civic leaders, visited Montreal's two universities — the University of Montreal and McGill University— and inspected the city and, in short, did all the things distinguished visitors do.

Caught in Squeeze Between General's Supporters, Allies

MacArthur Wants Chiang's Troops for War in Korea

By JACK BELL

Washington, April 9 — (AP) — President Truman talked today with congressional leaders about the hot potato handed him by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's latest policy statement.

But they and the White House itself were silent on what action, if any, may be taken.

(Reuters News Agency reported from Tokyo that usually-reliable sources said today that Prank Pace, United States army secretary, had delivered a message to MacArthur from Truman ordering the supreme commander in the far east to abstain from further political pronouncements on Korea.)

May Act Quickly

Friends of Truman inclined in the view, however, that he might act quickly to make known his views. They say Truman is caught in a squeeze between home front supporters of MacArthur, mostly republicans, and U.S. allies who want him to discipline the general for publicly suggesting the use of Chinese nationalist troops against communist China.

"In President Truman contemplating a rebuke to General MacArthur?" Presidential Secretary Joseph Short was asked at a press conference.

"I have no comment on any question relating to that situation," Short said.

He gave the same reply when asked if there were reports that Herbert Morrison, Britain's Foreign Secretary, plans a statement for the House of Commons on MacArthur.

Short was also told there were reports from London that the United States and Britain are reported to have agreed on a new declaration of policy on Korea.

Short said he had checked and can find no such project in the works."

In Paris, the foreign ministry announced that France had lined up with Britain in opposing MacArthur's proposals for the use of Chiang Kai Shek's troops to support the war in Korea.

Much of the western European press thundered against MacArthur calling for "clear views and a clear directive of United Nations aims in Korea.

The London Daily Mirror's New York correspondent wrote that MacArthur "is defying his own country's government and also other United Nations governments by making policy statements of his own."

The British spkesman added that 14 United Nations members—who have troops in Korea—are continuing consultations on a draft declaration of U.N. aims in Korea.

In New York, Eric Cocke, Jr., national commander of the American Legion called on Harry S. Truman to fire MacArthur as leading to fight in Korea "with both hands tied behind his back." He said Truman should ought to have the right to bomb China and to use nationalist Chinese troops against communist China.

Red-Controlled Chinese Press Gives People Nothing But 'Slanted' News

Hong Kong, April 9—(Reuters) —The people of communist China have read a press and listen to a radio that speaks with a single voice—a voice that brooks no argument or contradiction.

The people's "dictatorship" has eliminated all opposition news media. It tells the people what it wants them to know through an official news agency, official radio stations and official daily papers and newspapers and magazines.

Unless they read newspapers smuggled from abroad or listen clandestinely to overseas radios, they know little of what is going on in the outside world. They learn no more about events inside China, for the domestic news is similarly controlled.

Most of the "news" is on political or economic subjects. If it is about China or her communist colleagues it is almost invariably good. If it is about the democracies it is invariably bad.

Long speeches by Chinese, soviet and other communist leaders are presented in all their textual completeness. Statements by western leaders are only attacked.

Newspapers, news broadcasts and the official news agency are frequently devoted for long periods to special campaigns. Typical of these are the current "oppose the germ warfare" campaign and the drive against western direction of Christian churches and missions in China.

A new campaign rapidly getting under way is aimed at calling on the people to support the decisions of the Soviet-inspired and supported world peace council in Berlin.

Little is published of day-to-day happenings in China or abroad. The press has become, according to one communist observer, dull reading.

Under the nationalists, the newspapers were occasionally illinformed, irresponsible and strongly biased — but they were never dull.

Car Hits Tree, Two Wanted For Theft Hurt

Crashing into a tree when their car failed to make a curve on Highway No. 2 just east of Shannonville, two men in a stolen car were seriously injured Sunday morning. They were taken to the hospital in Bush's ambulance.

Injured were William M. Hicks, 46, of Dryden, Ont, broken pelvis and leg fractures, and James Fleming, 22, Toronto, compound fractures of both legs. The condition of both men was said to be serious.

The accident occurred just after daybreak Sunday when the eastbound car travelling at a high rate of speed failed to make the highway curve and crashed into the tree. The men were both thrown from the late model auto into the ditch.

Police said both men were wanted in Toronto on car theft warrants. Provincial Constable Ivan Tinkess investigated.

Three Children Burned to Death Near Masson, Que.

Masson, Que., April 9 (CP) — Three young children were burned to death today when fire destroyed their home in this village 16 miles northeast of Ottawa.

The children, left alone in the home while the mother, Mrs. Albert LaFrance went to the grocery store, were three-year-old Gaston, two-year-old Lise and 4-month-old Roland.

The bodies of Lise and Gaston were found on the kitchen floor where they had apparently collapsed when overcome by smoke. The baby was found in his crib upstairs.

Members of the Masson volunteer fire brigade battled the frame house and tried to fight their way inside but were driven back by the heat.

Mr. LaFrance, a construction employee employed on highway repair work on the Hull - Montreal road, was told of the fire by neighbors.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Three other LaFrance children, five-year-old Jacques, six-year-old Yolande and seven-year-old Rodolphe, were absent from the home at the time.

Firemen Busy Over Weekend

Three grass fires, a marsh blaze and a burning awning, occupied the time of the local fire fighters over the weekend.

The grass fires took place in widely separated parts of the city, while the marsh at the rear of the Northern Electric Steel Car plant also caused firemen a run.

A cigarette, presumably tossed up by a passing pedestrian, set fire to the awning on the Front Street Lipson store. Firemen quickly put the blaze out, the damage being restricted to a hole in the canvas.

DISPERSE MILLING CROWD

Toronto, April 9 — (CP)—Police dispersed a milling crowd of about 3,000 anti - communist demonstrators on Church Street Sunday night.

Fire Marshal Will be Requested To Probe Cause

Kingston, April 9 — (CP) — Assistance of a provincial Fire Marshal at Belleville will be requested in determining the cause of a fire which broke out Saturday night in basement of United Church in nearby Portsmouth village, Fire Chief V. C. Brightman said today.

Damage has not yet been estimated, but is likely to be considerable in the basement Sunday school hall. The church property, newly decorated last year, was damaged by dense smoke.

Adrian Snider, the church caretaker, said there has been no fire in the furnace since Thursday.

The fire did not stop the congregation from holding a service yesterday. Maurice McLeod, student minister, conducted an evening service in the nearby Parish Hall of the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Thief, use of which was offered by the parish Priest, Rev. M. J. Brady.

Nice of Son To Offer Trip Says Mother

Boissevain, Man., April 9 — (CP) — The mother of a man who won $140,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes said today "it was nice of Kevin to say he would send us on the trip."

Mrs. Thomas C. Reid is the mother of Ernest Reid who was in Ottawa on business when he learned he had won a first prize of $140,000.

"I'm going to use some of the money to send my mother and father on a trip they always wanted, a trip to their homeland, Aberdeenshire, Scotland," said the 26-year-old Emerson, Man., immigration inspector.

Mrs. Reid said the last time she and her husband saw their native Aberdeen was 27 years ago. For her son, she voiced the hope he will continue in the immigration service.

"It is not good for a young man to be idle," said the grey - haired mother of seven children, of whom Ernest is the youngest.

ALMOST KIDNAPPED BY COMMUNISTS

Rescued from communist kidnappers, Johanna Buechner, 30-year-old ex-secretary of the East German minister of industry reads the story of her escape in a West Berlin newspaper. H.M.C.S. SIOUX TO REJOIN U.N. FLEET IN KOREA

It was hail and farewell once more to H.M.C.S. Sioux who slipped her moorings over the weekend at Victoria, B.C., for another stretch in Korean waters to replace H.M.C.S. Cayuga, who, having received her Korean baptism of fire, is now home on a well-deserved leave. It was just a little more than two months ago that the 270 officers and men of the Sioux returned from seven months and 50,000 miles of U.N. duty in the Korean theatre of operations to the greatest welcome ever given a returning ship at Victoria. Chief Petty Officer Hugh Dunbar of the Cayuga, shown with daughter Jennie, left, and son Geoffrey, flew back from the Far East to prepare the way for his shipmates landing. — Central Press Canadian.

THE ENEMY WAS 500 YARDS AWAY

"A war of manoeuvre" is the way Supreme Commander Douglas MacArthur described U.N. strategy in Korea while on a flying visit from Tokyo to confer with Lieut.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway, U.S. 8th Army commander, right. MacArthur flew to the eastern coastal sector and then jeeped 18 miles above the 38th parallel to inspect spearheads of the Republic of Korea capital division. He went to within 500 yards of enemy positions. — Central Press Canadian.

PRINCESS PATS

Brown of Calgary which advanced a further 1,000 yards and by nightfall had occupied a mountain as high and fully as steep as Swinton's, Harrison's men actively patrolled the valleys below, discovering a line of unoccupied Chinese dugouts capable of holding 20 men each.

The area was littered with Chinese and North Korean dead. The only evidence of enemy resistance to the Canadian advance was mines, pioneers under Lieut. Lorne Hurst of Grande Prairie, Alta., sweeping carefully to detect them. Pte. J. A. Ryder Makinghan of Vancouver discovered six, which Private Jim Wall of Shubenacadie, N.S., uncorked. Another "Dry Run"

It was another "dry run" for the Patricias and although the climbing was tough their spirits were high.

Major Gordon Henderson of Calgary, battle adjutant, typified their jubilant mood by dictating a letter home "north of the 38th parelel."

An exuberant quartet posted themselves for a time at the barbed wire barrier glad-handing those who followed the advancing riflemen. Ryder, along with three Ottawa men—Sgt. J. J. Desrosier, L. Cpl. John Dalyrple and Pte. Harold Bryne—all chorused "welcome to North Korea" as supporting United States mortars, engineers and the battalion's rear echelon personnel arrived.

OPERA SINGER FIRED

New York, April 9 (AP) — Rudolf Bing, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, Saturday fired leading baritone Robert Merrill on grounds the star had violated his contract. Bing accused Merrill of failing to show up Saturday for a performance in the "Barber of Seville" and of running off to Hollywood to make a movie on the eve of the Met's spring tour.

Reds Open Gates Of Hwachon Dam Allies Move Ahead

Tokyo, April 9. (AP)—Chinese communists opened the floodgates of the massive Hwachon reservoir dam in Central Korea today and sent thousands of tons of water rushing down on allied-held ground.

But the Pukhan river rose no more than a foot.

U.N. troops resumed their advance toward the reservoir Monday as the flood waters slowly receded.

An allied task force moved toward the dam in an effort to seize it before the reds could attempt any further damage. The task force met rifle, machine-gun and mortar fire.

Elements of an American division had two fire fights with communist platoons. A French patrol closed in on the reservoir without opposition.

The reds were believed to be holding camouflaged positions north of the reservoir and north of Hwachon City.

American army engineers said they thought the Chinese had opened the floodgates only part way. A complete opening, they said, would have sent a 12-foot high wall of water crashing down the valley.

News of Trenton

Three Trenton Flyers Re-enter Armed Service

Allan Vanderwater who served with distinction with the R.A.F. overseas in the last war and who was discharged with the rank of Squadron Leader has re-enlisted in the R.C.A.F. and begins a refresher course with a class of former pilots at the Trenton Air Station today. Mr. Vanderwater will hold the rank of Flying Officer.

A well known local, businessman and member of various service clubs Glen Rawson has joined the same class graduating as a full fledged Flying Officer instructor in 12 weeks. Mr. Rawson came out of the service as a Flight Lieutenant.

A former instructor discharged as a Flight Lieutenant, Gregg Passails became a pupil with the other Trentonians today. He has been a salesman in town and out-of-town ever since leaving the service after the last war. His wife and two children Douglas and Carol Lynne reside on Front Street.

Flying Officer Vanderwater up until the last few weeks was employed by Central Mortgage Corporation at Ajax, Ontario. Before that for a long period he managed the Trenton branch of the Corporation. He now holds the presidency chair at the local branch of the Canadian Legion and is active in both social and community welfare work.

Overseas in World War II Mr. Vanderwater was a pilot of bomber aircraft in the early days of the Battle of Britain. Later he flew missions into enemy territory from bases in North Africa. He married the English girl he met while flying out of Cairo.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanderwater and tiny daughter live on Pine Street, Trenton.

FIRE DEPARTMENT BUSY

Short circuit in a hot plate caused a fire at Mrs. Louise Semple's home at 159 Queen Street at exactly 6 o'clock noon on Friday. The electric grill was set up in a closet and used for cooking. Damage amounted to approximately $50.

In the afternoon the brigade was summoned to Graham's service station on Dundas Street East where a considerable gallonage of gasoline had been spilt by accident over the cement floor by one of the automatic pumps. With hoses the firemen washed the wasted gasoline down a sewer.

During Saturday the brigade was on the battle three times. In each instance the call resulted from a grass fire. Two of them happened off West Street and the other up on the mountain. All were easily controlled without causing any damage.

An overheated space heater sent the new pumper flying to the Joslyn Beauty Salon on Dundas Street in the Cow Brown section yesterday afternoon. A small application of chemicals stopped any possibility of the fire breaking out.

Legion Raises Sum of Money For Hockey Fund

Trenton. (Special.)—The Trenton branch of the Canadian Legion sponsored a successful smoker on Friday night raising $150 for a Trenton hockey player who was hurt in an accident when he fell down a stairway some weeks ago.

Three amateur boxing bouts featured the smoker and as an added attraction a Campbellford group of musician staged entertainment under the heading of "Hillbilly Revue".

In 75 pound class J. Hutchinson and H. Cole fought to a draw while the outcome of the 112 pound match also ended in a deadlock. The 90 pound engagement saw D. Hutchinson battle his way to a decision over D. Cole.

The judges were, D. Cummerford, Earl Maxwell, Lineskeeper F. Ferrier; referee, "Jiber" Ellis.

Door prize was won by Frank O'Rea.

TROOPS FOR EUROPE

The turn from American isolationism to a broader foreign policy under the North Atlantic Pact is well illustrated by the opinions of the New York Times.

On the second anniversary of the signing of the North Atlantic Pact the Senate has approved by a large majority a resolution which constitutes another historic landmark in the development of American foreign policy. With this resolution the Senate reasserts the vital principle, long evidenced by the events, that the security of the United States and its citizens is directly dependent upon the security of its partners under the North Atlantic Treaty, and that the commitments of that treaty are therefore an essential part of our foreign policy.

In keeping with this principle, it specifically approves the appointment of General Eisenhower as Supreme Allied Commander of the unified defense forces now being created under the treaty. Furthermore, it declares that American security requires us to "station abroad such units of our armed forces as may be necessary and appropriate to contribute our fair share to the forces needed for the defense of the North Atlantic area," and for that purpose formally approves the earliest possible dispatch of four additional divisions to bring our total ground-force strength in Europe to six divisions. In a decade and a half American opinion has come from an almost unquestioning faith in isolation to a judgment completely contrary. Not only have we thrown off all pretense of neutrality, not only have we come out of isolation to associate ourselves with a world organization for the maintenance of peace, but not only have we broken the traditions of a century and a half by entering into a binding defensive alliance with certain European Powers. We are ready to recognize that the security of those Powers so directly involves our own security that we are prepared to draw the first line of our defence across Europe and to station along that line six divisions, or all that can be provided at the present time.

This achievement must not be obscured, either here or abroad, by the commotion caused by the McClellan amendment advising the President to withhold further Congressional approval of any additional ground troops for Europe beyond the four divisions specified. That amendment, a product primarily of domestic politics, like the concurrent resolution inviting the House to repeat the debate, is regrettable because it might raise new doubts about the earnestness of our intentions and might even be exploited to precipitate new quarrels over the dispatch of troops needed to complete the task.

We must somehow supply such additional divisions "as may be necessary and appropriate" both to contribute our "fair share" and to guarantee the validity of the North Atlantic Treaty. The Senate cannot very well go back on this pledge without repudiating the policy it has just approved, or proclaiming the six divisions in Europe to be just "expendables."

Even with its amendments, therefore, the adoption of the resolution should provide Western Europe with new confidence to go full steam ahead with the defence programs agreed upon. For this resolution notifies Soviet Russia that we intend to fight in Western Europe if Western Europe is threatened with aggression. Twice, on the eve of the two most calamitious wars in history, we nqlified the potential aggressor that we intended to follow a hands-off policy in the event of aggression. We seek now to prevent a third world war by telling the aggressor that if he goes to war he will find us in the centre of the fighting.

THE DEATH SENTENCE

It would be misplaced sympathy to object to the death sentence imposed on Julius Rosenberg and his wife, Ethel, convicted of passing atom bomb secrets to the Russians, the Windsor Star says.

They are cold-blooded traitors, well aware their treachery could lead to the deaths of tens of thousands of people on this continent. That, indeed, was their purpose, to provide Soviet Russia with the pattern of this fantastic instrument of mass slaughter.

In imposing sentence, Judge Irving R. Kaufman said: "Plain, deliberate murder is dwarfed by your acts." Murder usually involves only one victim. Treason is done in the heat of the moment, without premeditation.

The Rosenbergs were deliberate accessories in what could be mass murder on a gigantic scale if, as a result of their information, Russia could start pouring atomic death down upon us from the skies.

It would be murder of innocent people, among whom the Rosenbergs had lived; who had done them no harm.

These sentences may act as a deterrent to some misguided souls who are mixed up in espionage, such as a few of those caught in the Ottawa spy ring. They may be frightened off by a recognition of the enormity of the crime and by its possible penalty.

THE MISSING SCARS

The green is once more showing
And the lawn I'm fain to see,
But I miss the foot-worn corner
Where the home plate used to be.

The grass at last has flourished
Where I've begged for years
That ugly, dusty sector that was always scarred with cleats.

Time was I used to wonder
Would I ever have a lawn.
I mowed it many an evening and
I watered it at dawn.
I gave it tender care, and
But a plaintive box was needed, and no grass could flourish
there.

"It's no use," I'd say to mother,

For the perfect lawn I've dreamed of we must wait for time to pass.
I would rather have them happy to come home from school to stay
Than a lawn so closely guarded they must go elsewhere to

It has happened! They have grown up, and have children of their own.
And the lawn I thought I wanted
I possess, but I'm alone.
I shall walk it round this springtime, but I'll look in vain to see

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Every radio studio ought to have a microphone with a kind face painted on it, for the benefit of amateurs and newcomers to radio.

There is something petrifying about microphones. Some of them are large octagonal colanders or soup strainers. Others are small, black and malignant about the size of an ink bottle. They also have very tiny eyes to fit on your lapel, or larger than a twenty-five cent piece. Some are erected on standing stands, hung on wires from great metal arms. There is a surgical aspect to them; and when the time comes for you to speak into them, upon the signal from the surgical-faced radio producer on whom your eyes are glued in terror, you have the feeling that it comes over you when the dentist reaches up and swings the boom towards you with the drill in it, in his hand, commands you to open your mouth.

If they would rig up some sort of large, moon-faced microphone,

CUTWORMS KILL CROP

Denver, April 9 — (AP) Green fingers and army cutworms have killed more than half of Colorado's normal 50,000,000 - bushel crop of winter wheat, State Agriculture Commissioner Paul W. Swisher said last night. "We'll be lucky if we produce a 40-per-cent crop," he said, "and we'll have to have some warm weather painted to look like a dear old lady, or a nice little girl of four or five, it would not be bad for us amateurs. You would feel you were talking to somebody, if it is now, you feel you are talking to nobody; with four or five members of the Spanish Inquisition sitting tensely around you in the studio listening to your every syllable. From behind glass panels, you can see the heads of the radio engineers, bobbing at you with frozen expressions. It is clinical. You feel as if you were on the operating table.

It is not only the amateurs who suffer this terror of the mike. Many a professional is haunted by it. In fact, producers say that when a radio performer loses his wholesome fear of the mike, he is in danger of getting stale. Broadcasting performers are deliberately made to look surgical for that reason. Sometimes when I enter the studios I should keep a kind-faced mike for amateurs.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

THE RUM-RUNNER

I've been having many happy hours this week re-reading Lincoln Steffens' autobiography, Now in two volumes.

The earlier chapters of his memoirs deal with Steffens as a small boy in Sacramento. Somehow Steffens seemed able to look back from the long years and recapture the real meaning of what he called the mystery stage; that confusing but mystic, fearful, wonderful time when a boy is neither child nor man.

In the course of those chapters I met the book down, and let my mind drift back to warm itself before the flame of a memory that Steffens' story recalled. He had written of the friendship that grew between himself and a bridge-tender and I think that in the lives of most boys there's such a man.

Mine, for me, was a man of wisdom and with a great heart, that rarest of adults, a grown-up who understands the way of a boy's mind. In my own home town he was a river man, and when, I thought of Lew the other night in that quiet moment of remembrance I fancied I could hear a mouth organ playing, "Oh, Susanna," "Old Dan Tucker" and the rain falling on the roof of a small cabin cruiser.

Lew had a wife, but no children, and for the better part of one winter Lew's small cabin was my home. He lived aboard and the boat was not merely a home, but a place of business. He knew every boy in our neighborhood knew, was the romantic one of running rum.

None of us knew then where the rum was from, or by what route. I know it was full of danger and churning narrow channels in the Detroit River and there were always boys down at the pier to pay their respects to the man living dangerously.

Over The Waves

I've only the haziest memory now of Lew's appearance, except that he was big and rather gravelaced man with a heavy thatch of hair, I remember the navy blue on the back of his big- freckled hands when he gripped the helm of his craft. I remember the navy blue turtle-neck sweater he always wore.

For some reason—it may have been because we were living by the pier, perhaps, because I had read too many Henty books and thirsted for adventure—I was never a boy who adopted sons. I know that I was going to adopt a dog, but that I remember nothing about school that winter; nothing but the pungent smell of the river.

Under almost any circumstances there's something about the small craft of a boat that has a kind of magic. Sitting snug in there, with the sound of the eggs frying in the pan and the creak and bump of the gunwales against the wharf, amid the jumbled disarray of Lew's cabin, with Lew taught me to "tongue" a mouth organ and to read charts and to tie a bowline.

Every Saturday he'd run the boat in through the harbor mouth to a fishing fleet jetty, and we'd walk up through the town to the groceteria or the 5 & 10 department store and buy his week's provisions.

Later, I learned how to handle the small cruiser, myself, on these trips, standing at the wheel in his immense oilskins, as poised and fearless and gallant. I liked to think, as my Henty hero, smiling contentedly to myself at the reedy sound of the mouth organ from the small cabin below, playing in rhythm with the pounding pulse of the engine, drunk with the power of eternal inevitability.

I think now that he played a role in my life that is unhappily denied to the modern boy, for now, devoid of all romance; respected and educated, he's been made unemployed. And so it often takes a man like Lew, or like Steffens' father, to help bring a boy's dreams to life.

And Farewell

Lew provided me with the symbols and gallantry and adventure that boys desperately need, and yet this was obviously a problem that my own mother (my mother worried because I no longer ate my meals at the table with Lew) and my father wasn't at all sure that a rum-runner was a good companion for his impressionable son.

It was inevitable that ended my hero-worship. It was decided that I would invite Lew to our house for supper one night. Talks could give him the once over lightly, and pass him O.K.

On the night of this event I went down to the pier to get Lew. He was in his bunk, and never bathed an eye when the doctor charged into his cabin, just four o'clock he had delivered me.

Now there's a woman. She lives in the golden west north of the 38th. parallel.

There are two things I don't understand: First, why the hell was it that $150 if that is his flat rate for attending confinement, and second, why is a doctor who refuses to deliver patients at home, on the pretext that necessary facilities are lacking, get away with it among people with enough sense to resent it when some so-and-so peppered you with conversational spray and brought you down with wisecracks? Since I have with all so-and-so happened to have, I have considered the writing of this column and the correspondence I have with all sorts of people in the United States, Canada and foreign states more fun than a barrel of monkeys (no, that's the correct plural spelling — I just checked with Noah). However, this racket is not all pipes and bowls. In fact there are so many vexations one must suffer in order to remain alive, that is, in print, that I'm sure I should have settled in high dudgeon (as I am prone to do when my gallbladder becomes intolerable) but for the happy coincidence that the finest bowling alley in the world, for year round play, are ten minutes' walk from the spot my boon companion, Mr. Steffens, and I arrived in paradise. The ancient, scientific, honorable game of lawn bowling on the green, that is. Don't confuse it with the other. At this time, when it seems there is nothing for it but to dash off to the nearest bar and me to the bowling green, my equanimity is saved at the last minute by the arrival of a letter like this:

Dr. Dr. Brady:

I enjoy your sense of humor so much. Let me be the first to congratulate you on your new baby in the car still forty miles from doctor . . delivered by my husband, who (after much thought) formed the task as beautifully as if I'd been his patient.

Morrison Thinks Co-operation Can Be Accomplished

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Britain's new foreign secretary, Herbert Morrison, in a recent speech supported the ideals of "international co-operation can flourish despite differences of political systems."

As a generality, that undoubtedly is true, but the question immediately arises whether it can be stretched to cover the outside area of the ideological communism. Is there any possibility or co-operation between communism and democracy?

That's a mighty important question and the dangerous times of political turmoil. Upon the answer must depend our attitude towards the red ism.

The answer is, I think, that there may be co-operation on some lines between communist countries and democratic states. There can be no real co-operation between communism and any ism that is within the bar ders of one country.

Wartime Example

As to partial co-operation between communist and democratic states, we had an excellent example in the alliance during the war between Russia and the United States, which was a matter of life and death. Co-operation was forced by bedfellows. No such partnership is likely among red and non-red countries in peace time.

Why? Because if a communist party gets a foothold in a non-communistic country, the reds give their allegiance, not to that country, but to Moscow. This is so true when a serious difference arises between Russia and a democracy the communist citizens of the democracy will side with the Soviet. That indeed this fact provides Moscow with one of the most-useful weapons in the world revolution for the spread of communism.

Co-operation with communists is a subject first to Moscow, and leased this year to farmers in eastand then to our own country. ern Ontario. It is early maturing,

HERE IS A WOMAN

From the beginning, long ago when most of you readers hadn't enough sense to resent it when I came along, I have considered the writing of this column and the correspondence I have with all sorts of people in the United States, Canada and foreign states more fun than a barrel of monkeys (no, that's the correct plural spelling — I just checked with Noah). However, this racket is not all pipes and bowls. In fact there are so many vexations one must suffer in order to remain alive, that is, in print, that I'm sure I should have settled in high dudgeon (as I am prone to do when my gallbladder becomes intolerable) but for the happy coincidence that the finest bowling alley in the world, for year round play, are ten minutes' walk from the spot my boon companion, Mr. Steffens, and I arrived in paradise. The ancient, scientific, honorable game of lawn bowling on the green, that is. Don't confuse it with the other. At this time, when it seems there is nothing for it but to dash off to the nearest bar and me to the bowling green, my equanimity is saved at the last minute by the arrival of a letter like this:

Dr. Dr. Brady:

I enjoy your sense of humor so much. Let me be the first to congratulate you on your new baby in the car still forty miles from doctor . . delivered by my husband, who (after much thought) formed the task as beautifully as if I'd been his patient.

The doctor couldn't come to the house to take care of me because he was busy with his own family affairs.

My husband was even caught without the usual "It's top it all, we never batted an eye when the doctor charged into his cabin, just four o'clock he had delivered me.

(Signed)

Now there's a woman. She lives in the golden west north of the 38th. parallel.

There are two things I don't understand: First, why the hell was it that $150 if that is his flat rate for attending confinement, and second, why is a doctor who refuses to deliver patients at home, on the pretext that necessary facilities are lacking, get away with it among people with enough sense to resent it when some so-and-so peppered you with conversational spray and brought you down with wisecracks? Since I have with all so-and-so happened to have, I have considered the writing of this column and the correspondence I have with all sorts of people in the United States, Canada and foreign states more fun than a barrel of monkeys (no, that's the correct plural spelling — I just checked with Noah). SONGS THAT LIVE

Implanted within the heart of us all are songs that will live forever in the hearts of men. Some from the heart in the first place. Some from the head. Some — Every age has its own deathless. Now such are deathless. How could "Old Oaken Bucket," "Home, Sweet Home", "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks at Home", "Dixie Land" or "My Old Kentucky Home" ever cease to live?

Two great songs that spell out the song of the sea are "The Rosary" and "The Volga Boat Song." Power and beauty and majesty and a sea sense emphasized as the former was sung in the stage success of "Maytime." "Volga Boat Song" I remember talking dinner in a Hollywood restaurant many years ago, when "The Volga Boat Song" was started with a few singers. Then more and more were added, from the kitchen, from the waiters — from everywhere in the place, and the song bathed the air, and echoed and resounded as I had never heard it before, or have since. One of the most dramatic songs ever written — a song that will never die.

One of the most historic acts in the Barnum ever performed was to bring Jenny Lind to America for her tour. How she must have thrilled her audiences as she sang "Home, Sweet Home," and "Comin' Thro' the Rye." How she must have added to the memory of everyone who was privileged to hear Madame Schumann-Heink sing the beautiful "Rosary," and "Silent Night." Whenever that was heard and learned in our youth that are as familiar to us today as the old brief prayer we were taught to repeat in childhood. All these are the songs that live!

JUST REACH OUT

I know a man who is very rich. Not that he ever has more than a couple of hundred dollars in the bank, but still he is very rich. He is a scholar. He has invested his life in the teaching of young people. He has raised a fine family and has enabled them to do the same. He is eager to get back to his work at the beginning of each school year and the last part of his vacation becomes quite a trial. He is a man of all. He is a devout Christian.

We read in the Bible about the two sisters, Mary and Martha, in whose home Jesus was entertained. Martha's whole attention was fixed on preparing a sumptuous meal for her distinguishedone of us.

Guess, Mary, after she had made adequate preparation, seated herself at the Lord's feet and began eagerly to listen to His conversation. And when she — and others — had all been rewarded by Martha, His words were: "Mary hath chosen that better part which shall not be taken away from her."

That's the better part! How few people find it. God offers them bread and they cry out for cakes and try feverishly to collect them. God offers them life, and they agitate themselves for coffins instead, and they thirst for pleasure instead.

Life's real values are available to all men and women. They are all ready to be picked up by any in the area.

Year By Year, Prophets See End of World

(By The Associated Press)

Noah's forecast of one "end of the world", recorded in the book of Genesis, really started something. Self-styled prophets have been trying to foretell doomsday ever since.

The latest, in British Columbia, was only one of a long series of such incidents. Mrs. Grace Agnes Carlson, grey-haired leader of the "Children of Light," who barricaded themselves in a farmhouse near Keremeos, B.C., expected the end of the world on January 9. When it didn't end, they finally left to await "a manifestation from God."

Class Epp, once leader of all the Mennonites in Russia, looked at his old wall clock one day in 1881 and noticed it had stopped with the hands on the stroke of eight and five. That meant only one thing to Class Epp, a man who had spent a lot of time thinking about the end of the world. The cataclysm, he decided, would come in 1899.

That year came and went, and the earth went on as before. Epp worried about this until he had a vision in which he was told the clock on the wall leaned to one side slightly. He straightened it and the hands pointed to nine and one. Epp announced the world would end in 1901. Again, nothing happened.

Ancients Too

The end of the world was anticipated as early as the second century A.D. by Montanists, a sect of that era, made preparation for the approaching end the entire purpose of life.

They endured rigorous fasts, observed strict rules of chastity, and encouraged martyrdom as the best way to get ready. They arbitrarily branded men and women suspected of being sinners and excluded them from their churches so that the buildings would be pure. The Montanists eventually split up and dwindled out of existence.

A lot of Bohemians expected the end of the world during the Hussite wars in the 15th century. Five cities were selected as favored places because, according to visions, they were to be spared. The movement gradually petered out after the religious fervor of the Hussite wars simmered down.

The Plymouth Brethren in Massachusetts specified no exact date for the end of the world, but they expected it. Their historian writes that the first brethren "considered it the wildest fantasy to think that the church would still be on earth three-quarters of a century later.

Americans got pretty stirred up about the end of the world in 1843 when William Miller, an earnest preacher, predicted the end would come sometime between March 21, 1843 and March 21, 1844.

More than 50,000 people took Miller at his word, sold their property for rock-bottom prices and lived in dread of the approaching doom. When the last day of March 1844 passed and nothing untoward event, Miller expressed his disappointment.

"I confess my error," he said, "and acknowledge my disappointment, yet I still think the day of the Lord is near."

DESERONTO 'Double or Nothing' Club Holds Indoor Carnival

Deseronto — The indoor carnival held by the United Church "Double or Nothing Club", was an outstanding success. The rooms were gaily decorated for the event and various booths within were in charge of the men of the club, were well patronized by young and old.

A short but very enjoyable program was presented:

—"Two Movie Shorts," by Dale Babcocke; Indian Club Drill by Helen Bowen and Marion Aylesworth, accompanied by Beverly Burley; reading "A Bad Day for Ralph" (Aylesworth) by Mrs. Townsend; duet, "Now is the Hour," by Mrs. Bert Herrington, and Mr. Wilfrid Kendall, accompanied by Mrs. W. Wood; military tap, Lynn and Phyllis Bender; saxophone and piano, Mrs. T. E. Tunnicliffe and Reg Dawson.

Tea was served by the ladies of the club.

Chilly River Wade Marks Right of Way

Thanington, Kent, Eng. (CP) — Colin Clough, 32-year-old antique dealer, stood on the bank of the river Stour, stripped down to a bathing suit he was wearing underneath his clothes and waded slowly across the river.

It was a Winter day and the water was cold. But Clough wasn't just out for a prank. His idea was to establish a right of way across the river, whose footbridge was swept away by floods in 1929.

"Someone had to map the old course for a footpath survey," said Mrs. Clough. "My husband felt it was his duty.

Officials said other volunteers have raced hundreds of miles of footpaths, negotiating hedges, quagmires and even bulls, to prevent them from being lost completed within six months.

Says Water Shortage Not Fatal to Gardens

Regina (CP) — A. B. Brown, CBC's "Prairie Gardener," told Regina's water-starved gardeners that "the hoe is more important than the hose."

He said they should not view the shortage of water as fatal to their hopes of growing prize-winning flowers and vegetables. The important thing was to conserve what moisture they had by means of weeding and mulching.

He said prairie gardeners in many ways are far ahead of those in what he referred to as the "soft" growing areas of British Columbia and Ontario.

"In Ontario," he said, "the majority of trees and shrubs that are planted now are the same as those used 40 and 50 years ago while on the Prairies growers are using more new varieties."

Western Canada was developing hardier strains that would stand up to the rigorous climate.

"Twenty-five years ago there were few satisfactory plums or crab-apples grown in the province," he said. "Now there are good varieties of these and other fruits."

JAILED ON SUSPICION

Los Angeles, April 9 — (AP) — Actor John Agar, 30, divorced husband of Shirley Temple, was jailed on suspicion of drunk driving last night. It was his third similar arrest in little more than a year. He was released on bail. Motorcycle officer R. A. Walls said he noticed Agar's car weaving.

Princess Pats Wondering When Leave Will Come

West Central Sector, Korea, April 9 (CP) —In the spring a young soldier's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—leave.

Especially if he belongs to the Princess Patricias who have been confined to the battalion area since reaching Korea last December.

News that the United States is instituting a rotational policy for service in Korea and that the British government is relieving two battalions of the 27th Commonwealth Brigade spurred discussion on what may be provided for the Patricias.

(War Minister Strachey announced in the British Commons last Tuesday that the British section of the 27th Brigade— the Middlesex Regiment and the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders —will be relieved soon after seven months in the line. He said there are no plans to relieve the 28th Brigade which arrived in Korea in November.

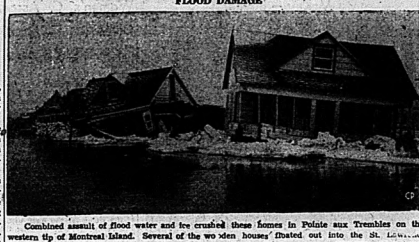
(Under the recently announced United Nations reserve plan, to begin in mid-April, some 20,000 men monthly will be relieved when the plan gets into full swing. Army secretary Frank Pace said the number to be retated in the early stages will depend upon the flow of replacements and the pressure of U.)

The emphasis among the men's platoons in the Patricias, the leave is Japan, preferably at the 27th Brigade's leave centre. But a close second is for an established policy on how long a Canadian soldier shall serve in Korea.

No Provision Yet

There is no provision yet for a Canadian leave centre in Tokyo but the impression here is that Tokyo is that a decision will be made on the matter by Brig. J. M. (Mocky) Rockingham who arrives (this month with the special force, now at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Arthur Menzies, chief of the Canadian diplomatic mission in Tokyo, has invited any Canadians visiting Tokyo to live at his residence but so far the Canadians haven't had a chance to accept.



The Patricias earlier deferred acceptance of an invitation to use the Commonwealth brigade leave centre. At least until the troops who had done the bulk of the fighting before the Canadians joined the line had used it.

During the Second World War the Canadian army regularized European hotels in rear areas and gave troops several clear days in virtual luxury.

INVESTIGATOR ARRIVES

London, Ont., April 7—(CP)— The head of the R.C.A.F.'s accident investigation board, Group Capt. F. R. (Pat) West, arrived in London last night to attend personally the investigation into the crash of Canada's top jet fighter, the Avro CF-100.

In Ottawa, defence officials announced that the crash has wiped out plans for the Atlantic flight which might have brought to Canada the record for trans-ocean flights. The plane which went to have made the trip now is a litter of wreckage a few miles outside London.

FLOOD DAMAGE

Combined assault of flood water and ice crushed these homes in Pointe aux Trembles on the western tip of Montreal Island. Several of the wooden houses floated out into the St. Lawrence River as 125 families were made homeless. Early estimates of the damage were $250,000.—(CP Photo)

Experts Predict Good Season On the Farms

(By The Canadian Press)

A new planting season is at hand on Canada's farmland.

Canadian Press cross-Canada survey shows that, almost everywhere agricultural experts predict a good year from the standpoint of acreage and variety of crops.

By improving farm practices and using good seed, Ontario feed grain growers last year produced a record 200,000,000 bushels. This year they hope to grow 250,000,000 bushels.

Farmers consider this spring an early one in Nova Scotia and New Foundland and relatively late in Ontario and Alberta. The aftereffects of March floods will probably result in late planting in some parts of British Columbia.

This spring's moisture content in Alberta's soil is regarded as better than for two years. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Ontario farmers in general think moisture conditions favorable.

The winter's snowfall was light in Southern Ontario but it gave crops the protection they needed. Fall wheat and alfalfa came through the winter well, as did pastures and orchards. So far, new growth has not advanced so fast that it would be endangered by spring frosts.

Most of British Columbia's market gardening was done in March and the gardeners say 3 per cent of the crop survived cold weather and storms late in the month.

Peas, lettuce, cabbage and cauliflower from sections unaffected by last month's floods are expected on the market soon.

Alberta farmers have already started seeding grain in the Lethbridge area. Wheat planting is expected to be about the same as last year's 7,251,000 acres but crop experts believe farmers will increase acreage of oats and barley and plant twice as much flax as the 50,000 acres harvested last year.

Grain growers in Saskatchewan are expected to step up their acreage of rye, keeping that of other grains approximately the same as in 1950.

Miners Want Free Access to Gold Markets of World

Toronto, April 9 (CP) —Ontario and Quebec gold mines, harassed by a price of gold which doesn't rise, and costs which do are asking shareholders what they should do about it.

Questions have been prepared by a committee of operators and will be mailed out by a large number of companies. It is estimated that they will go from half to three-quarters of an estimated 200,000 shareholders. The questions are:

Are you in favor of Canada's gold mines being given free access to world markets for gold at home and abroad?

Should we, in order to give support to our employees and mining communities in general continue to struggle against almost impossible odds until our resources are exhausted?

Should we in order to conserve our valuable ore assets, give consideration to suspension of operations until we can reopen gold mines under more favorable conditions?

At present gold mines are paid $35 an ounce, United States currency, a price set by the United States in the '30s and which has been recognized as an official rate by the International Monetary Fund, of which Canada is a member.

The gold is brought from the mines by the government, which uses it in connection with its foreign exchange transactions. In recent years the tendency has been for it to go to the United States, which is willing to buy it.

The committee issued a statement with the questions.

Urges People To Develop' Art Talent

Montreal (CP) — Mrs. Peter Douet, Montreal artist, says too many people are content to sit back and watch instead of developing their own talents.

She told a women's group here that nearly everyone has some creative talent. It perhaps only needs to be stirred up a bit. Mrs. Douet, who teaches art with her husband, said the association for physical and health education and recreation has found "spectatoritis" on the increase and this is not good.

An example, says Mrs. Douet, is one business man who attended a few of her art classes. He told her he never realized the relaxation there was in painting. And painting is one thing that just about everyone can do, she says.

They don't have to be master painters. They can get plenty of satisfaction dashing away at a canvas with their own creations.

Women's C. Assoc. Gives Annual Report, Elects 1951 Officers

Friday afternoon the Women's Christian Association held their 71st annual meeting in the Board Room of Trinity General Hospital with the president, Mrs. A. E. Purdy, presiding.

After the meeting was opened by the Reverend Hope Smith, pastor of Calvary Tabernacle, which church now stands on the old site of the home for the Aged, Mrs. R. B. Dolan, recording secretary, brought the report of the 70th annual meeting in which the activities of their organization were graphically outlined; including the sale of the property of the Home for the Aged to the Imperial Sons of Canada; the Harry Corby legacy whereby fuel for the needy was distributed at Christmas; the election of new members to the Board of Governors of the B.C.H., Mrs. W. C. Mikel and Mr. H. Legate; Mrs. Mikel replacing Mr. Little, who has removed to Montreal. Mrs. Mikel is the first woman to be elected to the Board, one with the knowledge and wide interest in hospital work, will be a source of resourcefulness, and the election to the presidency of Mrs. A. E. Purdy.

Tribute was paid to those who had passed on during the past year; Mrs. O. A. Marshall, Mrs. G. F. Stewart, Mrs. F. S. Anderson and Miss Helena Lynch, all of whom were devoted and interested members of the W.C.A. Sympathy was also extended to their families. Tribute was also paid to the late W. C. Mikel, who was a loyal friend to the organization, and whose interest and legal advice, was greatly appreciated.

Appreciative thanks were tendered to Mrs. Alf. Worden, who had served for five years as president, and as treasurer for five years to Mrs. Thompson and her assistants on the home board for her untiring interest in the inmates of the Home, and for her competency as chairman of the Home Board and to the treasurer, Mrs. E. Hickey, for her splendid auditing of the books.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Where's this girl's self respect?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I would like to have your opinion on a fellow who calls a girl up practically every night just to talk. Sometimes he calls her up as early as four times a night. He doesn't take her out, but takes other girls out. He keeps telling her to go out and enjoy herself, which she does. Then when he finds out about it, he becomes very cold, and doesn't call for a couple of weeks. He never gives her a reason, and at times he is very sarcastic, but yet very considerate in things he does for her. Oh, yes, he says he will never get married, no matter what.

I told this girl that if she meets another person and she falls in love with him, not to waste her time waiting for him, and besides because he is just taking her for granted and is going to wake up too late to the fact that he let a golden opportunity go sailing right by him. Am I right or am I wrong?

W.

Dear W:

You ask me for my opinion on this fellow, but I think it's much more to the point to ask you your opinion of the girl. And that is, that any girl who takes treatment of that kind from any young man doesn't deserve anything better. Even if the girl were right to love her, she'd be awfully silly to go for this incessant telephoning — and since he doesn't even want a date, why does she stand for it? As for telling her to go out and enjoy herself, and then getting mad at her for doing it—again, why does she stand for it? The way I look at it, nothing better could possibly happen than for her to stop calling, not only for a couple of weeks but for months, and the friend had proper self-respect, she'd see that he did.

They quarreled — Her friend Wouldn't "Make up"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A girl friend and I had a quarrel and it was mostly my fault, a few days ago; I felt I should tell her I was sorry.

It was hard for me to conquer my pride and go to her house, but I went, because I was truly sorry and wanted to admit it. However, she was cool toward me and would not listen, and since I was very fond of her, I was really disappointed. Perhaps it is funny for me to say that my feelings were hurt, since she was only my girl friend, but I felt so badly that I wanted to ask your advice.

Elsa A.

Dear Elsa:

It's not a bit strange that your feelings were hurt when you went to your friend to apologize and she brushed you off. She did not show a very nice spirit if she couldn't meet you half way in "making up", and if she's the type of person who harbors a grudge, I'm afraid there isn't much you can do about it. If you approached the girl in as friendly a way as you could, you've certainly done your part. Now it's up to her, and if she doesn't make some move toward you, when she's had time to think things over, then, even though it's always hard to lose a friend, this one doesn't really seem worth keeping.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about What's Cooking?

Spring is a reminder that spring chickens are a thing of the past.

Years ago there was a breeding season for chicks. Plump young broilers and twelve weeks would arrive on the market shortly after Easter. People who had dined on old fowl all year long could then eat tender young birds broiled or fried as a seasonal treat.

Now "spring" chickens are produced in all seasons. Indoor hatcheries and brooder pens make the production of chickens a year-round business that ignores cold or heat.

When you see the term "spring chicken" listed in the butcher's shop, it simply means a young chicken weighing 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 pounds.

Leftover chicken, young or old, can be converted into a rich springtime treat in chicken turnovers. Chopped chicken with seasoning vegetables and a sauce are placed on pie crust squares, which are then folded over and baked in individual portions.

Chicken Turnovers—Serves 6.

2 cups sifted all purpose flour
Salt—popped
2-3 cup shortening at room temperature
4 to 5 tablespoons cold water
1 1-2 cups finely chopped cooked chicken
1-2 cup finely chopped fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
2 tablespoons finely chopped onions
3 tablespoons flour
1-4 cup milk
Sift together the flour and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in 2-3 cup shortening until particles of shortening are the size of peas. Gradually stir in water with a fork, using as much water as is needed to hold dough together. Turn dough onto lightly floured board. Roll in a square shape to 1-8 inch thickness. Cut into 6 equal squares.

Put the mushrooms, butter, parsley and onions into a saucepan. Saute until onions turn golden. Stir in the flour. Gradually add the hot milk. Sauce will be quite thick. Add chicken to the sauce. Stir well. Add salt and pepper to taste. Remove from flame.

Divide the chicken mixture, placing in squares of dough. Moisten edges of dough with water. Fold dough over chicken mixture. Pinch edges together. Pierce tops of turnovers with a fork.

Bake at 450 degrees on a greased baking sheet until brown, 20-25 minutes.

BEAUTY

Girls with plump faces

Old-time girls wanted to look sheltered, even helpless.

Moon-faced lassies, looking with envy on girls with attractive, oval faces, needn't feel that the fairy god-mother has short-changed them. Much can be done to make the portrait appear less prominent. Improvement is accomplished by the arrangement of the hair, the clever use of make-up, the use of flattering necklines on blouse or frock.

Baby faces, baby stares, and rosebud mouths seemed to be the big idea before women were out in the world doing things, getting places. Old-time girls wanted to look sheltered, even a little helpless. Different days, different ways! Now the aim is to appear interesting, efficient, fully alive. Women have grown up. That's all. They are people.

The girl with the round face feels that she wears a childish look, and she doesn't like it one bit. Of course, the shape of one's face has nothing to do with one's capability or the seriousness of one's aims. Well, let's see what can be done.

The flat, sleek hair-do, providing a small frame for the face, accents curves and fullness. The forehead should be fully revealed to make the face look longer. At the same time, the hair-do must be much fluff at the sides; this will make the head look out of proportion to the body. The lifted pompadour or a few high-placed rolls will help.

We may say that these rules apply to all cases. The coiffure that is becoming to Mary Lou Brown stands to reason that a little uplift of the hair-do will be quite different from facial width. Hair stylists are wise to all the tricks, and any girl who is in doubt will find it worth while to seek professional services.

If rouge is used, it should be placed high on the temples. Never an apple-red circle in the middle of the cheeks to add to the curvaceous pattern. If lips are thin, they must be widened slightly by carrying the color over the upper border. If earrings are worn, long pendant designs are flattering. Button earrings are only for thin faces.

The cut of the neckline must be taken into consideration. The V cut and square effects offer more favorable lines than the round design.

Girls with round faces usually have fairly plump bodies, so they must avoid cross lines in dress as much as possible. Fussiness and too much decoration are not their sartorial dish.

ROSSMORE

Rossmore — Mr. and Mrs. A. Vandenwater have returned to their home in Rossmore after spending the Winter in St. Petersburg, Florida. Their many friends and neighbors welcome them.

Mr. J. L. Empey, who is employed for a short time at Flin Flon, reported a very pleasant flight into the town from Winnipeg.

Mr. and Mrs. Reddick held the regular euchre at their home on Wednesday night. Seven tables were in play and a pleasant evening enjoyed.

Mrs. F. Hannah entertained a few friends and neighbors at a dinner party at her home recently.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Initial-printing for paper napkins

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine is going to give me a supply of those beautiful, large, soft, white paper napkins, and has asked me to tell her what initials I'd like to have printed on them. What is the customary choice for this? I'm married, and my surname is Baker.

A. B.

The hostess' three initials are usually used. For example, A S B . . . for Alice Smith Baker. Very often, in marking of this kind, the initial of the surname is emphasized in the monogram-design . . . therefore, when you write your initials for your friend to give for the order, underline the initial of your surname.

Unkind to relatives and friends

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We wanted to have our engagement announced in the simplest way possible, so, instead of an engagement-announcement party— and so my parents simply sent the formal announcement of the engagement to the two local newspapers. Since then we have been severely criticized by my relatives, by my friends and by a few very mutual friends. We have been told that it is very incorrect, discourteous, for us not to tell them personally, that it seemed so "cold" to be informed by means of the news in the newspapers first. Was what we did really so incorrect?

Anne I.

Indeed what you did was incorrect, and unkind, and most inconsiderate. An engagement announcement is very personal item, and, naturally, most naturally, relatives and friends expect to be informed (by word of mouth or by telephone call or by note) of the engagement of a relative or close friend. They can't be expected to feel honored or complimented by receiving this important news through the newspaper announcement. That is not the way of courtesy, thoughtfulness.

Today's luncheon menus are simple

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I moved here quite recently and we have been invited to several homes to dinner, but I would like to begin to give small informal luncheons, inviting women I have met in my church work or a club here, and several wives of my husband's business connections. How many courses would I have to serve? (I have located a maid who promises to come when I need her, to cook or to serve, or both.) And would I have to plan an elaborate menu?

Florence T.

Today's luncheons are customarily very simple, usually informal, and an elaborate menu is rarely served. Three courses are the maximum: soup or an entree; the main course, sometimes a very often eggs in some form (perhaps scalloped eggs with chicken livers, or an omelet); dessert, usually simple, and always uncomplicated by (fussiness). Many famous hostesses achieve a specialty of one excellent casserole dish and serve this as a first course, accompanied by a simple green salad, and with it, a generous hot bread or small hot or heated rolls or biscuits; and a dessert; only two courses. Or often there is some other kind of hot first course, after which salad and cheese are served. Or, in summer, for the first course, melon or grapefruit; a hot course; then ice cream or ice (with plain sugar cookies) or, a favorite one, berries or fresh or stewed fruit with the now-so-popular sour cream. After luncheon coffee is served in the living-room.

Fitted Coat

NOT for many seasons has the fitted coat been such prominence and acclaim. After the loose, boxy jobs it looks neat, restrained and definitely different. From New York's own Hasbro Bang comes this topper of navy tweed decorated with smartly handled twin hip pockets. It is lined with red silk taffeta and the self buttons are gold-framed. A model that is bound to get a good work-out this season.

Velvet And Silk Surah.

For an important occasion

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

DARK gray and white dotted silk surah has been smartly tailored into a very effective dress. Although it is simple, the fresh air has an air about it and would be an ideal choice for a dressy occasion. Black velvet binding is most interestingly used for the frame collar, cuffs, pockets and down the front. A double white organdie collar stands away from the neck inside the velvet binding. The buttons are rhinestone studded.

Britain Plans Tournament of Chess Masters

By EDWIN B. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP) — An international chess mastey tournament is being organized by the British Chess Federation to be held next May in conjunction with the Festival of Britain.

The event will also commemorate the centenary of the first international chess congress promoted in London in 1851 by the famous British master, Howard Staunton.

Invitations were sent to 16 of the world's chess masters. So far acceptances have been received from at least 11, including Dr. Stahlberg of Sweden, Argentine, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, West Germany, U.S., Gligoric of Yugoslavia, A. Reguier of the U.S., Szabo and G. Barcza of Hungary and from Britain, the British champion, R. J. Broadbent, and E. Klein and H. Golombek.

The present world champion, M. Botvinnik of Russia, says that he would be unable to accept because of the world championship being held at Moscow starting March 15 and running until late in April. Four various reasons the former title-holder, Dr. Max Euwe of Holland and two American masters, Samuel Reshevsky and Reuben Fine, have also declined.

Canadian Junior

A Canadian junior is expected to compete in a junior division of the big tournament here. Likely candidates are 15-year-old Ross Siemms of Toronto or Lionel Joyner, 19, of Montreal, but arrangements are indefinite so far.

(In Toronto Siemms' father explained that his son would probably have to defeat Joyner and win the Ontario junior championship to qualify for the London bid).

The Russian chess authorities have been asked to nominate alternates since Botvinnik explained he would be unable to make the trip. Holland has also been asked to name a replacement for Dr. Euwe.

Of the other invited masters, British chess officials said they had been unable to meet the terms asked by Reshevsky and by M. Najdorf of the Argentine. They asserted these had asked for appearance money and expense guarantees beyond the means of the promoters.

Promotion of the tournament is expected to cost about $12,000, of which $7,500 has already been raised. A public campaign for the remainder "to uphold national prestige" has been started by the British federation.

The tournament will be played in three stages. It opens at Cheltenham on May 26, actual date of the centenary, and after eleven days moves to Leamington Spa. The third session will be held at Birmingham where the first world junior tournament is being held.

Victoria Man Collects Cigar Bands

Victoria, B.C. (CP) — Nearly 1,000 stogies went up in smoke to provide a hobby for Grant O'Hara Johnston of Victoria.

There are only four cigar-band collectors in Canada, apparently, but there are 220 throughout the world and they have organized, or banded together, in the International Cigar Band Society which publishes its own magazine.

More and more people are jumping on the cigar band wagon, Mr. Johnston says, as the once-popular hobby revives.

Mr. Johnston began collecting bands as a nonstamp in Saskatoon.

The master collection of 50,000 bands is owned by the president of the society, G. A. Grassby, of Minneapolis.

Mr. Johnston's relatively modest collection is a miniature gallery of great men and events: Romeo and Juliet, Aida, Hamlet, Sir Wilfred Laurier, Chamberlain, Queen Victoria, Lord Tennyson, Velasquez, Judith Hanlon and so on.

Elaborate Designs

The bands range in size and design from simple quarter-inch ones to elaborate circles, two inches wide, which used to be carried on cigars distributed at Christmas or on special occasions.

The cigar band was born in Cuba about 1854 when a tobacco magnate found that some merchants were substituting cheap stogies for his choicest Havanas. He designed a small paper circlet to prevent counterfeiting.

Though 80 per cent of the society's members don't smoke, Mr. Johnston puffs regularly on a cigar.

There's a rule of etiquette attached to cigar smoking; the puffer should remove the band before he smokes the cigar. The theory is that it lag left the band on an expensive cheroot he would be advertising his ability to buy the best.

Toronto Leafs at Top Form After Knocking Boston Bruins Out of Stanley Cup Semi-Finals

Boston, April 8—(AP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, currently playing their best hockey of the season, headed back today to their St. Catharines, Ont., hideout to prepare for the Stanley Cup finals against an Canadiens of Montreal, starting Wednesday night.

Leafs, outdid themselves last night, in the opinion of Happy Day, their former coach and now assistant general manager, in whipping Boston Bruins 5-0 to qualify for the National Hockey League's final playdowns.

Their checking kept Bruins hemmed in most of the night and their passing attack functioned smoothly as they downed the Bruins for the fourth time in the best-of-seven series.

Les Canadiens also played at their peak after a dismal start when they eliminated Detroit's pennant-winning Red Wings Saturday night by a 3-2 score.

Joe Primeau, Leaf coach, pointed out to a questioner: "Mordell isn't the same team it was during the season. They're a much better club now."

His quizzer had reminded that Toronto defeated Canadiens 10 times during the regular season.

Leafs are at top strength except for Harry Watson, who did not play at all in all the Boston series because of a separated shoulder. But Harry has been skating lightly and probably will be ready to play against Montreal.

Leafs skated at top speed all last night and the checking of the forwards and the stout defence put up by the rearguards made standout goalie Turk Broda's work much easier.

Kinsey Gets Two

Joe Klukay repeated his effort of Saturday night, when the Leafs won it, getting the goals to lead last night's Leaf attack. He also picked up an assist on Sterling Kinsey's second period goal. Ted Kennedy opened the scoring half way through the first period, with Klukay getting his first about five minutes later. Leading 3-0 by the third period, the Leafs wrapped it up with goals by Syd Smith and Fern Flaman and Klukay got his second with five seconds to go.

Boston coach Lynn Patrick tried all sorts of combinations to break the Bruins out of the tight defence. He even shifted again-ty Gordon Henry, recalled from Hershey of the American League, in place of Jack Gelineau, who played the full season as Boston's goalie.

Gelineau scored a 2-0 shutout over Leafs in the series opener nine days ago in Toronto.

But Bruins against Broda were able to move only four goals in five hours, three minutes and 16 seconds. Broda played after Vezina Trophy winner Al Rollins suffered a knee injury in the opening game of the series.

Bruins were outshot by wide margins in all games, further proof of Leafs' remarkable control of the puck.

Ben Hogan Wins Masters Tourney For First Time

Augusta, Ga., April 8—(AP)—Icicle-nerved Ben Hogan of Texas added a sensational flourish to one of the great comeback sagas in sports Sunday when he won his first masters golf championship with a near-record 280.

He subdued Augusta National's treacherous acres with a nerveless last-round four-under par 68 that burned off all opposition.

He finished two strokes ahead of Robert (Skee) Riegel, fashman professional from Tulsa, Okla.

The 38-year-old national open champion, winner of the crown twice and the Professional Golfers' Association as many times thus completed his slam of major American pro championships.

Other leading challengers—Sam Snead, Lloyd Mangrum, Dave Douglas and Cary Middlecoff—floundered on the short stretch of the home holes—the 10th,11th and 12th holes—that has become known to golfers as "Heartbreak Highway."

The defending champion and three-time winner, Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., wound up with a 71 for a 284, 16 strokes worse than his winning score a year ago.

Hogan fashioned a 33-35—68 over the par 36-36—72 course that enabled him to erase off the record held by Ralph Guldahl (1939 and Claude Harmon (1948). He had 14 pars and four birdies.

Quebec League Will Continue With Playoffs

Quebec, April 9 — (CP) Jack Latter, president of Quebec Senior Hockey League, announced last night the Quebec Senior Hockey championship, said last night that the club "will stick to the Canadian Hockey League playoff schedule."

He was commenting on a report from New Westminster, B. C., quoting President Doug Grierson of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association as saying unless the Quebec group has its Alexander Cup representative in the Maritimes by April 13 it would be dropped from further competition.

"The clubs in the league agreed on the playoff schedule and are sticking to it," Latter said. "We made an agreement and we believe it should be respected."

If the best-of-nine series, now tied 2-2, goes the limit, the championship will be decided April 15.

Stanley Cup Fmals Open On Wednesday

Boston, April 8—(AP)—Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, tonight slightly announced Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens would meet in Toronto Wednesday in the first game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup finals.

Toronto qualified for the finals Sunday night by whipping Boston Bruins 5-0, the fourth Leaf win in the best-of-seven series 'B' semi-finals.

Montreal gained the final round Saturday with a 3-2 triumph over Detroit Red Wings. That victory gave the Canadiens a 4-3 edge in their best-of-seven series.

Remainder of the schedule:

Saturday, April 14, at Toronto; Monday and Thursday, April 17 and 19 in Montreal and the fifth game in Toronto, Saturday, April 21.

Campbell said dates for a sixth or seventh game would be decided later.

Bronko Nagurski Easily Wins Place in Hall

New Brunswick, N. J., April 9 (AP) — Minnesota's Bronko Nagurski was selected with such size, speed and natural talent that he probably could have become an all-time all-American football star at any position he chose.

And football experts, writers and broadcasters had a tough time finding the right place for him in the Associated Press' poll, but finally placed him at middle — a mate of Wilbur (Pat) Henry, former Washington and Jefferson College great during and just after the First World War.

In the poll to determine the all-time All-America for considerations to the National Football Hall of Fame, Nagurski drew the third highest vote total, beaten out only by halfbacks Red Grange and Jim Thorpe.

Members of the first three teams chosen in the country-wide poll, representing more than 100 ballots and the opinions of thousands, qualify for consideration for the Hall of Fame, located at Rutgers University here.

The Hall of Fame honors court will make the final selection of who will have permanent niches in this projected $5,000,000 shrine, located where intercollegiate football was born in 1869.

O. B. A. CONVENTION AT LONDON

Fred Young of Chippewa was re-elected President of the Ontario Baseball Association at its 34th annual convention during the weekend. Mr. Young was returned unanimously.

W. F. Nickel of Stratford was elected first vice-president.

Other officers: Garret F. Frankland of Toronto, second vice - president; Jim Millman of London, third vice-president.

Vern Clark of Hamilton will carry on as secretary-treasurer until the executive makes three appointments, including registration secretary and corresponding secretary.

* * *

President Fred Young, in his address to the delegates, stated that while the Association had suffered through declining revenues the O. B. A. had gained prestige in the work of its various members and also, with its association with organized baseball, particularly Ford Frick, president of the National League.

He stated that this session in London was one of the most important in the history of the O. B. A. particularly since it offered a challenge in the light of declining finances and a drop in player registration.

Mr. Nickel, in his remarks, warned delegates that adequate financial arrangements would have to be found by the delegates to increase the finances of the organization or else the O. B. A. would suffer further.

* * *

The OBA under newly - elected President Fred Young, took steps to establish a memorial fund for the family of the late W. J. Snyder, secretary for many years, who died last year. The proxy appointed a five-man committee under the chairmanship of Fred Bradley, life-long friend of the late Bill Snyder, to bring suggestions to the executive on ways and means of establishing the fund.

The committee consists of Bunny Morgenson, Toronto; Tommy Morrison, Welland; Otto Mauser, Waterloo and Jim Millman, London, along with Bradley.

Talking to some of the delegates at an annual convention that was featured by the lack of attendance, we learned that generally speaking it was "never" that the Central Ontario Baseball League had declared itself an independent concern. In fact the talk that the OBA would take drastic action against the down-casters was the inspiration of a Toronto sports writer, who was probably indulging in a lot of wishful thinking since he himself represented a Toronto baseball association.

* * *

There was some discussion over the import question with some favoring elimination of the rule while others were for restrictions. Tommy Morrison, who was all for cutting the list for two, while some wanted the rule out and leave the association for Canadian players.

* * *

Aside to President Don Lee of the Belleville Commercial Softball Association. We were talking with Frank Feaver of the Central Ontario Softball Association and the subject of Belleville softball came up. Feaver told us the OASA would grant this village the privilege of entering "A". "AA" and an intermediate softball team in the playdowns.

Canadiens on Gala Hockey Band Wagon After Victory Over Detroit Red Wings

Montreal, April 9—(CP)—A gala hockey band wagon labelled "Montreal Canadiens" held a surprising lot of fast climbers today.

There was some reason behind all the hurrah and shouting. Canadiens knocked off Detroit Red Wings 3-2 Saturday night in the sixth game of their Stanley Cup semi-final.

The Montreal victory, first on either club's home ice, meant the favored Red Wings lost not only the best-of-seven series 4-2 but also their consideerable prestige in the process.

Canadiens now will meet Toronto Maple Leafs in the cup final.

The game that eliminated Detroit was acclaimed one of the most sensational and gripping in Stanley Cup history. A crowd of 14,448 screamed itself into exhaustion when the teams piled up all five goals in the third period of a hectic, wide-open struggle in which not one penalty was called.

Two scoreless periods went by, each team missing gaping nets. Jimmy Peters of the Wings and Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Canadiens found the goal posts.

Then the scoring deluge broke loose. At 4:40 of the period, Billy Reay of Canadiens tipped in Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion's shot for the first goal.

Game Tied Early

Sid Abel of Detroit whipped in a rebound off Gordie Howe's shot to tie the score.

Richard picked up Elmer Lach's short pass behind the Detroit net and whirled across the goal post the best goalie Terry Sawchuk.

The crowd, on its feet the rest of the way, went into a frenzy. The game appeared safe for the Montrealers when Ken Mosdell broke into the clear with Floyd Curry from a Detroit power play and beat Sawchuk cleanly.

The Red Wings, skating furiously and storming the Montreal zone, came within one goal of tying the score on an all-out power play. From a scrimmed shot that goalie Gerry McNeil of Canadiens didn't even see. The puck whistled into the net and the goal was credited to left-winger Ted Lindsay of the Wings.

In the last minute, the Wings' goalie Sawchuk from the net and sent six men on in a last-bid for the tying goal. The Wings' production line of Howe, Abel and Lindsay fought it out to the last second against Canadiens' great stand.

Six seconds from the end, Lach beat Abel to the draw in a Montreal zone face-off, and the Wings' last great chance was gone.

Toronto Marlies All Even With Barrie Flyers

Toronto, April 9 — (CP) Sparked by John Lumley's second period goal, Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association junior 'A' final series two games each before 6,186.

Lumley took strenuous objection to a remark by Labine after the latter scored Barrie's second goal. The two fought on the ice and continued in the penalty box, requiring police assistance to separate them. Both got match misconducts and were tossed out of the game.

Marlies then rapped in three goals, and added two in the last chapter.

Jim Morrison opened he scoring, capping a left-wing drive to beat Don Lockhart handily. Labine poked home a pass to make it 2-0. Both goals were scored with Marlies short - handed.

After the fight Wally Maxwell scored from close in. Eric Nesterenko missed the second from the Barrie door-step. Earl Balfour raced up right wing and made it 3-2.

In the third chapter Ron Hurst made it 4-3 and Belfour got his second goal.

The game, originally scheduled for Sunday, was advanced when Barrie refused to play Sunday. The O. H. A. upheld the decision over Marlboros' strong protest.

Goalies Don Lockhart and Lorne Worsley, both of whom played amateur hockey at times, were honored during the first intermission. They received replicas each of the Jim Pinkney Trophy, awarded annually to the goalie with the best goals-against average during league play. The trophy was finished even on the season, Jim Pinkney of Stratford made the presentation.

Hornets Score Seventh Straight Win in Playoffs

Cleveland, April 9 — (AP) — Pittsburgh's Hornets go after another victory from the Cleveland Barons tomorrow night in the second game of the American Hockey League playoff.

The Hornets stung the Barons 3-2 here Saturday night in the opener of the four-out-of-seven title series. Bob Solinger scored the deciding goal at 5:31 of the first 10-minute overtime for his second marker of the game.

Cleveland was ahead twice on goals by Lloyd Doran and by Buller, but Solinger's first counter and another by George Armstrong tied it up each time.

Pittsburgh now has seven straight playoff games, and trimmed Cleveland the last three times they met.

The third game of the playoff will be played in Pittsburgh Thursday.

Pitching Should Be Deciding Factor in Race

New York, April 9—(AP)—A 14-year-famine should end this season for Brooklyn fans if new York Giants hustle to a low overdue pennant to what stopped up as the most gruelling three-cornered flight in the National League in 43 years.

It is going to be dog eat dog with the Giants, Brooklyn Dodgers and defending champion Philadelphia Phillies doing most of the clawing and biting. They shape up by far the best.

The Dodgers, picked by most experts to dethrone the Phils, possess the most talent. The Phils boast the confidence of a champion and the Giants have smoother and deeper pitching.

Pitching should be the deciding factor. It was the Giant's superb pitching that made them the fiercest club in the circuit during the second half of the 1950 season. And it is the same, if not better, hurling that should pull them through this season.

The Phils should wind up second with the Dodgers a shade behind. Stan Musial should carry St. Louis Cardinals into the fourth berth.

Here is the way we figure the clubs to finish:

1. New York; 2. Philadelphia; 3. Brooklyn; 4. St. Louis; 5. Boston; 6. Cincinnati; 7. Chicago; 8. Pittsburgh.

The Giants are strong down the middle. On one end is centrefielder Bobby Thomson and on the other is solid catching of Wes Westrumand rookie Ray Noble.

Strength in Middle

The real strength of the centre line is right in the middle. There is no hole anywhere near that shortstop Alvin Dark and second-baseman Eddie Stanky.

No manager can ask for a finer trio of starting pitchers than Larry Jansen, Sal Maglie and Jim Hearn who won 62 and lost only 31 in 1950.

In some respects, the Phillies are improved over 1950. Manager Eddie Sawyer hasn't a replacement for Curt Simmons, winner of 17 games before he joined the army last September.

The Phils also must get another season out of ageless pitcher Jim Konstanty if they are to repeat. Big Jim won 16 games, saved 24 others and did 74 relief chores last year.

Poor pitching, which hounded the Dodgers last year, figures to plague them again this season. Except for Don Newcombe and Preacher Roe (both 19-11), manager Charley Dressen isn't sure of a starting pitcher.

The Cards, of course, have Musial.

The Braves still have the big three, pitchers Warren Spahn, Johnny Sain and Vern Bickford.

Thorpe Chosen On All-Time Football Team

(By The Canadian Press)

Fabulous Jim Thorpe, recently named the greatest football player of all time by a panel of athlete of the age, completed his grand slam honors Sunday by being chosen on the all-time all-American football team.

The big Indian was an almost-unanimous choice for one of the halfback posts, as was his teammate in the dream backfield, Illinois' Red Grange.

It now seems to be a question of which of these two immortal gridiron stars, who were far out ahead in the voting in the Associated Press poll, will be the first to gain a permanent niche in the National Football Hall of Fame.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Stub R. Knox says he plays bridge for fun. Which is the ailiti of players who are ignorant of the correct bids and too stubborn or too lazy to learn them. It is no fun for partner.

Each type of hand has a particular kind of bid to reveal to partner. This is not its function. Being in no order of choice, it denies having a hand that is in a stronger category.

The defensive bid with most power is an overcall in an opponent suit. Such a bid promises at least nine tricks, is forcing to game, and promises no losers in the opponent suit.

♠A Q J 9 8
♥A 4
♦K 10 9 3
♣A

Suppose an opponent started with an opening bid of one club. Your immediate defensive bid here is two clubs; an overcall in the opponent suit. What have you told your partner?

You have said your hand contains nine tricks or more and that a game is in your pair in something. You insist that he help you keep bidding to game. You promise not to lose any trick.

There are players who never go to the trouble of trying to learn this signal. It takes only a few minutes to master it. Yet they will not go to so much trouble to learn a game.

They would be offended if you used a broomstick when you were their partner in a golf game. They would squelch you if you sang off key in their harmony group. But this is a shoe on another foot.

You can see the purpose of an overcall in opponent suit: It is to enable partner to cooperate with you intelligently. It shows him values he could not see if you merely bid your suit.

A partner who does not know this is a handicap in bridge. Not only does it prevent you from reaching your most profitable contract. Your following bids make you look ridiculous. That's no fun.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 9 —(AP)— Ethel Barrymore bears two great distinctions: She is the foremost actress of the stage and screen and she is the show world's most avid baseball fan.

Because of her pre-eminence in these fields, I asked her to pick her all-time, all-star baseball team. She rattled off her squad as follows (alternates in parentheses):

First base—Hal Chase (Billy Terry).

Second base—Charles Gehringer (Eddie Collins, Frankie Frisch, Larry Lajoie, Rogers Hornsby).

Third base—Pie Traynor (Jimmy Collins, Stan Hack).

Short stop — Honus Wagner (Lou Boudreau).

Left field—Babe Ruth.

Centre field — Tris Speaker (Joe DiMaggio, Terry Moore).

Right field—Ty Cobb.

Catcher — Mickey Cochrane (Gabby Street, Ray Schalk).

Pitcher — Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Carl Hubbell (Bob Feller, Dizzy and Paul Dean).

I asked her to pick one all-time player.

"Ty Cobb, of course," she replied without hesitation. "There's no argument about it. I'd be a fool if I named anyone else."

No Favorite Team

Does she have a favorite team?

"No, I always root for the visitors."

"The one thing I miss the most in California are the major league games," she sighed.

MURDER; SUICIDE

Revere, Mass., April 9 (AP)—A mother and her young son were found dead — clasped in each other's arms — in their gas-filled home yesterday. They were identified as Mrs. Mary L. Niles, 29, and Robert Niles, six. Police said it was a case of murder and suicide.

NO PENALTIES CALLED

Boston, April 9 —(CP)—Referee Bill Chadwick's business thumb had a quiet hockey weekend.

He was official at two Stanley Cup playoff games but didn't call a penalty in either — the Detroit-Canadiens game at Montreal Saturday night, and the Bruins-Toronto game at Boston last night.

NO CONFIRMATION

Hamilton (CP) — Vern Clark, acting secretary - treasurer of the Ontario Baseball Association, said Sunday night he had notified President Fred Young that all association secretarial work is being held in abeyance while official confirmation of his position is made.

Clark was made acting secretary-treasurer Feb. 3 to fill the position created by the death last

Canners, Growers Meet to Settle Dispute On Prices

Toronto, April 9 — (CP) — A meeting here today of Ontario canners and growers is expected to settle their dispute over 1951 prices for peas, tomatoes and corn.

Growers and canners, at loggerheads for several weeks, will hold separate meetings, but are expected to go into a joint conference and settle the price questions.

William I. Walker, chairman of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board, said Saturday he expected the dispute to be settled in favor of the growers.

Growers want $30 a ton for unstaked tomatoes, $3 above the price set by an arbitration board; $85 a ton for peas, compared to $5 offered and $27 for corn, compared to $23.

The movement to refuse to sign contracts started in Essex and Kent counties and quickly spread across the province.

Eleven Persons Die Violently During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Violent death took the lives of 11 persons in various parts of Canada during the weekend. All were reported in Ontario.

Eight persons died as the result of auto mishaps, one a hunting accident, another was suffocated by smoke and a woman died from burns received when her clothing caught fire.

Donna Harrison, 16, and Louis Young, 19, both of Brantford, were killed Saturday when the car in which they were riding crashed into a parked truck.

Two Dutch immigrants, Walter Vanmeenen, 31, of Galt and Joke Vanderburg, 53, of nearby Preston died Sunday when their car went out of control near Galt. A level-crossing crash near Fort Erie took the lives of Peter Lloyd, 26, and Homer Cutler, 25, both of London.

A collision near the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto killed Alfred Rooney, 60, while a New Toronto youth, Gordon Kemsley, 21, met death Saturday when his motorcycle plied into a parked car near his home.

Lee Mallory, 44, of Trenton died from a bullet wound in the head Sunday when the hunting rifle he had slung over his shoulder accidentally discharged.

Burns suffered when her clothing caught fire resulted in the death Saturday of Mrs. Mary MacRae, 80, of Avonmore, and Steve Kimet, 74, of Waterford died of suffocation Saturday after being overcome by smoke when his home burned.

WEST HUNTINGDON

Rev. M. Clarke Gives Talk on Music

The April meeting of the West Huntingdon W.M.S. and W.A., was held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. Howard Cooke. The theme for the meeting was, "Music", with a poem, entitled, "An Early Song" being read.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. George Cooke, followed by the Scripture reading. Psalm 100 by Mrs. John Jeffrey, and a solo by Mrs. William Grant. Mrs. A. McCurdy also gave a reading.

The business period, followed by a report on the conference which had been held in Picton, was given by Mrs. Frank Hammond.

The guest speaker was the Rev. M. Clarke, who spoke on "Music" taking as example "Albert Swelzer."

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Clarke, and also to the hostess, Mrs. Howard Cooke by Mrs. John Jeffrey, on behalf of the ladies present.

A social half hour followed the close of the meeting, which was much enjoyed by all.

JITTERY

Early in the year, 3,000-anti-communists entered Albania by land and sea and made their way to Tirana, the capital, where they joined elements hostile to Hoxha. They planned a general uprising and the assassination of Hoxha.

In February, a bomb exploded in the Soviet embassy in Tirana. This was to have been the signal for the uprising.

The plot failed because Hoxha's men immediately moved in and arrested many of the "invaders" and other suspects.

An Athens dispatch said five countries — the United States, Britain, Yugoslavia, Italy and Greece—were working through emigre Albanians and intelligence agents parachuted into the country in an effort to upset the regime.

AURIOLS END

The day's schedule was topped by a banquet, offered by the Canadian government.

Assisted in Unveiling

At the University of Montreal, the 12-car party was welcomed by Msgr. Paul-Emile Leger, Archbishop of Montreal and chancellor of the university.

Following a reception, the presidens signed the university's golden book and assisted at the unveiling of a statute of Jean d'Arc.

At McGill University, the party was met by Chief Justice C. S. Tyndale of superior court and chancellor of McGill.

As the party proceeded through gaily-decorated streets, cheers of welcome rang out from the thousands of spectators who lined the route.

They waved flags, applauded and shouted: "Vive la France, Vive le President."

This morning, the President was to take a rest. Later, in the afternoon, he was to drive to the Montreal airport at nearby Dorval and inspect a guard of honor before boarding the special plane.

U.S. AND BRITAIN

Since the U. S. is vitally interested in keeping the oil flowing toward the west, and because American companies control some of the Arab fields, the U. S. has followed a policy of trying to keep Iran stabilized and thus minimize opportunities which might permit the Russians to move in.

McGhee recently visited the area and talked with Iranian leaders. He is said to be convinced that the western powers have no alternative except to deal with the Iranian decision to nationalize the oil-fields.

However, it is understood he also feels and will impress upon the British authorities that it is not the legal ownership of the fields which is of primary importance in the present situation, but rather the continued production and flow of oil into the European economy.

He evidently believes that in spite, of the dealock between the Iranian and British governments over oil negotiations, the Iranians might be willing to keep a British operating company in the fields on a profit-sharing basis.

Vancouver Leafs Play Toronto Tri-Bells in Final

Vancouver, April 9 — (CP) — Vancouver Clover Leafs, in the Canadian basketball final because they're still mad at a little town in Alberta, open a best-of-five Dominion championship series with Toronto Tri-Bells here tonight.

The Leafs, a bunch of old men now as cagers go, won the Canadian title in 1947, '48 and '49. They had hoped to make it four straight last year, and then most of their veterans would have retired.

But they didn't get by the first interprovincial round. They were knocked out by Magrath, Alta. Right then, the Leafs decided to try it just one more time.

The old hands have been playing together since their days with University of British Columbia Thunderbirds. Average team age is just over 25 years.

Playing coach Ron Weber is 28, Sandy Robertson 28, Jack Pomfret 28, Ole Bakken 28, Dave Campbell 25, Bob Butterell 23, Bob Scarr 24, Art Sillwell 27, Bob Pickel 23 and Jack McKinnon 20. Robertson, Butterell, Bakken and Campbell announced Saturday that this would be their last season in basketball.

"We'll concentrate on the more important job of making a living," Robertson, a consulting engineer, said.

The Leafs whipped Alberni Athletics three straight for the British Columbia title and ran through Edmonton Meteors just as quickly for the Western Canada championship.

This will probably be the last series this great team will play in as a unit.

Toronto appears as the toughest competition the Leafs' five years of basketballing. They have the height on Leafs and four of their players — Sharple Lipvack, Syd Himel, Max Grossman and Ginny Shulberg — played for Y. M. H. A. in the Palestine Olympics last year.

Leafs Made Bruins Look Bad Says Boston Coach

Boston, April 9 (CP) — "We looked bad, but they made us look bad," was Bruins coach Lynn Patrick's summary of the final Toronto-Boston Stanley Cup semi-final series game Sunday night.

"Give the Leafs plenty of credit," Patrick added. "They were flying."

After the contest he was among the first into the Leafs jubilant and noisy dressing room to congratulate Toronto coach Joe Primeau, and his players.

Primeau was particularly pleased with the shutout Turk Broda earned in Toronto nets.

The 'Turkey's' playoff showing after getting into the series because of Al Rollins' injury was sensational.

Broda, still one of the game's top money players, allowed Boston only four goals in five and two-thirds games. This stretch included six hours, three minutes and 16 seconds of hockey.

Primeau thought his first line of Captain Teeder Kennedy, Tod Sloan and Sid Smith did a great job, too.

Patrick was impressed with the aggressive showing made by young George (Red) Sullivan, just brought up from the Bruins' Hershey farm in the American Hockey League. Red - was busy pushing with the everready Leafs all night and once took a terrific stiff arm check from Bartko that put him sprawling over backwards.

Patrick felt that goalie Gordie Henry, who replaced Jack Gelineau for the last two series games, did a good job in those 6-0 tally.

"He didn't have a chance on the goals," Patrick added.

AMATEURS PUT ON SHOW

Toronto, April 9— (CP)—Amateur radio operators successfully came to the rescue yesterday after a make - believe enemy bombing attack "wrecked" Toronto's communications system. The amateurs, practising their part of civil defence, set up gasoline motors to generate their own station power. Members of St. John Ambulance Association brigades bandaged mock - out areas and took care of injured civilians.

CHURCH SERVICE INSIDE COLOSSEUM

A general view of the historic Colosseum as the young Catholic singers who journeyed to Rome to sing for Pope Pius staged a rehearsal in the great arena before their big performance at St. Peter's basilica. The Colosseum, weathered and battered, has withstood the storms of the centuries as a landmark of Christianity's triumph over paganism. — Central Press Canadian.

ARMY ROTATION

Tokyo, April 9 — (AP) — United States forces in Korea will be sent home on the basis of total time served there and actual exposure to combat under the army's planned rotation plan.

Maj. - Gen. W. A. Beiderlinden, personnel director for the Far East Command, said the program would be directly affected by day - to - day military operations Its speed will be governored by availability of replacements and transport.

Beiderlinden said selection will be on a most - combat - first home basis.

PLENTY OF WORK

Niagara Falls, April 9 — (CP)— Attracted by hope of employment on the new hydro project here, Niagara Falls has become a mecca for hundreds of unemployed young men in recent weeks. Most of them have been able to find jobs and unemployment is lowest in years.

LOOK FELLAS . . .

We've often kidded around about used cars in our advertisements so that we might give you a laugh. But here's a time to be serious. The people of Belleville have always been considered good sportsmen and people of Belleville have always been considered good supporters of fair play. This is proven by your grand support of all sporting events which take place in this city. You've always taken the part of the underdog and cheered the loser.

Unfortunately at this time of year, we seem to lose this sense of fair play when the pickerel come up the Moira River to spawn. Every year there occurs on the banks of our fair river a veritable slaughter whereln there occurs on the banks to find a retreat there and come up for the one purpose, creating more pickerel, are mercilessly speared by certain unthinking individuals who imagine they're getting something for nothing.

Well, fellas, you're not fair to the fish and you're not fair to yourselves. If you saw a mother dog, which had just given birth to a litter of puppies, jabbed with a spear, you would probably thrash the offender within an inch of his life. It is even worse to spear pickerel because they will each lay about 80,000 eggs and even under favorable conditions only about 12 or so turn out to be mature fish, and so you are also unfair to yourselves as you are depriving yourself of good future fishing.

Some foolish people will agree that the price of food is high and a free meal is a free meal. If this is your reason for spearing pickerel, please feel free to come up to our office and we will gladly pay you for the price of a good fish dinner with all the trimmings.

REMEMBER:—
ONLY MEAN PEOPLE SPEAR SPAWNING FISH.

WHY WE SAY

. . . it could happen today
This complete expression, of course, is "People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." It started with the Duke of Buckingham who led a mob to throw stones through Puritans' windows. But the Puritans retaliated with attacks on the Dukes' house (which had many windows). When he complained to the king, the expression, "People who live in glass houses . . ." etc., was applied.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

The windows of "Jean Paul," a topflight New York designer, offered a bright defiance to the chill, dreary March day. The hats on their chaste pedestals were like flowers and birds from some mere garden, and the sauce manequins in their smart spotted prints looked, if they were not too exacting, very much like debutantes on parade.

It was a brave front the windows put up. There was no question about that. But upstairs, in the apartment on the fourth floor where the owners of the shop lived, there was anything but brightness and bravery.

Mr. Paul Panciera, elegant, urbane, paced the deep carpet of the luxurious living room, nervously fingered his thin black moustache. His partner and chief model, Jean Roland, lounged listlessly in a great chair, her long, slender body limp and carefree.

"It can't be," Mr. Panciera said. "It just simply can't happen to us."

"But it has," the girl said emptily. "We're headed for—"

"Please don't say it that way, precious." Mr. Panciera's fine sensibilities were hurt. "It sounds so common, so plebeian."

"We're bankrupt, then. Does that sound better?"

"Dear, dear." Mr. Panciera was distraught. "Why must we have to have money?"

"It's lovely stuff." The girl drew her body together, getting ready to rise. "Nice to have around. Nice to spend. Nice way you look at it."

"You are so materialistic my sweet," Mr. Panciera complained.

"Darn tootin' I am." The girl rose languidly to her feet. "I'm going over to Cochet's and get my old job back."

Mr. Panciera was alarmed. "No no. You're not going to walk out on me, are you?"

"No!" She was cool, offhand. "Cochet's been calling for weeks now. He's offering me $50 an hour to model for him—"

"But here you're a member of our firm." Mr. Panciera interrupted.

She laughed softly. "A member of the firm and broke. Excuse me, bankrupt."

"Dear, dear." Mr. Panciera moaned again. "Even our conversation has become common. What has happened to us? What has happened to our destiny? I don't understand it."

"I do. As a designer, Paul, you have a delightful conversational art. You haven't sketched an idea in six months that anyone would look twice at except when it was on me, and they they weren't on me, and they weren't looking at the dress. You've just a plain, ordinary flop, my love."

Mr. Panciera shook his head sadly. "How I hate honesty," he said.

The girl went into the back of the apartment, returned with a top coat. Mr. Panciera in distress faced her.

"This can't be, Jean," he said again. "This just simply can't be true. It's completely too crude for people like you and me."

As he spoke the door buzzer sounded. Mr. Panciera went to the door, opened it. An office girl stood there with a large Manila envelope in her hand.

"This just came special delivery, registered, she said. "I thought it might be important."

Mr. Panciera shrugged took the envelope. "Nothing is important any more."

He closed the door and, looking at the envelope turned back to Jean. "Special delivery, registered. Well, somebody must still love us."

"Another way of sending a bill probably." Jean was not interested.

Mr. Panciera read aloud the return address on the envelope. "Cetewsa, General Delivery. Cedarbrook, New York, It's nothing. Nothing. Just another nitwit who thinks we run a mail order house."

He sighed, tossed the envelope unopened on to a table. "I thought perhaps it was destiny buzzing at the door just now."

"I think you'll hear the sheriff buzzing first," Jean went to the door. "So long, my love."

She smiled her cool little smile, waved and went out.

It had been a beautiful dream for Mr. Panciera, this gown shop. It had for Jean, too. And it must in fairness be said the dream was not altogether without foundation.

Jean Roland was the top model in Manhattan, an arresting young woman with a tall, slender body halloed with altered blonde hair, a sort of gray-and-gold effect, artificially created.

Her face was petite and child-like and her skin luminous as if it were translucent, and she had course, and had seen her picture countless times but it was not until that winter's day when she was modeling a design for Monsieur Cochet (whose glory she was that he met her face to face.

Straightway, the wily Mr. Panciera saw a future, a radiant future. He saw a business of his own in which he would design exclusively for Jean Roland and she would model exclusively for him.

This was a very large order of dream, but Mr. Panciera was a born entrepreneur and a man of more than ordinary persuasiveness when it came to women, and it was not very long after this first meeting at Cochet's that the lovely model and Mr. Panciera were being seen everywhere together.

Jean was, however, a realistic young lady. Her delicate young face was the mask of a coldly ambitious and enterprising spirit. She wanted money and more money. But she wanted more than that. She wanted complete independence.

She could have married money on many occasions. But marriage had obligations she did not wish to assume. Not now in her beautiful youth. She wanted luxury but she wanted liberty.

"Opulence with Independence," that was your slogan, my sweet," Mr. Panciera had told her friend. "I think it has a wonderfulness to it, a beautiful selfishness. With your egotism and mine we cannot fail."

Mr. Panciera knew his women, and he knew Jean. He asked her but she wasn't the marrying kind. He promised her wealth and luxury and complete independence. She liked the picture he presented. She saw in him, the sophisticate, the charming man of the world, the man she felt necessary for her luxurious future. She accepted his proposition.

Straightway, Mr. Panciera, using his inheritance and what he could borrow in addition, leased a four story building on Fifty-sixth Street, opened the "Jean Paul" appeared in golden lettering across the front. The beautiful dream had become an impossible reality.

Now, six months later, Mr. Panciera paced the living room on the fourth floor. Jean Paul was going and Jean too. He stopped at the window, looked out at the chill, drizzly day. Perhaps he should go also. The small pearl-handled revolver would send him quickly on his way. He always kept it loaded. That would be typical, of course. There were sleeping pills. Much easier, less common. Better the revolver, especially since it had such a pretty handle.

He turned back into the room, surveyed it. It was a smart but still a comfortable room. He had furnished it himself. He would miss it. Perhaps he should have been an interior decorator. That was a thought. Yes, he had a talent for that, more, perhaps, than for dress designing. He had several friends who were doing well at decorating. They seemed to be happy. Yes, it was an idea. He would look into it in the morning. The revolver, pearl-handled or not, was messy no matter how you looked at it.
